

---

vent in delivery. He was a faithful pastor and enjoyed in a high degree the confidence and admiration of his people. By birth, association and principle, Dr. Lewis was a gentleman. His christian character was exalted, spotless, mighty for good."

"A mind naturally strong and clear, thoroughly trained, enabled him to grapple with and apprehend thoroughly the most difficult theological questions; a memory stored with the rich treasures of ancient and modern learning—a glowing imagination that clothed even the driest subjects with beautiful and charming imagery, a courage that never hesitated in the discharge of duty—a heart peculiarly sympathetic, and ever affected by the sorrows of suffering humanity, were all fully and entirely consecrated to the promotion of the cause and extension of the kingdom of Christ upon earth."