

THE CARRIER PIGEONS CARRY ON

Chow time is always a welcome time to these feathered aviators. They work hard and have corresponding appetites.

British Official, Underwood & Underwood.

Reserve forces behind the lines in France. Reserves are very important. The other day an officer had a whole crate of pigeons made into a pie. He didn't know they were aviators.

British Official, Western News Union.

Yes, we admit that we're still under draft age, but they can't keep us at home much longer.

British Official, Underwood & Underwood.

This shows how the message is fastened on to the pigeon's foot.

British Official Photograph.

We may have a lot yet to learn, but we're here for just one thing—to make the world safe for democracy.

British Official, Underwood & Underwood.

The birds travel from post to post in airy and commodious Pullmans—of the type here represented

British Official, Underwood & Underwood.

Or else they are transported in a private car. This shows a pigeon express in the Swiss army.

© Underwood & Underwood.