a counselor. In 1804 he was made a sergeant-at-law. He married a sister of Governor Bloomfield, was admitted to the New York Bar, and took up his residence in New York.

In 1788 he moved to Bridgeton and resided there the remainder of his life. The year after he arrived in Bridgeton, he was appointed clerk of Cumberland County, an office he held for fifteen years, practicing law at the same time.

The residence later served as the home of Reverend S. Beach Jones, Colonel William E. Potter, Captain Lehman Garrison, and now for Mr. J. Cleves Diament and family.
