there, should his cruisers in fact commit any such acts.

Can that officer think, that if his ships of war are not sufficiently numerous to shut up the extent of coast we possess, he has the right to punish, as they go out, such vessels of your nation as in entering have baffled his vigilance? And would not the slightest remonstrance from your government suffice to put a stop to such a proceeding? Not to speak of appeals to the tribunals of England, which public notoriety declares to have frequently, in preceding wars, annulled prizes made in a manner much less extraordinary.

The proceeding of commodore Samuel Hood towards you, appeared to me, sir, to require these observations, which I have thought it my duty to submit to your excellency, to enable you to do away, as far as in you lies, the motives of discouragement which have been held up to foreign merchants.

I have the honor to be, &c.

THE PARADE.

On Saturday last the First Legion of the MILITIA of the district of Columbia, commanded by Col. Brent, assembled on the ground between the President's house and the Potomac, and were reviewed by Brigadier Gen. Mason, in the presence of the President of the United States, the heads of department, and other officers of government.

The Legion, composed of one troop of horse, one company of artillery, one company of grenadiers, one company of light infantry, and eight companies of infantry, amounting in the whole to about 800, was formed about 11 o'clock in the morning. The whole body, with the exception of but a few privates, was in complete uniform, armed and properly equipped; and went through the evolutions and manoevres of the day, animated by the firing of artillery and martial music of the marine corps, with promptness and precision. The parade was attended by a great concourse of spectators, among whom was a large number of ladies, who, after the exercises were over, partook of a collation given by Col. Brent.

After the dismission of the Legion, Col. Brent, addressed the officers, and in terms appropriate, and impressive, enforced the importance of an energetic and well disciplined militia, inculcated the necessity of an unremitted attention to duty, and congratulated them on the great progress made in discipling the troops, evinced by the exercises of the day, stating that the President of the United States had expressed his high satisfaction at their good appearance and improvement.

As no spectacle is better calculated to awaken the honest pride of an American, devoted to our republican institutions, than that of the great body of the people displaying their legitimate energy, so none can give greater pleasure to the citizens of a territory, on which is devolved many duties on the efficient performance of which depend the safety and tranquility of the highest authorities of the nation. The whole union does not, perhaps, furnish an instance, in which, during a period of peace, so rapid a progress has been made in training and organizing the militia. The success of the experiment is at once honorable to the government, under whose auspices it has been conducted, and to the citizens who have aided it by a chearful performance of duty—The execution of the system has, we understand, developed some defects, an intimation of which will be made to Congress.

From the above it appears that the republican majority of Maryland, great as it was before, has increased.

At the last election for representatives to Congress, she elected five republican, and three federal members—This year she has elected six republican and three federal members.

Last year for the above counties, there were elected 44 republican and fourtern federal members; while this year, there are elected 46 republican and 12 federal members.

The House of Delegates of Maryland, consisting of 80 members, it follows, from the above return, that the republicans have already a majority of 12. There is no doubt that this majority will be considerably augmented by the remaining returns.

FROM THE BOSTON CHRONICLE, OF October 3.

SAMUEL ADAMS,

IS DEAD!

We have the mournful task to announce to the public, that on yesterday morning, about a quarter past seven o'clock, at his house in this town, DIED, in the 82d year of his age, SAMUEL ADAMS, late governor of this commonwealth, the consistent and inflexible patriot and republican.

To attempt, at this moment, even to sketch an outline of a character equally conspicuous for private virtue and public service, would betray a want of that information respecting the deceased, which time and profound reflection alone can justly describe. We shall now only observe, that he has been a prodigy of talents and industry; of which the lapse of ages will not produce a parallel.

In his useful career, his soul seemed occupied with but one sentiment, and that comprehended every circumstance which had any relation to the interests and independence of his native country, and the rights and liberty of the human race.

The foe of tyrants, in every form; the friend of virtue and her friend, he died beloved, as he had lived respected. Admiring posterity, penetrated by a just sense of his transcendant merits, will emphatically hail him as the undeviating friend of civil and religious liberty, and the Father of the American Revolution!

"Let virtuosi, with assiduous dread,
"Preserve from rust a medall'd Ceasar's head;
"Freemen will keep, with more industrious aim
"From slander's vile aspersion—HANCOCK'S fame,
"While sun and stars revolve with course sublime,
"ADAMS shall scorn th' all sweeping rage of time;
"His glorious toils in lifes perennial bloom,
"Till Nature's winter strip his laurell'd tomb."

A loan has been opened by the house of Hope and Co. De Smith and Willack, with the French Government, for 5 millions of dollars, to be paid for in American Louisiana stock.

Amsterdam paper.

The Portuguese have at length gained an advantage by sea over the Algerines. The Vosee de Gama, a Portuguese ship of the line, cruising before Algiers, was attacked by three large xebecs and a forty gun frigate, which formerly belonged to the Portuguese. The Algerines attacked with their usual fury and desperation, but the Portuguese captain made so good a defence, that after a fight, which lasted three hours, he sunk two of the xebecs, and captured the third, in which he had the happiness to find 200 prisoners, whom he set at liberty. The frigate, however, contrived to make her escape,
