CHARLOTTESVILLE, (Vir.)

March 6th, 1801.

Mr. Smith,

By giving the following a place in your paper you will oblige a ſubſcriber.

Every friend to the rights of man, muſt rejoice at the iſſue of the late election. An event which has aſcertained the triumph of republicaniſm in the United States, and the pleaſure which a ſenſe of public happineſs inſpires, is hightened not a little with thoſe, whoſe individual feelings and perſonal attachments have been gratified by the ſame propitious event: Of this number are the people of Charlottesville and its vicinity. The election of Thomas Jefferſon, they have felt perhaps more exquiſitely than their republican brethren in any quarter of the Union, for while they rejoiced with them upon the great national ſcale, they could not but remember, that the "Man of the People" was alſo their beloved friend and neighbour. The account of the election reached this place on Monday the 23d ultimo; it was immediately announced by a diſcharge of cannon; a numerous body of Citizens collected at the ſound, the Town was highly illuminated; and the firing continued till the night was far advanced.

On the 27th we had a ſplendid ball; and on the 4th inſt. the inauguration of the Preſident and Vice-Preſident was celebrated by a Dinner at the Eagle Tavern, prepared in a handſome ſtyle; and attended by nearly forty gentſemen of the firſt reſpectability: In the courſe of the evening the following toaſts were given.

1ſt. The new order of things. May it produce harmony and union among the people of the United States. 6 cheers.

2d. Thomas Jefferſon, Preſident of the United States of America, author of the declaration of Independence. The people's wiſh, may he always execute the people's will. 6 cheers.

3d. Aaron Burr, Vice Preſident, who nobly diſdained to ſacrifice the wiſhes of the people at the ſhrine of ambition. 6 cheers.

4th. The rights of the people. May they never be infringed with impunity. 6 cheers.

5th. The Leaven of Republicaniſm. May it always poſſeſs ſufficient energy to produce good out of evil. 6 cheers.

6th. The downfall of Ariſtocracy in America. Let its ſupporters in Europe reform or tremble. 6 cheers.

7th. Republican Science, which teaches the folly and danger of raiſing particular breeds of men for the ſole purpoſe of governing. 6 cheers.

8th. The memory of Benjamin Franklin, Eripuit celo fulmen, Sceptrumque Tyrannis. 6 cheers.

9th. The memory of David Rittenhouſe, who if he never made a world, has approached nearer to its Creator, than any other man." 6 cheers.

10th. The memory of George Waſhington; his moſt durable Mauſoleum is in the hearts of his countrymen. 6 cheers.

11th. La Fayette, Citizen of Virginia, Benefactor of America. "For a Nation to love Liberty, it is ſufficient that ſhe knows it, and to be free, it is ſufficient, that ſhe wills it." 6 cheers.

12th. The memory of Benjamin F. Bache; he fell a Martyr to his zeal for the rights of the people. 6 cheers.

13th. Thomas Paine, "Common ſenſe and the Rights of Man." 6 cheers.

14th The Republican printers; may their preſſes ſqueeze harder than their oppreſſors. 6 cheers.

15th. The People of all Countries; may they underſtand their rights, cling together, and be able to defend them. 6 cheers.

16th. The Federal Paradox, which obſcures by illuminations, detection to its Authors. 6 cheers.

By E. Garfett. The memory of Geo. Nicholas, as a man and as a patriot.—Equalled by few, ſurpaſſed by none. 6 cheers.

By E. Garland. Thomas Davis of Kentucky—The friend of the people. 6 cheers.

Upper Marlboro, March 3, 1801.

On Saturday the 28 Feb. a number of republican citizens of Prince George County aſſembled at the houſe of Mr. Dougherty in BLADENSBURG, to congratulate each other on the happy events ſo propitious to the cauſe of liberty and republican government, which have lately taken place in this county. After a plentiful and elegant dinner the following toaſts (the offſpring of the moment) were drank; and the evening was paſſed in ſocial Feſtivity, and heartfelt happineſs, heightened by the recollection of the dangers from which America has been ſo recently liberated.

1. The people—May their rights be ever ſacred.

2. The United States of America—"Small things grow great by concord."

3. THOMAS JEFFERSON—May his adminiſtration prove to the world that "republican government means ſomething."

4. AARON BURR—"Whoſe views would be diſhonored by being made the inſtrument to diſappoint to the wiſhes of his country."

5. The memory of GEORGE WASHINGTON—Who twice reſigned the place of power.

6. The Agriculture, Commerce, and Manufactures of the United States.

7. Our ſiſter republic's throughout the world.

8. The liberty of the preſs—May no future Sedition law or American Jeffries hold it in durance vile.

9. The 4th July '76, and 17th February 1801. The great æras of American liberty.

10. The Militia—"Equal to every military exigency of the United States."

11. The members of Congreſs who put a blank ticket—May they ever draw blanks in the lottery of Fame.

12. The republican electors of Preſident and Vice Preſident. And thoſe who elected them—May the benefits they anticipated be realized.

13. PEACE throughout the world.

14. The armed neutrality of the north of Europe—May it become a ſcourge to the tyrants of the main.

15. The American Fair—May their ſmiles reward the friends of liberty.

16. Heads of departments—Such as they ought to be, not ſuch as they are.

Gettisburgh, Adams County, Pennſylvania.
March 4th, 1801.

The joyful event of the election of Mr. Jefferſon as Preſident of the United States, was on this day celebrated with unuſual harmony at Col. Getty's Inn.

After chooſing a chairman and ſecretary, the buſineſs of the meeting was then opened by the following addreſs.—Doctor William Crawford addreſſed the Chairman as follows:

Mr. Chairman,

To thoſe a little converſant in the hiſtory of human revolution, the late frequent mutations of the public mind amongſt ourſelves will afford leſs matter for aſtoniſhment than for painful regret.—We might have calculated that attempts would be made upon our liberties; but we could not contemplate that a few ſhort years ſhould have ſo far effaced the memory, and changed the temper of 1776, as to encourage any band ſufficiently numerous to collect and diſcipline themſelves, who by arming the defects of our conſtitution againſt its principles, have been ſo near ſucceeding in blaſting in the bud the faireſt proſpects ever offered of human felicity—in converting the laſt ſpot, on which human miſery might find a refuge, into a priſon-houſe.—Happily for us, our extenſive country, our ſcattered population gave us time to pauſe.—On the brink of gaping ruin Conſideration, like an angel, came, and arreſted our headlong footſteps on the point of taking the awful plunge. The independence, which every thing around us beſpeaks, has infuſed a portion of her ſpirit, and will preſerve a ſpot on which liberty ſhall reſt her wearied foot, in the midſt of that deluge of deſpotiſm which threatens to overwhelm the ſurrounding nations.

But though we breathe from the unſtrung ſinews of power, we muſt not yet reſt from our labors.—On our unwearied exertion alone we muſt depend; the leader we have choſen to conduct us is human and may err; is mortal and may be ſnatched from us.—The ſame principles which decided our choice muſt continue to direct our exertions.—An awakened jealouſy will not permit us to place implicit confidence in any character, however pure or however exalted.

Empty declaimers in purſuit of popularity, whoſe aim is to miſlead; unprincipled ſophiſts in ſearch of power, whoſe wiſh is to deceive, would ſuggeſt that the whole of our late exertions was merely a ſtruggle for power, and that little change of conduct need be expected, the principle of action continuing the ſame.—But whatever may have been the motives which governed the conduct of individuals, thoſe which influenced the public mind afford deciſive proof that the meaſures lately purſued did not appear to them to be ſupported by reaſon or ſanctioned by principle; and that they expect a change of conduct from a change of men.—For if no change enſues, what is it to us whether an Adams or a Jefferſon adminiſter the powers of our government?—Whether authority was abuſed by a George Guelph or a George Waſhington? by a Caracalla or an Antonine?

But we will not without cauſe ſuſpect the man of our choice.—We augur more juſtly of the virtues of a Jefferſon.—Perhaps he is at this moment ſolemnly appealing to the Searcher of hearts that he will be faithful to the truſt we have depoſited with him.—Let us credit the ſolemn profeſſion, and let it remind us that we alſo have correſpondent duties to perform, and that without our cordial co-operation no human being is equal to the reſponſibility required.

Let us then in a ſincere but reſpectful manner communicate our expectations. Let us ſhew the world that we are not ſo far dazzled by the ſplendor of office, or overawed by its power, as to forget the reſpect due to ourſelves.—Let us avoid thoſe vain forms, which fetter the freeborn mind, and which would level the leader of a free people with the vile herd of common rulers, who have diſgraced at the ſame time that they have deſtroyed their ſpecies.

The company conſiſting of about 40 gentlemen (chiefly farmers and farmers ſons) then ſat down to an elegant dinner, provided for that purpoſe. Judge Agnew was appointed preſident, and Judge Gilliland vice-preſident of the meeting, when the following toaſts were drank amidſt ſhouts of joy, and accompanied with muſic awakening and keeping alive the finer feelings of the heart.

1. The ſovereignty of the people—Before whom conſtitutions bow and kings begin to tremble.

Six rounds, ſix cheers, Muſic, Preſide to happineſs.

2. THOMAS JEFFERSON, Preſident of the United States—May the principles of the 4th of July 1776, regulate the conduct of the 4th of March 1801.

Six rounds, ſix cheers, muſic Preſident's March.

3. AARON BURR, Vice preſident of the United States—The tried and undaunted friend of his country. His letter to Mr. Smith an early pledge that our confidence was not miſplaced.

Three rounds, three cheers, Ca Ira.

4. John Adams. To the right about face—A leſſon to all future preſidents, that an honeſt man may be duped by bad miniſters.

One gun, three cheers—Marſeilles Hymn.

11. The republican printers throughout the United States.

One gun, three cheers——Porcupine's Retreat.

12. Innovation—The only true baſis of republicaniſm, any ſaying of our late preſident to the contray notwithſtanding.

One gun, three cheers—Muſic improved

13. America—May ſhe prove an aſylum to the oppreſſed of all nations—may diſcord be baniſhed from her ſhores, and may ſhe till the end of time remain happy, great and free.

One gun, three cheers—Muſic, America, commerce and freedom.

14. The American Fair—May they foſter with their milk, averſion to tyrants in their offſpring, and teach the young idea how to ſhoot its aſpiring branches to heaven in ſearch of that liberty which the earth has hitherto denied them.

Six cheers—Soft muſic.

15. The 36th Ballot—35 times were the wiſhes of the people oppoſed, and common ſenſe inſulted—May the intrigues of the expiring faction in their laſt ſtruggle to uſurp the government, ſpeedily be brought to light.

One gun, three cheers—Martial muſic.

16. A happy reconciliation to all the well wiſhers of their country.

One gun, three cheers—Rural felicity.
