INTRODUCTION.

Truth is the mother of history, but familiar things in the present of ordinary lives will be lost for the future unless some record is made. Love and reverence often pigeonholes some recollection of a respected ancestor, and the remembrance clings to the mind in a kind of outline sketch, with neither dates, localities nor the surroundings which complete the picture.

In my genealogical work I have striven for facts and fought traditions, but these are foundations on which to build, and this is what I am doing here: seeking to prove the truth. Tradition is a clue to be worked away from, not to rest on; a start, not a finish.

My dear father was born in East Haddam, Conn., on March 29, 1807. He was named after his mother's father, whom he always respected and revered. He was the third son, and though ardently attached to parents and home, yet he was the first to leave and look for a larger field. He came on one of his father's vessels at seventeen to New York City, and remained here until he died, December 30, 1894. He soon got a clerkship and before he was twenty was in business for himself. He brought all of his five brothers and started them in business and placed his only sister in a private boarding school here.

He had two brothers in his business. They owned the Anchor Line of vessels between this port and Mobile, Alabama.

My father just remembered his father's father. His father was born in 1765 and remembered when his father was in the service. Father loved to hear the reminiscences of the war, but his mother's father was living until September 23, 1832, and his war tales were at first hand; but after I was born and began to be interested there was little except bringing back the fever from camp, escaping from Long Island, and the fact that he had seen, while in the army, the spring which came up through a rock running down the sides. Here was something they had both seen. It was High Rock Spring at Saratoga, and this fixed the place; but if he told the regiment or officers these made no impression, and were not told to me; but father tried to have him apply for a pension and had Judge Bulkeley come and talk it over, but he was an old man and it was so long ago, he was unable to recall his officers' names. He probably had not seen those who served with him in years; he became confused, and the longer they talked the greater the confusion and they finally gave it up.

My father was sure he had seen High Rock Spring at Saratoga, but never remembered—perhaps never knew—with whom he had gone there; but it was during the war.

When I began to hear these tales, I began to investigate, but it is only recently that people generally know or care about Revolutionary and Colonial days—and my work began long ago.

My father found the incident at White Plains of Capt. James Green, and I said then, he was not there. "Well," he said, "that is the incident and it must be he." Sure enough, later I found indisputable evidence he was there.

My grandmother told me of her father's return from the army and their flight from Long Island to Chester. It was long after her death that I found the officers, and many years after when I found a list of the men in the ranks, but to my chagrin the name of William Webb was not there. It was one of the bitterest disappointments of my life. My father was then alive, and I had said to him: "If ever I find the muster rolls of the Southold men I shall surely find your mother's father's name."

I took it so to heart, that he said, "Well, he was in the Revolution, for he told me so; he was in some other regiment."

That satisfied him, but did not satisfy me, so I went to the library, got down the book and studied it again. These muster rolls were said to be in the possession of William S. Pelletreau. I sat down and wrote to him. This was twenty-odd years ago and he then lived in West Fourteenth Street, New York. I told him what I had searched for, and when I found the list the name was not there.

He answered:

"252 West 14th St., N. Y., June 4, 1891.

"Richard H. Greene, Esq.

"Dear Sir: Your letter of inquiry concerning the "Revolutionary service of your grandfather, Wm. Webb,
"was forwarded to me from Southampton. Please "excuse delay.

"I find the name of William Webb in a list of Lieut.
"Joshua Youngs' Company, drafted out to Col. Thomas
"Terry's Regiment and mustered into Col. Josiah
"Smith's Regiment, August 5, 1776. He is described "as 5 feet 7 inches high, dark complexion and 33 years "old. . . .

"Very truly,

"WM. S. PELLETREAU."

I went down and there was the roll of the Eighth Company, and among others, otherwise exactly as it was printed, was William Webb in place of William Rogers, in the same place as the printed list. I asked to have it photographed and when I could not get that, I asked to get the loan that I might have it photographed. Then Pelletreau said he had sent it over to Long Island and later told me it was lost. It was the muster roll of August 5, 1776. Here it follows, just in this form:

"Name	Stature	plec-	tion	Age	Compleat

"22 men.

"Lieut. Joshua Youngs' Company mustrd as above.

"Pr. Thomas Terry, Coll."

Until I saw that, my information was tradition, both as to his service at Long Island and again at Saratoga. I can make my affidavit as to William Webb's name being on the muster roll, and I am looking for more proof as to Cook's regiment at Saratoga, for I know he was not in my grandfather's troop; for then it would surely have been remembered. This was the only Light Horse which went with Wolcott to Gates' army at Saratoga; Capt. James Green's troop of 2d Conn. Light Horse.

There were eight companies of Col. Latimer's regiment printed in "Connecticut in the Revolution," at pages 504 to 509, but only one of Col. Cooke's, on page 511, moreover, the field and staff are omitted, and but few of the officers are mentioned at all.

CHAPTER I.

WM. WEBB OF SOUTHOLD, THE BATTLE OF LONG ISLAND.

William Webb was born at Southold, L. I., September 19, 1746. They spoke of this settlement as Sterling, now it is Greenport, Suffolk County.

In that county there were three militia regiments before the war. That was the only patriot county on Long Island. The Third Regiment, Col. Thomas Terry, at the extreme east end, made preparations in February, March, May and July, 1776, for organizing a regiment to be drafted from the militia for actual service in the war.

June 7.—The New York Congress orders 3,000 militia to re-enforce the army at New York. The quota of Suffolk County was 200, which county was to have the lieutenant-colonel, three captains, two first lieutenants and two second lieutenants, while Westchester was to have the colonel, and Orange County the major. This order was never carried out. Meanwhile Suffolk County was continuing to organize its own regiment.

The Southold company in this Third Regiment was as follows: Jonathan Bayley, captain; Joshua Youngs, first lieutenant; John Tuthill, second lieutenant; James Reeves, ensign; Joshua Salmon, Benjamin King, Peter Griffin, Benjamin Paine, sergeants; Jonathan Wills, David Wiggins, Lester Beebe, Jonathan Salmon, corporals; Ezekiel Glover, drummer; James Gardiner, fifer; John Youngs, clerk; Daniel Brown, James Brown, David Terry, Jonathan Vail, John King, Jonathan King, Joseph Youngs, Prosper Booth, William Wiggins, William Rogers, James Horton, Thomas Hemsted, Benjamin Vail, Jr., Elisha Vail, Aaron Overton, Benjamin Horton, Nathaniel Dickerman, Richard Drake, Thomas Conklin, Joseph Glover, Thomas Prince, Elijah Terry, Jr., Jno. Goldsmith, Calvin Horton and James Tuthill, Jr.—36 men.

In Mather's "Refugees," page 1,000, John Robert appears as first lieutenant; Isaac Hicks, second lieutenant; Beasley, King and Cornwell, sergeants; Rackett, Laury and Smith, corporals.

On page 997 of same, and in "New York in the Revolution," page 172, these names are added: Jonathan Demmon, John Havens, David Horton, James Horton, Jeremiah King, Samuel Newbury, Noah Rackett, Joshua Salmon, Amos Taber, Frederick Tabor, Thomas Terry, David Truman, Jonathan Truman, Christopher Tuthill, David Tuthill, Daniel Vail, Thomas Vail—23, making 59 privates.

These men were probably all in the Eighth Company of Terry's regiment, but on August 5, Joshua Youngs' company is mustered with one officer and 22 men, as follows: Jere. King, sergeant; Absalom Rackett, corporal; Jonathan Dimon, Jonathan Vail, Lester Beebe, John King, Christopher Tuthill, David Truman, Amos Tabor, Frederick Tabor, Jonathan Truman, David Tuthill, Noah Racket, Samuel Newberry, William Wiggins, John Youngs, Daniel Vail, Jonathan Conklin, William Rogers, Thomas Vail, Daniel Brown and John Havens. The other list I saw was the same with Webb instead of Rogers. In this final list there is only one name which does not appear in either of the foregoing and that is Jonathan Conklin. Mather seems to doubt because he was a man over fifty. Webb was not in Terry's regiment, and was not yet 30 years old.

These various lists show that changes occurred. Moreover, the manuscript list I saw of this company agreed in every name except that William Webb was there in place of William Rogers; the latter was in Terry's regiment and Webb was not. He probably expected to go but he was a very much older man and Webb may have gone in his place. There were two of the same name who went to Connecticut, one to Saybrook, the other to Guilford. He may have gone into H. B. Livingston's regiment, which was ordered to gather the men of Josiah Smith into his regiment. He soon crossed to Saybrook and may have taken Rogers with him. I do not think he was in a New York or Westchester regiment, and the Ninth Regiment of Connecticut was in the western part of the State; a man resident at Guilford might be in that, not Saybrook.

This family was large and there were many Williams. Others seem to have been unable to locate this Southold man either on Long Island or in Connecticut. Of one thing I am satisfied: William Webb took his place in the Southold company.

May 30, at Mareches patten, the Eighth Company had 4 officers, 8 non-commissioned officers, 2 musicians, 35 privates; total, 49. Shortly after the number was, privates 27, total 41.

Webb may have been looking for a bounty, but while not in the militia he was determined to go to the war.

On the 10th of August he was with the Southampton company, as appears in Zephaniah Rogers' report below.

Josiah Smith and his regiment did not march for the army until August 14th. There seems to have been constant changes up to the time of the start of the regiment.

Here is the report of Capt. Rogers, of Southampton, a near neighbor of Southold:

"A Return of the extraordinary musterings of the "Company of Minute Men of Southampton accord"ing to the Regulations of Provincial Congress of "New York, and they are Dr. as follows:

"Zephaniah Rogers, Capt.

"Daniel Howell, Chairman."

Field says: "Suffolk County, out of the total population, between the ages of 16 and 60, only 236 were reckoned of Loyalist proclivities. The enrolled militia exceeded 2,000, of whom 393 were in the ranks of Smith's regiment, the best drilled and armed on Long Island. It was the only one which could be considered to have survived the shock of August 27, and only a small part of even this regiment ever did service after that day."

The Southold company, as we have seen, had one officer, Lieut. Joshua Youngs; the captain, second lieutenant and ensign are missing, the sergeants named before do not appear, and a new name, Jere. King, is the only sergeant. None of the corporals are present, and Absalom Racket is appointed; the 35 privates of May 30, and June 27, become 20 in August.

This regiment was in General Nixon's brigade, formerly General Greene's, and with them were brigaded Nixon's and Little's, both of Massachusetts, and Varnum's and Hitchcock's, both of Rhode Island. They were posted in the bloody angle at Flatbush.

After August 19, Gen. Jno. Nixon returns: Col. Edward Hand, Pa., 288; Col. Wm. Prescott, Mass., 399; Lt.-Col. Thos. Nixon, 419; Col. Jas. M. Varnum, R. I., 391; Col. Daniel Hitchcock, R. I., 368; Col. Moses Little, Mass., 453; Col. Josiah Smith, 250, and Col. Jeronimus Remsen, 200.

Colonel Smith kept a diary, from which I will make a few extracts: "1776, July 23, I received orders; 24th, sent express to east and met to appoint officers. In Third Regiment, Capt. Paul Reeves, 1st Lieut. Jno. Corwin, 2d Lieut. Joshua Benjamin; 1st Lieut. Joshua Youngs, 20 men. August 8, ordered Lieut. Youngs to take the stock off Plum Island. August 14, went down to ferry to General Greene's and took up quarters for regiment at Keene Cowenhoven's. August 15, I spent with great deal of trouble. August 17 to 21st, same entry. August 22, the regulars landed below New Utrecht, 5,000, and I with my regiment went down to Flatbush and went within a small distance of the regulars; out all night, and the advance killed several of them. August 23, continued all day in the woods, an incessant fire all day; killed a number and had four wounded; returned at night. August 24, in camp; the guards wounded several of the enemy; had seven wounded, and Colonel Martin shot through the breast. August 25, out on sentry in woods all night; a dreadful thunder storm. August 26, relieved of guard in afternoon. August 27, alarmed about 2 a. m.; skirmishers attempted to force our lines; one of this regiment killed; killed many of the enemy and drove them back; lay in the trenches all night. August 28, in lines all day; very rainy, Continental firing kept up all day; were out all night. August 29, in lines until middle of afternoon, then had orders to march over to York. August 30, marched to King's bridge or Westchester. August 31, marched to New Rochelle, tried to get passage by water but could not. September 1, marched to Mamaroneck and then embarked on a vessel to go home, and about 11 at night got ashore at Captain Platt's at Smithtown. September 2, got home to my house. September 3, went over to Southold to see Colonel Livingston; he was gone to New England before I got there." September 7. The diary closes at Southold, where he went again to see Colonel Livingston, "but heard he and all his men were gone to New England, and I came home.

I have heard it doubted if Col. Smith's regiment was in the army at the time of the Battle of Long Island. Here is the proof from Gen. Washington's order book. Brigade Orders, August 19, 1776. An Orderly Sergeant for Headquarters from Col. Smith's regiment. August 21st, same. August 23rd, same. August 25th, same. August 27th, same. August 29th, same. August 20th, Col. Smith was named for Officer of the Day.

The New York Convention ordered Colonel Smith "to march to Hoornes Hook, but if disbanded the Colonel giving leave to every man to shift for himself in getting their families and effects off Long Island."

Josiah Smith wrote on August 29 from Camp Brooklyn to the president of the convention: "I just now received orders from general to march my regiment over to New York, then received orders which I send by Col. Phineas Fanning." (Onderdonk's Revolutionary Notes, Suffolk Co., page 36.)

November 8, 1776.—Convention resolved that commission pay wages and value of rations due such officers and men of Colonel Smith's regiment as are not in the British lines, and that Colonel Sands procure the rolls, paid from July 27 to August 31, $6.66 and $2.20.

In August, 1776, Smith's regiment was consolidated with him as Colonel; John Sands, Lieutenant-Colonel; Abram Remsen, Major; Thomas Waterman, Adjutant; Inceas Carpenter, Quartermaster; John Stratton, Sergeant-Major; Captains: 1st Company, Zephan Rogers; 2d, Nathaniel Platt; 3d, Benjamin Coe (Queens); 4th, Peter Nostrand; 5th, Thomas Wicks; 6th, Richard Mann (Queens); 7th, Selah Strong; 8th, Captain Youngs; 9th, Captain Paul Reeve. The 8th Company, Captain Youngs, has First Lieutenant, John Robert, (Flushing, Queens); Second Lieutenant Isaac Hicks; Sergeants, Beasley and King; Corporals, Cromwell and Rackett. Robert and Hicks are new; possibly Beasley and Cromwell are from the other regiment.

The regiments of Smith and Remsen are named together, but they were not one. General Sullivan sent the latter to support Miles' Pennsylvania regiment, and they ran so needlessly, that Sullivan reprimanded them in orders and ever after confined them to fatigue duty within the lines. The Kings County men are said to have deserted rapidly.

Stiles says: "The militia, especially of disaffected Kings and Queens, had been mustered with difficulty and the troops raised by a draft, especially ordered by the New York Provincial Congress in August. They were commanded by Col. Jeronimus Remsen of Queens, Lieut.-Col. Nicholas Cowenhoven of Kings, and Richard Thorn of Queens as Major. They reported August 15, and by desertion was soon reduced to about 200 men, and after the battle to about 150. This remnant left with the army and marched to Harlem under Maj. Barent Johnson, when most of them dispersed without leave and went home."

Governor Trumbull wrote to General Washington September 5: "I have received intelligence that since our troops retreated from the west end of Long Island the militia have disbanded, laid down their arms and are making their submission to General Howe, and that all idea of oppositions are at an end. The company of Continental troops that were stationed there are at Saybrook."

On September 11, Colonel Livingston wrote: "About 150 militia of Southold deserted me at Riverhead, having heard that Long Island was to be given up to the enemy. . . . Colonel Smith's regiment, having been discharged by the Colonel, arrived in small parties and confirm the report."

We have seen how the Colonel reached home on the 2d of September (which agrees with the report handed down by William Webb), under orders to shift for himself and get his family and effects off Long Island.

Webb brought the camp fever, and gave it to his children, and three of them were sick; two died after they reached the vessel, which waited for him to go on shore and bury them. These were William, born January 31, 1772, and Daniel, born March 15, 1774. Little Bulah was too sick to move and she was left with relations.

They crossed the Sound to Connecticut, entered the river, and settled at Saybrook, the upper part of which later became Chester, and remained there till he died. Long Island, as we have seen, was no place for a patriot and soldier to remain, and he abandoned home and some of his effects rather than suffer persecution or take the oath to King George.

CHAPTER II.

ESCAPED TO SAYBROOK, CONN.

SERVED IN 12TH REGIMENT OF MILITIA.

William Webb in the early part of September, 1776, finds himself in a strange place, without occupation, with a wife and two children at home and one infant left behind on Long Island, to be provided for.

War times bring stagnation to most kinds of business, especially in a rural district, but the Congress and State are seeking recruits for the army, and this is something he is familiar with. So I was prepared to find his name on the roll of Capt. Nathaniel Wales' company, detached from Col. Jeremiah Mason's regiment of militia, on duty at New London from September 13 until October 17, when they were discharged. (Connecticut in the Revolution, page 617.)

This was the 12th Regiment of militia, commanded by Col. Jeremiah Mason. The other officers of the company, except the captain, I do not know anything about. Wales had been Ensign in Putnam's regiment in 1775, Second Lieutenant in Wards' regiment, then Captain in August, 1775. He was Captain of a company in Latimer's regiment from August 22 to November 5, 1777, and was in the battles at Saratoga and the surrender of Burgoyne. His men were from Windham, Mansfield and Coventry in the northeast part of the State. In 1780, from March 2 to January 1, 1781, he was Captain of a company, probably in the State. He came from Windham and his men were from that neighborhood probably. I would not expect to find Webb with his company after they left New London, which was in the vicinity of Saybrook, where they probably looked for recruits, and Webb was at leisure and glad to serve.

The 12th Reg. was made up from the towns of Lebanon and Hebron. Col. Mason and Major James Clark were from the former, and the Lt.-Col., Obadiah Hosford, was from the latter place.

Before Oct., 1775, East Haddam was included, but at that time the 25th Regiment of Militia was formed from that town and Colchester.

CHAPTER III.
COL. JOHN LAMB'S 2D REGIMENT,
CONTINENTAL ARTILLERY.

Where was William Webb after October 17, 1776? He was not the man on the Continental frigate Trumbull, which sailed from the Connecticut River and was captured. (See N. Y. Gen. and Bi. Record 29, page 241.) He was not among the companies of ship carpenters that went from Connecticut River and built the flotilla of galleys on Lake Champlain. One of these was under the command of Capt. Job Winslow, of East Had-dam, the next town, whom he must have known. This was in August, before he came to Connecticut, and the galleys were lost in the battle of Valcour's Island, October 13, 1776, when Webb was on duty at New London.

In April, 1777, one hundred and seventy refugees from Long Island at Saybrook, signed a petition to the New York government. Such a number would show that it was not done in a hurry; it takes time for so many, and yet his name is not signed to it, though one would suppose every refugee in Saybrook knew of it and would be interested in it. What then? He must have been away from home. If so, he had no business to take him away and no money to travel, hence he must undoubtedly have been in the army.

Lieut.-Col. Eleazur Oswald of New Haven, who had been in Arnold's New Haven company at Boston, and from May to December 31, 1776, was at Quebec, now was Lieutenant-Colonel of Col. John Lamb's Second Regiment of Continental Artillery. Capt. Samuel Mansfield, who was a brother of Margaret, the deceased first wife of Benedict Arnold, was in this regiment; so was John R. Troup, a subaltern, who married another sister of Mrs. Arnold.

Oswald established a recruiting headquarters at New Haven, February 16, 1777, and went to the eastward, attempting to raise four companies, 170 men, for his regiment from Connecticut. He went as far as Providence and from there he wrote Major Stevenson: "Have enlisted 300 men."

In "Connecticut in the Revolution," the names of 34 Connecticut men were enlisted about this time, but they are all from the neighborhood of New Haven, except one at Lyme, enlisted February 10, 1777, and one at Killingworth on May 21 (page 286).

Oswald on April 7 wrote Colonel Lamb: "Have been to Lebanon, to the Governor, about additional premium of £10 for the quota of 170 men for the artillery; have obtained bounty for above number in £10 notes. Furnished some to officers here; can not reach Captain Lockwood going to Stratford."

On April 12, John Wiley, from Providence, R. I., writes: "Embargo off—a total stop will be put to recruiting for Continental army."

April 13 General Knox writes from Morristown, N. J.: "Have received letters from Colonel Oswald inclosing resolutions of Governor and Commissioners of Connecticut to give 170 men the bounty of £10; was hoping for more. Finding the number of men you are to get in Connecticut, you will try to get more in New York. America almost deserves slavery for their present inaction. Had we men we might whip the enemy for the ensuing campaign."

May 11, Oswald writes to Colonel Lamb: "Shipping have been seen off Guilford and Saybrook; apprehend a descent on Connecticut."

May 22, Timothy Jones (probably the one in Arnold's company) writes: "I will assist until the number 170 is received." Wishes to know how many they have got for fear of enlisting more.

What has become of the list of men beyond the 34 from Connecticut? These must include the men of the eastern part of the State. Mather has 18 refugees in his regiment. (Not in Connecticut, but in New York in the Revolution, page 1017.)

The former State Historian of New York, Victor Palsits, says: "The opinion that William Webb enlisted in Lamb's regiment while a resident of Connecticut has much to support it."

The Assistant Archivist of New York, Mr. Nelson, answering my inquiry if there was any record of the time of Webb's enlistment or discharge, replies: "He belonged to Capt. Gershom Mott's company, and after the war received 600 acres of bounty in the military tract, being lot 55 in township 17 (Milton). The balloting book does not indicate whether this man was from Connecticut, as is done in the case of a number of others who served in Lamb's artillery. It is therefore, so far as this record goes, possible that the William Webb of the artillery may have been the same as the man who signed the Articles of Association in Suffolk County in May, 1775, and who appears on the Suffolk County census of 1776."

We know our man was on the Association and the census referred to, and we believe he was in the artillery, so we may presume he enlisted with Oswald in February, 1777, and we know many Connecticut men enlisted for six months, and if so, it would run to August.

He assigned the 600 acres he received as bounty, for the immediate necessities, giving up a possible future rise.

CHAPTER IV.

BATTLE AT SARATOGA, 1777, AND CAPTURE OF BURGOYNE'S ARMY.

August 23, 1777, Congress appealed to Washington to send his best regiment and urge New England to forward all her militia to the Northern Army, where Burgoyne was marching from Canada to cut off New England from the Middle and Southern States. The plan was well thought out, but a failure on the part of the British at New York to act in conjunction resulted in failure.

Washington was opposing General Howe, who was threatening Philadelphia; his own army was smaller than the other, yet he did not hesitate, though General Schuyler, always his friend, had been removed, and Horatio Gates appointed, with all the powers his predecessor had asked, and this when his enemies in Congress and the Conway cabal in the army were seeking to make Gates Commander-in-Chief.

It was a critical time. Ruin to the cause was impending, but Greene, Lafayette and Hamilton stood by him and his great heart was true.

Connecticut could spare only the regiments of Thaddeus Cooke, Jonathan Latimer and Captain Green's company of Light Horse. These were hurried to the north to report to the Continental Army. They were composed of detachments from all brigades.

In Latimer's regiment many, perhaps all, of the rolls are preserved. They were men who lived in Windham County, and one of the companies was commanded by Capt. Nathaniel Wales, Webb's old captain at New London. The other regiment of Connecticut militia was that of Thaddeus Cook, although Bancroft, in his history, makes Cook the commander of both regiments.

In the action at Stillwater, September 19, 1777, Cook's and Latimer's regiments were in the battle. The stress of the action fell on Morgan's corps and Poor's brigade. In this brigade Colonel Cook's command suffered more than any other, except Colonel Cilley's. There was no general officer in the fight. General Gates even recalled General Arnold from participating.

September 21, the report of the battle of Bemis Heights—killed and wounded: In Poor's brigade, Cook's militia, eleven privates killed, two captains and three lieutenants wounded, three men missing; Latimer, one captain and one private killed, nine men wounded, two men missing.

The return of General Poor's brigade on October 4, 1777, was as follows: Four Colonels, 5 Lieutenant-Colonels, 8 Majors, 52 Captains, 45 First Lieutenants, 21 Second Lieutenants, 22 Ensigns, 23 other officers; total 2,271.

This would indicate five regiments, and is probably Cook and Latimer of Connecticut, Van Cortland and Henry Livingston of New York, and Brooks of Massachusetts, for Cilley and Scammel, of New Hampshire, formerly under Poor, were later under Arnold.

Lester's History of the United States, I, page 361, reads: "September 19, 1777. Morgan with his veteran regiment of riflemen did fearful execution. Scammel's New Hampshire battalion and Cook's two regiments of Connecticut militia, by their rapid, dexterous and daring movements, had much to do in the hardest work of the day. But where all did so well, Cilley's Continental regiment, the Connecticut militia under Cook, the Virginia riflemen under Morgan and the New Hampshire men under Scammel carried away the chief glories of the field. It was evident enough at the time that if an able general officer had led the army in person the rout of Burgoyne might have been complete."

On page 363 of same: "October 7. Nothing could withstand the deadly fire or impetuous charge. While Poor's brigade and Brooks' militia engaged Ackland's grenadiers, Morgan was making a circuit to flank the British right, and Dearborn was dashing down with his light infantry from the height."

Bancroft's "History of the United States, Vol. IX, page 411, reads: "Praise justly fell upon Morgan and Scammel; none offered their lives more freely than the Continental regiment and the Connecticut militia of Cook."

So we see historians agree in distributing the praise, and Washington, in December, 1777, issued an address to the New Jersey militia in which he said: "Look at the glorious effects which followed the spirit which appeared among our brethren of New York and New England, who by the brave assistance they afforded the Continental army, obliged a royal one, flustered with former victories, to sue for terms and lay down their arms in the most submissive manner."

One company from Webb's own town, Saybrook, was commanded by Edward Shipman. No muster roll or list of men has been found for this company or any other company except Captain Wadsworth's of Hartford. Whenever it is found, I expect to find Webb's name. He could not have gone before nor after, for he remained near home the rest of his life. In 1778, February 27, according to XII Vol., Connecticut Historical Society Collection, page 221, we read: "Captain Edward Shipman, of Colonel Cook's regiment, is in the service at the northward." He and Blague lived near William Webb.

I have attempted to collect the officers of Cook's regiment as follows:

Capt. Jonathan Wadsworth	Capt. Thomas Bidwell
Capt. Nathan Smith	Capt. Edward Shipman
Capt. Thomas Lawson	Capt. Tarbell Whitney
Capt. Elijah Smith	Capt. Joseph Blague
Adjutant Ebenezer West	Lieut. Joshua Brainerd
Lieut. Aaron Kelsey	Ensign Ozias Goodrich

Lieut. Austin Phelps	Ensign Eli Curtis
Lieut. Samuel Hart	Ensign Robert Bradford
Ensign Isaac Owen	Ensign James Abbot
Ensign Sand. Niles	Dr. George Olcott

If I am right in the above, this would make eight companies, but Joseph Blague lived in Saybrook, and unless there were two companies from that town he may be only a Lieutenant. However, he is called Captain on page 513, "Connecticut in the Revolution," so is E. Curtis, and I am also in doubt about Seth Boardman, Nathaniel Warner, Benjamin Denslow and Elijah Cook. Again, John Hough is called Lieutenant in Lieut.-Col. Baldwin's regiment on the North River in October, 1777.

I have now traced the history through 1776 to about 1778, his eldest child, Ziba, was a youth and at home. He married long after, in 1797, Hannah Barber; the third child, Elizabeth, was nearly five years old; the fifth child, Bulah, I think, was still at Sterling, L. I.; the youngest two, Sarah and Ann Moore, were not yet born. Sarah was born July 9, 1779, at Chester, and her sister, June 12, 1790. The family always lived in Chester until the father's death, September 23, 1832, and there he was buried in the little cemetery at the ripe age of eighty-six years.

I do not know that he ever had any trade or business, nor do I know if he served again after 1777. He may have served later, for he was still young and active, and continued well for the remaining fifty-five years; his tastes were simple and the neighborhood was sparsely settled, and I imagine he seldom went further from home than the next town, East Haddam, on the east side of the river, where his daughter, Mrs. Richard Green, lived; the quiet of his daily life was only varied when one of her six boys came down to see him, which they always loved to do, and then there was life and real enjoyment. He told them of war times and army life, but there was no taking of notes or laying facts away for futurity. If they had done so, it would have saved me many hours of work in building this narrative out of a few very simple facts.

I have been through the petitions of the Refugees to the Governor and Council of Connecticut and of New York, printed at length in Mather's Refugees from Long Island, pages 691 to 988, and I can not find that this man ever asked a cent of return for his losses and expenses, and I am glad of it.

William Webb had married September 24, 1769, Elizabeth Hudson, who was born April 1, 1749, and died July 13, 1835, aged 86. They had lived happily together sixty-three years. In politics he was a Federalist, then a National Republican, afterwards called Whigs. They were members of the Congregational Church, where the record of their death is wrongly given: "William Webb, died April 30, 1832, aged 86." "The Wife of William Webb, formerly of Chester, died in East Haddam, Conn., Sep. 16, 1835."

The small homestead at Chester not far from the river was long since deserted. Of the seven children all except the two mentioned as having died of the camp fever, grew up to marry, and all had families but one. None remained in the town or State which had proved an asylum to the refugees. Ziba, the eldest child, removed to Pennsylvania, and all the others removed to New York City, Holland Patent, Buffalo, Utica, and New Haven, in the State of New York.

The only reminder of this family in the town is the stone which marks their resting place, erected over their graves by one of their grandsons, inscribed as follows:

William Webb

Sept. 3, 1832,

aged 86.

Elizabeth

his wife

died July 13, 1835,

PART II

ANCESTRY AND DESCENDANTS

WM. WEBB'S ANCESTRY.

Sergeant Richard Webb was born in Motcomb, Dorset Co., England. He came to Cambridge, Mass., in 1632, removed to Boston, was made freeman 1632, then went to Hartford, Conn., 1635; Norwalk in 1650 and Stamford, where he died, Jan. 1, 1656. He was a Deputy to the General Court, 1655. He married Elizabeth Gregory; they had eight children.

John Webb, the fifth child, lived at Northampton, Mass. He married Ann ———, of Hartford, Conn. She died Aug. 26, 1667; (2) Elizabeth Swift, on Oct. 16, 1668. He died May 19, 1670.

John Webb, the eldest, married Dec. 12, 1665, Susanna, widow of Eldad Pomeroy and Matthew Cole. She was born at Boston, Mass., Mar. 15, 1644, and died Oct. 30, 1735, and was daughter of Henry and Susanna Cunliffe. He was called one of the "seven pillars" of the church, at Northampton, Mass. He died Sep. 14, 1673. John Webb died April 3, 1720. They had eight children.

Henry Webb, the second child, born Nov. 27, 1668, lived at Wethersfield, Conn., married Oct. 10, 1695,

Mary, daughter of Samuel and Mary Hurlbutt. She was born Oct. 16, 1672. He died between Dec., 1712, and Mar., 1714. Children:

I. Orange, b. June 28, 1696.

II. Ebenezer, b. Nov. 20, 1697; died 1776 in his 80th year.

III. Sarah, m. Peter Hurlbutt, April 12, 1727.

Ebenezer Webb, removed to Southold, Long Island. He married Mary Turrell, born Jan. 26, 1697, daughter of Samuel and Lydia (Stoddard) Turrell; she was daughter of Anthony and Christian Stoddard. Samuel Turrell was son of Daniel Turrell, Jr., and Hannah Barrell, daughter of Ens. John Barrell and Mary Colbron, his wife, daughter of Wm. and Margery Colbron. Daniel Turrell, father and son, were both in the ancient and honorable artillery company; so was John Barrell. Daniel, Jr., was Ens. of Major Thomas Clarkes, Suffolk Co. Regt., at time of King Philip's War. This name is plainly Turrell in my Bible notes,* but this name is uncommon and the Terry name was not, so it seemed it might be a mistake. He may have married before leaving Wethersfield; the name was familiar there. Ebenezer

*There are various spellings of this name, Terrell, Tirrell, Turrell, Tyrrel, in this country, so I looked to see how the family spelled it in England. Sir Lawrence Washington, the great grandfather of President Washington, of Oxford, who died in 1643, had a daughter, Martha Washington, who married, in June, 1630, Sir John Tyrrell, ancestor of the Baronets Tyrrell, and I found the same variety there, in the spelling of this name.

was on the Long Island census, of 1776: "Males—above 50, 1; above 16, 1. Females—above 16, 1." He signed the Association of Patriots in Southhold in 1775. He had nine children, but at the time of the census they were married, if living. Their names are as follows:

I. Orange, m. Jan. 18, 1753, Frances Sandyforth.

II. David.

III. James.

IV. Ebenezer, d. July 27, 1747.

V. Mary, m. Jan. 24, 1750, Timothy Corwin.

VI. Hannah, m. M. Gardiner.

VII. William, b. Sep. 19, 1746.

VIII. Joseph.

IX. Ebenezer, d. Apr., 1752, an infant.

William married Sep. 24, 1769, Elizabeth Hudson, b. Apr. 1, 1749, died July 13, 1835, daughter of Richard Hudson, b. June 20, 1724, m. in 1746 to Keturah Goldsmith, b. Jan. 29, 1728, and d. Dec. 19, 1808, aged 80. Richard Hudson, d. Jan. 16, 1799; he was son of Richard Hudson, b. 1687, d. before Apr. 15, 1738; he was son of Jonathan Hudson, b. in England May 8, 1658, married at Lyme, Conn., Sarah ———, June 13, 1686. They lived on Shelter Island, N. Y. He died Apr. 5, 1729; she died Sep. 11, 1727. Richard Hudson, Sr., married June 8, 1723, Hannah Booth, who was b. Feb. 22, 1691, daughter of Ens. Wm. Booth, son of Thos. and Mary Booth, and grandson of Jno. Booth. Ensign Wm. died Mar. 11, 1733; he married Hannah King, who was born Jan. 26, 1666, and died Dec. 22, 1742; she was daughter of Samuel King, born in England 1633, son of William King, from Dorset, and Dorothy Hayne. Samuel married Oct. 10, 1660, Frances Ludlam, daughter of Wm. and Clemence Ludlam. Samuel died Nov. 29, 1721; his wife died Jan. 1, 1692.

I have spent much time on the Hudson, Goldsmith and Turrell families; of the last I am doubtful, of the Goldsmith, which is larger, I know almost nothing. I will be glad of information or correction.

Richard Hudson's tombstone reads: June 8, 1798, aged 74.

Richard and Keturah Goldsmith Hudson had:

- I Hannah, b. June, 1747;; m. ——— Cook.
- II Elizabeth, m. William Webb; b. Apr. 1, 1749.
- III Daniel, b. Sep. 29, 1750. removed to Troy, N. Y.
- IV Katie, d. unmarried.
- V Richard, b. Dec. 10, 1754, married, removed to Troy.
- VI Keturah, b. Aug. 9, 1762.
- VII Beulah, b. Feb. 5, 1765, m. Grover Moore; she d. July 31, 1825.
- VIII Benjamin, b. Mar. 23, 1767.
- IX Mary, b. Nov. 28, 1770.
- X Hepsibah, b. Apr. 23, 1773, m. Francis Ward;
(2) Philip I. Arcularius.

APPENDIX II

In this little book we have been collecting facts of Webb and allied families, English puritans, who came to New England in the first half of the seventeenth century. Some were driven out by King James, like the Pilgrims in 1620; others were refugees during the Civil War, between parliament and Royalty, which, in 1649, brought Charles first to the scaffold; nevertheless two of his sons, Charles and James, occupied the throne, consequently England never was a safe home for puritans under the Stuarts, and New England, for that reason, was settled by them. Before 1640, Hutchinson tells us: some four thousand families and twenty thousand persons, had come into New England.

Some sacrificed property, many even changed their names; others turned their backs on their families, and threw away their coats-of-arms, valued before, which seemed out of place here; until, the third generation from the emigrant, seldom knew the town and county from which they came, so engrossed were they in battling for existence in a wilderness among wild beasts and wilder men.

The Indian was jealous of them, perhaps rightly, troubles often arose, until in 1636 and '37 a fierce war (the Pequot war) made it dangerous to dwell in many settlements; again in 1675 and '76, the Red man organized with King Philip, when nearly a thousand settlers perished.

The mother country at such times left them to their own resources, so, England was gradually being removed far away, and a common interest drew the people who were subjected to the same vicissitudes, together, thus implanting seeds for a new Nationality.

Such was the education and such the ancestry of New England, all puritans. The supporters of the King called them; "Round heads," while they proudly styled themselves "Cavaliers." These were party names like Whigs and Tories, Republicans and Democrats, and in no way marked distinction in aristocratic rank, since the cropped heads of the one, often held better blood than could be found among the ringletted and gayly dressed men of the other party. The History of the Southern Colonies shows: that very many came to this land, seeking for gain and adventure, while the Puritans came at a sacrifice, looking for a place to worship God.

Having said this much, let me add the proof in verification of what, some might say, was easy to write, but hard to establish, so I give part of the ancestry of a son-in-law of William Webb: See chart, which shows eight lines back to William I., the Conqueror, to-wit: 2 through his son, King Henry I; 2 through his daughter Adela; 4 through his daughter Gundred.

WEBB OF MOTCOMB, DORSET.

To return, arms were granted to this family June 17, 1577. From the similarity of the arms I should say, Oldstock in Wilts, who became baronets in 1644, was the same family, so also were those in Kent, Gloucester, Middlesex and Sussex; of this family, Berry, in his Sussex Genealogies, says: This Webb family owned an estate called Motcomb, near Lewes, from the time of the conquest being copy hold it descended to the youngest son.

- I. Adam Webb, of Motcomb, d. 1490.
- II. John, his son, d. 1550.
- III. John, his son, d. 1558, m. Eleanor Boxe, who d. 1576.
- IV. John, his son, had V. Henry, d. 1590, m. Margery, also Jno. Andrew and Wm., other sons.
- VI. Henry, son of Henry, had an only son:
- VII. Richard, b. 1618; d. 1672. This continues to the tenth generation.

I have not attempted to connect these Dorset or Sussex families with our family, I give this extract for what it is worth:

Hutchins History and antiquities of Dorset: gives a pedigree of Webb of Oldstock, Wilts; and great Cranford, Dorset. He says Motcomb is not a Manor, but is included in Gillingham Manor, called the Forest. Webb arms: Gu. a cross between 4 falcons, or. Crest: a demi eagle displayed, issuing out of a ducal coronet, or.

I. William Webb, alias Kelowe, Mayor of Sarum in 1476.

II. William Webb, Mayor in 1512 to '14, m. Edith.

III. William Webb, of same, Mayor 1523 and '34, d. 1553, m. Catharine.

IV. John Webb, M. P. in 1559; Mayor of Sarum, 1559. IV. William Webb, Mayor 1553 and '62; M. P. 1562, m. Catharine Tournay.

V. Sir John Webb, Thomas Webb, Wm. Webb.

VI. Sir William Webb, m. Elizabeth, Knighted 1623. ✓

I have added these, because the tradition has always been that this was the place our New England Webbs came from, but I never heard of any one attempting to connect them. They were a family of some account evidently.

Some would have made the Webb arms a frontispiece, but I disapprove of parading under colors which are false, so far as any proof to title exists; on the contrary, the ancestry of Green on the chart can be relied on.

CONCLUSION.

This little book originated in a desire to vindicate William Webb, and prove that he was, what he said, a soldier in the American Revolution; the fact that what I myself saw has disappeared, looks suspicious, but I make no charges, for what seemed to be a fraud may be only an accidental loss; in any case I have done what I could to correct it. I am not one who claims glory from a man in the ranks, and certainly in Wm. Webb's case there is no money, bounty or pension to be obtained, but simply the truth; he risked his life and incurred sickness, lost home and property, buried his children and became a wanderer, all on account of loyalty to his country. For these reasons I am glad to do this.

The services alone would make so small a pamphlet that I added his ancestry and descendants, for then, I knew, others would be interested to preserve it.

The descendants of Wm. Webb, of the second generation, are numbered from 1-7; the third from 8-30; the fourth from 31-76; the fifth from 77-147; the sixth from 148-182; the seventh, one only, so far as I know, number 183. This statement seems to be required: since I have omitted the usual generation numerals over each name.

I am glad to make this post-script, adding the last of the Greene family, to wit: Richard Schoonmaker Greene, was born at Summit, N. J., on February 17, 1915, son of Marshall Winslow and Anna Schoonmaker (DeBevoise) Greene and grandson of the author.
