Structure Gaines-McGowan House (TEX-267)

Dismantled for preservation. Log, one story, gable roof, dog trot plan, with roof extending over rear lean-to and recessed six-post front entrance porch. Built 1820 at the strategic crossing of the Sabine River and El Camino Real. The crossing was known as Gaines Ferry, later as Pendleton's Ferry. Before the site was submerged by the Toledo Bend Reservoir, the house was disassembled for preservation, but it has not been reconstructed. 1 ext. photo (1936); 1 data page (1936).
