British and French transports passing each other on a road in the St. Quentin district. The British had not long been in this district, which they took over from the French, before the Germans started their attack.

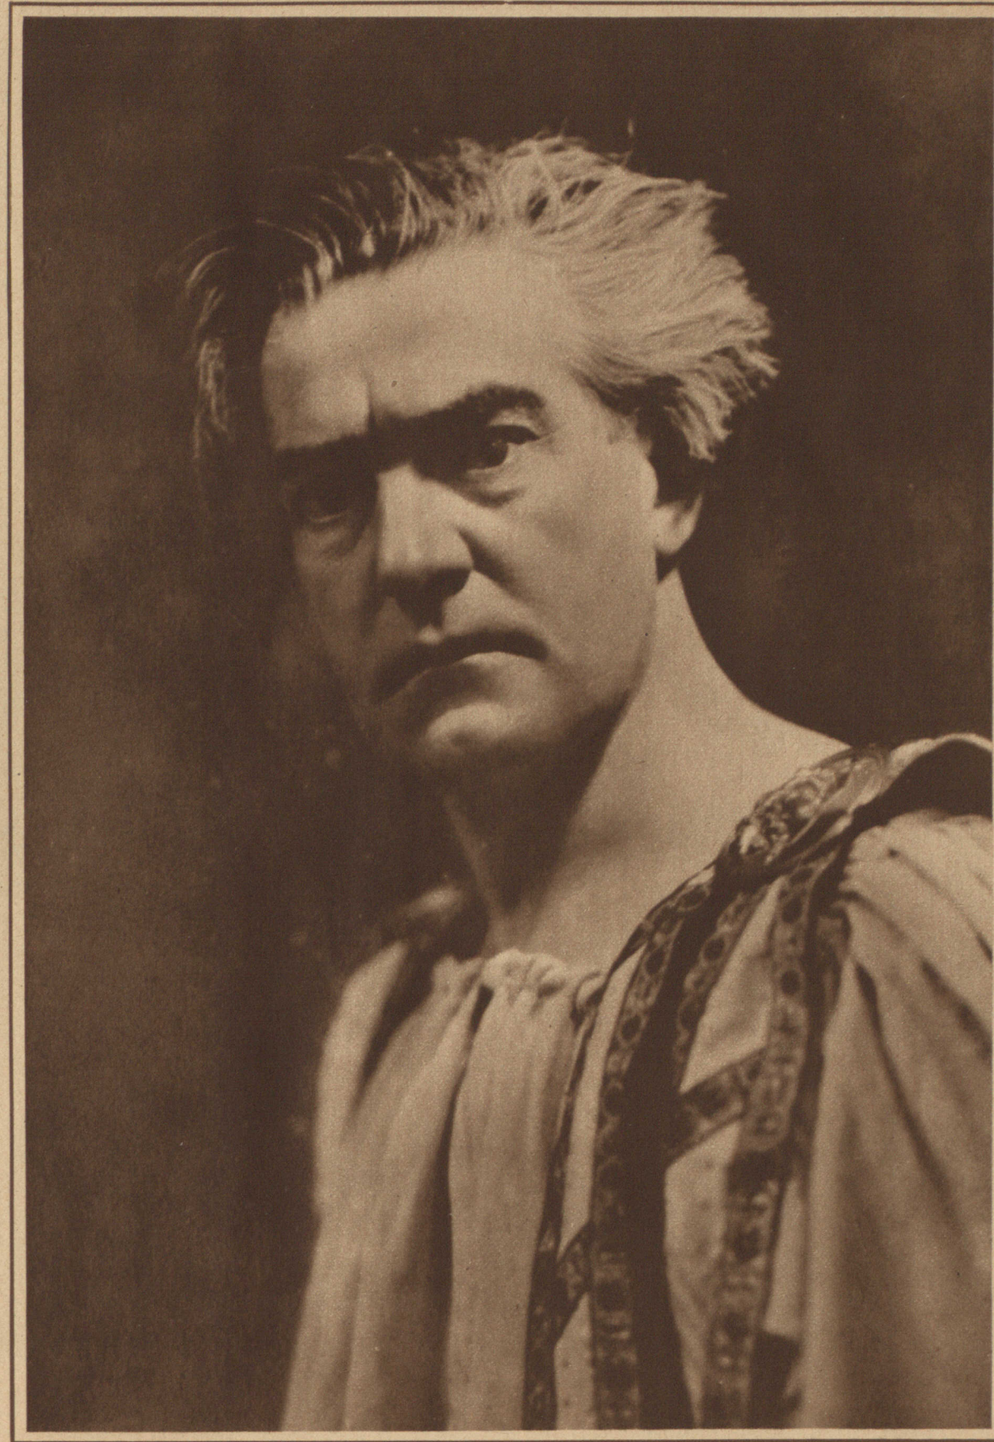
British Official, Underwood & Underwood.

British soldiers carrying a wounded comrade along a wooden footpath across flooded ground.

British Official, Underwood & Underwood.

A British regiment, headed by its band, passing through a village while the British were advancing to take up their position on ground formerly within the French army zone. French soldiers are watching them. They barely had time to take up this new position before the Germans began the present fierce attack.

British Official, Underwood & Underwood.



Tyrone Power as Brutus in "Julius Cæsar." Count J. de Strelecki.

Peggy Hopkins, who went from musical comedy to the movies, will come back to musical comedy in "The Gay Lothario." The book of this new production is by Frances Nordstrom and the music by Joseph McManus.