

father of Robert Dudley, the Earl of Leicester. Leicester House, the London residence of Robt. Dudley, Earl of Leicester, stood adjoining to St. Dunstan's, in the West, near to Temple Bar, on the Westminster side. It was after Leicester's time called Essex House.

Sir Robert Rich, who was knighted at St. Dunstan's, June 29, 1619, was the future Earl of Warwick, and Admiral for the Long Parliament. He died in 1658. His mother had our Gov. Simon Bradstreet for her steward in 1628. John Windsor, brother to Anne, wife of Edmund Dudley, married Anne, dau. of Roger Fines, son of Thos. Fines, Lord Dacre. This John Windsor was of the Middle Temple, and so was Edmund Dudley, about 1500. They were afterwards close friends, and their children and grand children continued the intimacy.

Sir Thomas Fines, Lord Dacre, about 1495, married Jane, daughter of Edward Dudley, the Paron. The Dacres afterwards lived at St. Dunstan's.

Thomas Fines, Lord Dacre, died at St. Dunstan's, 1566. His wife was Frances, dau. of Sir John Radcliffe, of Derwentwater. This Sir John Radcliffe's wife was Alice Dudley, sister to John Dudley, Esq., of Stoke Newington. Anne Windsor, niece of Edmund Dudley's wife, married Roger Corbett, of Morton, County of Salop. Her brother, Thomas Windsor, had a daughter Anne, who married John Purefoy, of Shalston, at St. Dunstan's. This John Purefoy was uncle to Judge Nicolls, that is, brother to his father-in-law, Richard Purefoy. Anne, wife of John Purefoy, was sister to Miles Windsor, the poet and orator of 1566.

At St. Dunstan's, in the West of London, Albany Featherstone, in 1573, married Lucy Dudley, sister of John Dudley, of Stoke Newington. Cuthbert Featherstone, of Stanhope, Co. Durham, gent., died in Chancery Lane, 10th Dec., 1615, aged 78. Ralph Featherstone, gent., of Chancery Lane, was buried there in 1631.

Richard Harlakenden, lord of the manor of Earl's Colne, in Essex, married Margaret Hubbard in 1592. It was his son, Roger, that purchased Gov. Dudley's estate at Cambridge, Mass., about 1635. Elizabeth, daughter of Mr. Thomas Gorges, there married the Marquis of Northampton, June 4, 1578, who was a great friend to the Dudleys. Theophilus Higgons, preacher, was there in 1607, and his son, Wm., was baptized Sept. 27th, at Mr. Dudley's, near Temple Bar.

At St. Dunstan's, "Jan. 17, 1604, Wm. Corbett was baptized out of Mr. Dudley's house." There were two Roger Corbetts of noted families connected with these above-mentioned Windsors. The first Roger Corbett married Anne Winsor, niece of Edmund Dudley's
