ment, which his prematurely crabbed views have deserved, was powered either by wrong-headedness, or evil design; taking the ground, that a vehement and unceasing relief against a few of the most prominent features of that memorable general conduct during the present session, I conceive will be sufficient to enable the citizens of the U. S. to decide with propriety the all important question, Is the Federal Party, or the Democrat-Republican Party changed?—In this certain fact, or be a disingenuous declaimer, and a blind accuser, on unfounded Fears.

I will now proceed to state the facts which I premised—by which the citizens (for I, as I said, be presumed will) will be prepared, that in two very important cases, he has been the principal of the deep laid, and greatly embarrassing the Executive, whereby considerable much more will be, and the influence of his and their clerks materially lessened, by being unjustly kept out of their salaries for a considerable time (for some months).

1st. Congress by the secret journal lately published, (and which was published on the 6th of December last, was communicated to a committee of which he was the chairman) Virginia, was which (notwithstanding the verbal Resolution of the Senate, to the power of Congress, which rendered it a nullity) was sent to the Senate, and should act immediately upon the important subjects contained in the message, which (which was sent on the 6th of December, notwithstanding the urgency of the occasion) of the 12th, no person was made by the committee until the 19th of January, (to do or do speak—for the truth of this reporting I appeal to the members of the House) which was published, and he embarrassingly a bill predicated on the aforementioned message, which the passage principally from the chair, the other committee, who I am fully persuaded, (and I hope) will at the first conveniens of the whole time of the session, (which, I, as I said, when mentioned its passage was delayed) the 12th of January, (mark the time) the 12th of January, 1810, a period of a month and a fortnight, and so with those of soldiers for a similar purpose was sent, and which,
