During a series of industrious years we have written and placed before the business world descriptions of hundreds of wholesale houses in this city and vicinity, and never have our statements been called in question by parties concerned, whether buyers or sellers. By a rigid adherence to truth, our statements have acquired weight and influence with the trade; and we intend to continue in the straight path we long since marked out; and by fairly earning the confidence of wholesale merchants and manufacturers, we rely upon receiving, as heretofore, a share of that respect which true men ever pay to an honest, industrious, and independent press.

The typographical neatness, simplicity, and good taste of the NEW YORK TRADE JOURNAL commend it to all its readers, and will continue to add to its influence as a medium to further the interests of trade and manufactures. Established as a strictly business paper of high tone, the editorial columns of this journal will never compromise its character nor render it second to any in point of morality, veracity, good temper, or good breeding.
