

ginia, whose daughter Lucy was his second wife, Major Carter Page probably spent his money freely in the Revolutionary cause, and like them (but unlike Washington), kept no account of it. Consequently, it was impossible for Congress to reimburse him.

In regard to the Cary family, it may be said that COL. MILES CARY, the first of his family in Virginia, was the son of John Cary, of Bristol, England, whose younger brother, James Cary, emigrated to New England.

The said Col. Miles Cary was born in Bristol, England, A. D. 1620, and emigrated to Warwick County, Virginia, in 1640. He died there in 1677. He was the Royal Naval Officer for James River, and was a member of the Colonial Council, under Berkeley. He was a lineal descendant of Henry Cary, Lord Hunsdon, and was, at the time of his death, the heir apparent of the barony.

He married Ann, daughter of Captain Thomas Taylor, and by her had four sons. Of these only two are known to the writer at present, viz:

1. Col. Miles Cary, Jr., probably the eldest, married Mary, daughter of Col. William Wilson, of Hampton, Virginia.
2. Henry Cary, probably one of the younger sons—the father of Col. Archibald Cary of Amptill, Chesterfield County, Virginia.

Col. Miles Cary, Jr., and Mary Wilson, his wife, had an only surviving married son, viz: COL. WILSON CARY, who was the grandfather of WILSON JEFFERSON CARY, of Carysbrooke, Fluvanna County, Virginia. The latter married, in 1805, Virginia Randolph, and was the ancestor of the Carys of Baltimore, Maryland. (See THOMAS MANN RANDOLPH, of Tuckahoe.)

Mary Cary (called "Polly"), the first wife of Major Carter Page, was the youngest child of Col. Archibald Cary, of Amptill, Chesterfield County, Virginia, and Mary Randolph, his wife, who was the daughter of Richard Randolph, of Curl's Neck, on James River, Henrico County, Virginia, and Jane Bolling, his wife. The latter was fourth in descent from Pocahontas, as follows: John Rolfe married Pocahontas in 1616; Thomas Rolfe, their son, married Miss Poythress; Jane Rolfe, their daughter, married Robert Bolling; John Bolling, their son, married Mary Kennon; and Jane Bolling, their daughter, married Richard Randolph. Pocahontas died at Gravesend, England, and is said to have been buried in the northwest corner of the churchyard there.

Col. Archibald Cary was born 24th January, 1720, and died in September, 1786, aged 66 years. He was a sterling patriot of the Revolution, and was a
