This now makes a uniform set of twelve volumes of reports of bankruptcy decisions from the time the law first went into operation, June 1, 1867, down to the present time, and which are still continuing, as volume thirteen, in the serial form. These valuable reports contain, also, a table of cases cited as well as those reported, and, as the cited cases are often from the decisions under the various former laws of the States, as well as under the former National Bankrupt Laws of 1800 and 1841, they are valuable, as showing a system of comparative jurisprudence relating to the several independent law-making sources and influences from which they are derived and upon which they are founded. This will render the NATIONAL BANKRUPTCY REGISTER REPORTS of permanent value wherever an insolvent bankrupt law is in operation, whether it be State or national; for, so long as there is any law of this nature, it must be founded upon principles that are similar in many respects to our present law, or those laws which have been in existence in many of the States heretofore.
