<sup>1</sup> "I remember Uncle Stephen as a tall, good-looking gentlemanly man, with iron gray hair, and little twinkling black eyes. He was exceedingly witty, agreeable and entertaining; an 'old line whig,' and very much interested in politics. During his last illness, which was painful and severe, he took great pleasure in having his friends call and talk over the prospects of his party, and speculate upon the results of the election. He died in 1840, while the election of Gen. Harrison was pending."—Letter from Mrs. Ellen P. Champion, March 5, 1869.

Mr. Boardman resided in the house now occupied by Hon. Wm. B. Small, an ex-congressman, in Newmarket village.
