

Middlesex, England. He married about 1622; name of wife at present unknown, and, according to the Record, "John and Mary, sonne and daughter of Thomas Page, of Sudbury, were baptized at Harrow, 26 Dec., 1628."

V. JOHN PAGE, son (probably second son) of the above-named Thomas Page, of Sudbury, County Middlesex, England, seventh of Richard, second of John, first of Henry Page, of Wembley, County Middlesex, England, all of the Parish of Harrow, was born at the first-named place in A. D. 1627. He emigrated to America about 1650, and became the progenitor of the Page family in Virginia.

Mr. Tucker writes, 16th March, 1880: "You quite understand that much more could be ascertained as to the pedigree, if you cared to incur the expense."

Should any one ever desire to pursue the matter further, the most important step, perhaps, would be to obtain an official and complete list of the wills in Somerset House from 1500 to 1650, with such extracts as may have any bearing on the case. This is best done through the College of Heraldry, London, and would cost about £25.

Other points could doubtless be cleared up, one after another, but it costs much money without any certainty of success in obtaining the desired information. It also takes much time.

For an account of the family of Sir Gregory Page, Baronet of Greenwich, County Kent, who was the father of Sir Gregory Page, the last Baronet of Wrinklemarsh, County Kent, whose fortune was inherited by his great-nephew, Sir Gregory Page Turner; also the family of Major-Gen. Sir John Page; also of Sir Thomas Hyde Page, whose arms are quartered with those of Page, of Middlesex, and others, see Burke's Extinct and Dormant Baronetcies; Burke's General Armoury, etc.

The arms of all these Page families bear a resemblance to each other, and doubtless they were all descended from the same ancestor. The origin of the name of Page, as a family cognomen, may be found in Rymer's Foedera (Acts of the Kings of England) in 41st Henry III., A. D. 1257, when it appears that Hugo de Pageham, of Ebor (York), was a bearer of dispatches from Edward, King of England, to the King of Spain, and thus being Letter Bearer, or Page, he became known as Hugo Page de Pageham.
