jesty, Mr. Pitt took the opportunity of representing to the king, that the circumstances and situation of public affairs imperiously required a strong comprehensive, and united administration; and he is reported to have declared, that, for this important purpose he was himself ready and desirous to obliterate all recollection of former differences: and that he was persuaded of the existence of a similar disposition in the part of all those other persons of rank, influence, and talent, who shared with him the confidence of the public. His representations on this subject, proved, unfortunately, ineffectual. The permission to communicate with Mr. Fox on the subject was peremptorily and finally refused.

Immediately after Mr. Pitt had left the king, it is said, he waited on lord Grenville, who in the most decided manner, expressed his determination not to except of any official station in a Cabinet from which Mr. Fox was proscribed. In the evening a meeting took place at lord Grenville's house, at which the marquis of Buckingham, lords Fitzwilliam, Carlisle, Spencer, Mr. T. Grenville, Mr. Windham, &c. &c. were present.—Mr. Fox was also there, and in the same generous and disinterested manner requested that no considerations of circumstances personal to himself should induce others to withhold their talents from the public service at a moment of such difficulty and danger. It was the unanimous feeling of all present, that they could not render any service to the country, on the principles on which it was intended to form it, and therefore resolved to decline any share whatever in the new administration. Their sentiments were communicated by letter to Mr. Pitt, who requested another interview of the king, for the purpose of making another exertion in favor of Mr. Fox's introduction into the cabinet. The impression upon the Royal mind was, however too deep to be erased, and Mr. Pitt withdrew from the conference on Wednesday, disappointed in that object although having himself accepted the offices of chancellor of the exchequer and first Lord of the treasury. On Thursday morning, as we have already stated, he was according to court etiquette, invested with the insignia and powers of these high situations.

Since Mr. Addington's administration could not last it was the fervent wish of all descriptions of men, that a new ministry should be formed on a grand and truly patriotic scale, comprising the most distinguished characters in the country. Nothing like an arrangement of that nature can now be expected by the public; and the nation instead of having a ministry calculated to reconcile all political differences, to infuse confidence, and to hold out to Europe an unparalleled instance of union, of ability and exertion in the various branches of the executive, are now to have an administration much worse than that which was forced to retire and make way for Mr. Addington and his friends. It is to be composed of Mr. Pitt, and lord Melville, of their underlings, and of several of the late cabinet, whom Mr. Pitt so very recently and so very cordially coalesced with Lord Greenville and Mr. Windham in reprobating. In these strange materials we can discover little to console us at a crisis like the present. It is, however, but justice to Mr. Pitt to state an opinion held in the best informed circles, that he did every thing in his power to form an administration which would have included Mr. Fox and all his principal friends, as well as Lord Greenville and all his; & that so far from pledging himself not to go into office with Mr. Fox, he had no communication however with him on that subject. Yet surely Mr. Pitt could not have been so ignorant that his Majesty would have decidedly objected to the introduction of Mr. Fox? Mr. Pitt, probably, knew, and possibly was not sorry to know before hand, that his application was not likely to be successful. He could not but be aware of the absurdity of presenting to his sovereign a man, as one of his confidential advisers, who had urged that sovereign to strike out of the list of Privy Counsellors, as an abettor of seditious doctrines! The application, however, was made and rejected. Mr. Pitt bowed, and undertook to form a new administration on a different basis.

LINES BY THOMAS MOORE.

Alone by the Schuylkil a wanderer rov'd
And bright were its flowery banks to his eye,
But far, very far were the friends that he lov'd,
And he gaz'd on its flowery banks with a sigh.

Oh nature! though blessed and bright are thy rays,
O'er the brow of creation enchantingly thrown;
How faint are they all to the lustre that plays
In a smile from the heart that is dearly our own.

Nor long did the soul of this stranger remain
Unblest by the smile he had languished to meet.
Ah! scarce did he hope it would bless him again,
Till the threshold of home had been kiss'd by his feet.

But the lays of his boy-hood had 'stol'n to his ear,
And they lov'd what they knew of so humble a name,
And they told him (with flattery welcome and dear)
That they found in his heart something dearer than fame.

Nor did woman—Oh woman! whose form and whole soul,
Are the spell and the light of each path we pursue,
Whether sunn'd in the tropic, or chill'd at the pole,
If woman be there, there is happiness too—

Nor did she her enamoring magic deny,
That magic his heart had relinquish'd so long,
Like eyes he had loved, was her eloquent eye,
Like them did it soften and weep at his song.

Oh! blest be the tear, and in memory oft
May its sparkle be shed over his wandring dream,
Oh! blest be that eye, and may passion as soft,
As free from a pang ever mellow its beam.

The stranger is gone—but he will not forget,
When at home he shall talk of the toils he has known,
To tell with a sigh what endearments he met
As he stray'd by the wave of the Schuylkill alone.

By order of the court of Calvert county, will be exposed to Public Sale the following lands, the property of the heirs of captain Walter Smith, deceased.

ON Monday the 20th day of August next, will be sold on the premises the plantation on which the said capt Walter Smith formerly resided, containing by actual survey, 1225 1-8 acres of land lying adjoining on Patuxent river, bounded on the south west by the said river, on the east by a fine navigable creek, called Saint Leonard's creek, so that one and a half miles of fencing will inclose the whole land—The soil of this land is equal if not superior to any on Patuxent, either for farming, planting or grazing, and in their season the greatest plenty of fine fish and oysters may be had either from the river or creek—A great part of the above land is covered with Red Cedar, fit for posts or fencing.

On Tuesday the 21st on the premises, will be sold one other plantation in the Forrest at about two miles distance from the former containing by survey 617 and one half acres of land, the greatest part of which is covered with hickory, chesnut and oak wood, and a great proportion of swamp land, which at a trifling expence might be converted into valuable meadow, belongs to this land.

On Thursday the 23d on the premises, will be sold one other plantation lying adjoining on Chesapeake Bay, bounded on the north east by the said bay, on the north by a creek called Parkers creek, containing by survey 536 1-2 acres of land, on this land there are a good proportion marsh and meadow land and a great abundance of fine timber.

It is thought needless to give a fuller description of the above lands, as it is presumed that those who wish to purchase will view the lands previous to the day of sale—and on application to Mr. John Turner who resides near the two first mentioned tracts; they may see the platts of the different tracts of land; and will shew the lands contiguous to him; and Mr. Richard Hance who resides on the last mentioned tract, will shew the outlines of the same to any person wishing to view it.

The above lands will be sold either in the whole, or be divided into parcels as may appear most advantageous for the heirs. The purchasers to give bonds with approved securities for the purchase money, to be paid in three annual payments, the interest to be paid yearly, and on the ratification of the sale by the court, and a full payment of the purchase money and interest thereon a deed of conveyance will be executed to the purchaser agreeably to an act of Assembly in such case made and provided, by

Dr. Jacob Hall, of Harford county, of known literary character, to whose inspection these Poems were submitted, in a letter to the author, expresses his opinion of them, as follows:

MADAM,

I have been honored and gratified with the perusal of your manuscript copy of Poems. In my opinion it is a work of considerable merit, and displays true piety and poetic genius. The pastoral dialogues are commendable for their novelty, simplicity and beauty. The elegies, epistles, and especially the "Man of Misfortune," a Moral Tale, are interesting and pathetic. The Odes and Fugitive Pieces are sprightly and amusing—And the whole composition seems to breathe such a spirit of philanthropy and benevolence as cannot fail to elevate the affections, and to mend the heart—And it is to be regretted, that the author's modesty has hitherto denied the community so refined & elegant an entertainment.
