MEMORIAL

OF THE

Descendants of Thomas Alger,

1665—1875.

ALGER FAMILY.

The undersigned, having gathered the requisite facts for a Genealogical History of that Branch of the Alger Family which springs from Thomas Alger, of Taunton and Bridgewater, in Massachusetts, proposes to print under that title, a work which shall present a history of the family from the year 1655, to the year 1875, containing the names of over eight hundred descendants of Thomas Alger, arranged in genealogical order, accompanied by biographical sketches and items of interest; provided, a sufficient number of subscriptions can be obtained to defray the cost of printing. The price of the work to be $1.50 per copy.

If you wish to subscribe, write below your name, post-office address, and the number of copies you desire, and mail to the undersigned. If it is found practicable to print the work, a second circular will be sent to you upon its completion.

P R E F A C E .

VERY many of our New England families can trace the line of their lineage across two hundred years or more to the first settlements made by their ancestors on these shores. Very few can span the intervening waters and resume the line in the old world. Distance, which severs, also discourages the renewal of family ties, and time gradually obliterates them. This is the case with us, and our history must perforce begin with the ancestor who founded the family in the new world. Not only are we unable to trace the lineage of this ancestor, but we cannot with absolute certainty say from what part of the old world he came. We have strong evidence, however, that he was a native of England. There the name of Alger is to be found from a very early period, and thence came several men bearing the name who were contemporary with him in this country. It is to be hoped that future researches will throw light upon this point.

The writer does not claim that the following pages are free from errors and omissions. It would be idle to expect absolute accuracy and completeness in the first edition of a work of this kind. If any mistakes are noticed they should be corrected in the blank pages furnished for the purpose at the end of the work.

The system of arrangement adopted is essentially like that used in the "New England Historical and Genealogical Register." It differs in this respect: Figures are used over the italicized names in parentheses, not, as in the Register, to denote the generation, but as index figures—figures by which the individuals of the name are designated and by means of which they may be found in the body of the work, without consulting the index. Take, for example: 13. JAMES ALGER (Israel,⁴ Israel,² Thomas¹). This shows at a glance the pedigree of James Alger No. 13. He is the son of Israel Alger No. 4, the grandson of Israel Alger No. 2, and the great-grandson of Thomas Alger No. 1. As all the individuals in the book are numbered consecutively, one may be found as easily, if his number is known, as if the page on which he appears is known.

Another example may be taken to explain the system more fully. Suppose we wish to find the record of the Rev. Israel Alger. The first thing to be done is to look in the index under that name. We there find that the Rev. Israel Alger appears on page 19. Turning to that page we see his name and his record, his pedigree being put down thus: 126. Rev. ISRAEL ALGER (Israel,¹⁰ Daniel,¹² Israel,⁴ Israel,² Thomas¹). Now if we desire to find the record of his father, we turn back to Israel Alger No. 32; if of his grandfather, to Daniel Alger No. 12; and so on seriatim.

The following abbreviations, in addition to the usual ones of the names of States and of the months, have been used: b. born; m. married; d. died; unm. unmarried; dau. daughter; bapt. baptized.

Where a town is named without the addition of a State, Massachusetts is to be understood, unless some other State is designated or implied.

To those who have expressed an interest in this work, and to those who have rendered aid in its preparation, the writer tenders his grateful acknowledgment.

THOMAS ALGER AND HIS DESCENDANTS.

THOMAS ALGER, the first cis-Atlantic ancestor of the family whose history is herein presented, was one of eight men bearing the name of Alger, who settled in New England during the seventeenth century. The exact time of his arrival is unknown. As nearly as can now be determined, it was in the vicinity of 1665. In that year he appears at Taunton; proof of his presence being afforded by the following entry on the old proprietary records of the town:

"January 9th, 1664-5. Granted that Thomas Auger* shall have a parcel of land that lieth at ye head of Thomas Linkon's land and ye land of Robert Crossman, as much as that place will afford."

This place was situated near the Three-mile River, a stream flowing through the easterly part of Taunton. There it seems he took up his abode; and in the autumn of the year he brought to it a wife. We read on the Old Colony records that Thomas Alger, of Taunton, and Elizabeth Packard, of Bridgewater, were married November the 14th, 1665. She was the daughter of Samuel Packard, of Wymondham, England, who with his wife and child came in 1638, in the ship Diligent, to this country, and settled first in Hingham, and then in Bridgewater, dying in the latter place about 1684.

In after years, Thomas Alger removed within the limits of Bridgewater, and there, it is supposed, died, perhaps soon after, as his name does not appear on the records of the town. Facts concerning his life might doubtless have been found on the Taunton records, but unfortunately they have been destroyed. He had at least two children. They were named from a brother and sister of their mother, and were:—

2. i. ISRAEL, m. Patience Hayward.
3. ii. DELIVERANCE.

2. ISRAEL ALGER (*Thomas*¹), a husbandman, m. Patience Hayward, daughter of Nathaniel Hayward, and granddaughter of Thomas Hayward,

* Until recently the name of Alger was almost invariably pronounced Auger, and this it appears was in accordance with the rule as in other words. Butler, who wrote his English Grammar in 1633, states that in his time a before l was sounded like au. So it was in Chaucer's time. In the "Clerke's Tale," occurs Augrim for Algorithm. Members of the family have never varied the orthography of the name from Alger, yet by others it has been frequently written, as pronounced, Auger. This has caused some confusion to genealogists from the fact of there being distinct families of each name.

one of the original proprietors and first settlers of Bridgewater. Her uncle, Hon. Thomas Hayward, Jr., was a judge of the Court of Common Pleas, and one of the Governor's Assistants. She died before 1730. He lived on the north side of the Town River in Bridgewater. In 1702, he was appointed surveyor of highways. He died about 1726, leaving a large estate for the time and place. The following inventory of the realty is on file in the Plymouth Probate Office:

"An Inventory of the Estate of Mr. Israel Alger, late of Bridgewater, in the County of Plymouth, deceased, taken Aug. 28th, 1730.

4. ISRAEL ALGER (Israel,³ *Thomas*¹), a husbandman, married thrice; 1st, his second cousin, Alice, daughter of Dea. Joseph Hayward, who d. Jan. 30, 1716; 2d, Dec. 25, 1717, Susanna, daughter of William Snow, grand-daughter of William Snow, Sen., one of the proprietors and first settlers of Bridgewater: she d. about 1729; 3d, June 24, 1731, Rachel, daughter of Thomas Wade: by her he had no issue. When he was twenty-one years of age, his father conveyed to him "a certain piece or parcel of land lying in the township of Bridgewater, butting on the north side of the Town River, containing thirty acres." Here, on a spot about a quarter of a mile southwest from where James Alger now lives, he built his house, the cellar of which is still to be seen, and here he died Nov. 13, 1762, aged 73.

Children by first wife:—

9. i. PATIENCE, b. Sept. 20, 1713; bapt. 1727; called Alice, on her mother's death, to bear up her name; m. Shephard Fiske,* Feb. 24, 1732; d. without issue, in 1796, aged 83. Shephard Fiske was a son of the Rev. Moses Fiske, of Braintree, and a half-brother of the Hon. John Quincy, great-grandfather of President John Quincy Adams. He graduated at Harvard University in 1721, practised a short time

* "Judge Mitchell informed me in 1846, that upon going into the House of Representatives at Washington, a few days before, and taking the seat assigned for former members, President John Quincy Adams came up to him in his seat, and there spoke of this Shephard Fiske, his relative, whom he said he well knew in his youth."—Ellis Ames, in Proc. Mass. Hist. Soc., 1873-5, p. 375.

as a physician in Killingly, Conn., and in 1727 came to North Bridgewater, where he engaged in business as an iron founder, and sustained some public offices. From the North, he removed to the West Parish, occupying the house now owned by Otis Drury. There he d. June 24, 1779, aged 77.

126. REV. ISRAEL ALGER (Israel,³² Daniel,¹² Israel,⁴ Israel,² *Thomas*¹), never married, and died at Easton, of a fever, Sept. 23, 1825. Having experienced religion, he became, at the early age of nineteen, a minister of the Baptist Church in West Bridgewater. He then resolved to obtain a liberal education, and fitted himself for Brown University, which he entered the following year. He was graduated, with honor, in 1811; his part at the commencement exercises being an oration on "Curiosity guided by Reason and Common Sense the Source of Mental Improvement." He afterwards took the degree of Master of Arts in course. On leaving college he returned to his native village to preach, but was prevented by ill health from a regular discharge of ministerial duties, and soon removed to Boston, where he established a private school at the West End, and was also for a few years a master in the old Mayhew School.

He was the author of a number of educational works, which were adopted in many of the best schools and academies, and some of which still remain in use. His first work was entitled the "New Practical Book-keeper." It was an attempt to abridge the labor and simplify the method of instruction in book-keeping, the whole system being comprised in two volumes, accompanied by a blank ledger for practical operation. This was followed in 1821 by the "Elements of Orthography, in four parts, adapted to the capacities of youth, by questions and answers; illustrating, by easy examples, the powers of the English alphabet, and the rules for syllabication, spelling, accentuation, &c." In 1823 and 1824, he published, under the following titles, a number of Lindley Murray's works, which he had revised and made numerous additions to: "The Pronouncing Introdutor;" "The Pronouncing English Reader;" "The English Teacher, or Private Learner's Guide;" "Murray's English Exercises;" "Alger's Murray." In 1825, he issued two works,—the last he wrote,—namely: “Alger’s Perry; the Orthoëpical Guide to the English Tongue, being Perry’s Spelling Book revised and corrected, with Walker’s Pronunciation precisely applied on a new scheme; containing also moral lessons, fables, and much useful matter for the instruction of youth.” “The Pronouncing Bible,” containing the Old and New Testaments, with the proper names and numerous other words accurately accented in the text, and divided into syllables as they ought to be pronounced.

210. CYRUS ALGER (Abiezer,¹⁶ James,¹⁸ Israel,⁴ Israel,² *Thomas*¹), m. 1st, Lucy, daughter of Nathan Willis, 1804: she d. Dec. 23, 1830, aged 48; 2d, Mary Otis Pittsury, Aug. 1833. He d. Feb. 4, 1856, aged 75.

After partially fitting for college, he entered the iron foundry business with his father, at Easton. He was a noted horseman and gunner, and in athletic exercises excelled all the young men in that section of the country. In 1809, he went to South Boston, where he engaged in the foundry business with General Winslow, and a few years after with Mr. T. H. Perkins. During the war of 1812, he had large contracts with the Government for the manufacture of cannon-balls. In 1816, he purchased of the South Boston Association the whole territory now west of Dorchester Avenue, between Federal-street Bridge and a line nearly as far south as Swan street, with the exception of a narrow parcel fronting on the Turnpike between Fourth and Swan streets. In this purchase he was careful that his deed should take in all the flats in front of the sea wall to the channel, or low water mark; and thus he obtained many thousand feet which he clearly foresaw would in time prove not the least valuable portion of his property. Jonathan Mason, the President of the Association, did not regard these flats as of much value, and included them in the sale without any misgiving, believing that so liberal a price had been given for the upland the Association could well afford to throw in the flats.

The speculation was a bold one, and he was laughed at for his presumption in buying such a parcel of land for the purpose, as he avowed, of making building lots. He repaired the sea wall, and began gradually to fill in the flats. The South Boston Iron Company, of which he was the originator and principal proprietor, was incorporated in 1827. He then began to improve the property, and, taking the sea wall as the easterly boundary, built out a wharf near where Alger's foundry now stands, and erected a foundry building. Gradually these works were extended, and at the same time he filled in and laid out an elegant garden in the rear of his residence, and built up Fourth and Foundry streets to their present width. Lots for the Mechanics Bank Building and Barker's Building were sold, and affairs began to assume a new appearance. In the meantime, improvements had been progressing in Foundry street. The Sea-street bridge was built and presented to the city, Mr. Alger being one of the most prominent movers in the matter. Through his influence, other shops were started, until finally the whole of the flats, inside of the Commissioners' line and west of Foundry street, were filled in and covered with machine shops and foundries. Alger's foundry was also gradually extended, until it became one of the most perfect iron establishments in the United States.

In 1829, in connection with several capitalists of Halifax, he built the first smelting furnace in the British Provinces; the machinery being made at his works, and mechanics in his employment sent to put it up. He was one of the best practical iron metallurgists in the country. By a method peculiar to himself, he succeeded in purifying cast iron, so as to give it more than twice the strength of ordinary cast iron; the process consisting in removing impurities from the metal while in a liquid state, and causing it to be much more dense. The method gave him great advantage over other iron foundrymen. It also gave him superior skill in the manufacture of cannon, and for many years he was largely employed in making guns for the U. S. Government. The mortar gun Columbiad, at that time the largest gun of cast iron ever cast in America, was made under his personal supervision. In the composition of fuses for bomb-shells, he also made great improvements, which were adopted by the Government.

He first introduced and patented the method of making cast iron chilled rolls, by which the part subject to wear should be hard, while the necks remained unchanged as to hardness and strength—these being cast in sand while the body is cast in a chill or iron cylinder. Until his time, all the reverberatory furnaces for melting iron were made with hearths inclining from the fire, the metal thus running from the heat towards the throat of the chimney. He changed the form so as to allow the iron to flow towards the flame, where the heat would be most intense. Cylinder stoves were first designed by him in 1822. He obtained patents for improvement in cast-iron stoves and ploughs. With the methods of working the ores of iron, and with the operations of the crucible, he was familiar. Nor did he confine his attention to iron. He manufactured the first perfect bronze cannon for the U. S. Ordnance Department, and for the State of Massachusetts. For these he obtained the gold medal awarded by the Massachusetts Mechanic Association.

He was ever active in making improvements, spending large sums of money in beautifying and otherwise benefiting South Boston. He purchased eleven acres of marsh between South Boston and Washington Village, and was instrumental in attracting thither the two extensive manufactories that are now situated in that section of the ward. He also laid out a large sum of money in beautifying Dorchester Avenue, building side-walks, and, at his own expense, setting out shade trees the entire distance from the railroad to the junction of Dorchester Street and Dorchester Avenue. As a citizen, he was universally beloved. He was a member of the Common Council the first year of the organization of the city government; and in 1824 and 1827, an alderman. His kindness to the men in his employ was proverbial, and he often kept men on half time, when their services were not needed, to prevent the pecuniary distress which would be caused by a discharge. He was the first man in South Boston to introduce the ten hour system. His payments to his workmen were always in cash, and for years amounted to nearly $2000 per week.

At his funeral, notwithstanding a severe storm, a large number of persons preceded the hearse on foot. As a mark of respect, all the stores, without a single exception, along the route of the procession, were closed while the body was being borne to the grave; and the various church bells, by order of the Mayor, tolled a solemn requiem. Nearly all the large manufactories suspended work for the afternoon; from the armory floated the American flag at half mast; and arrangements had been made to have the pupils of the public schools join in the procession, had not the weather been so very inclement.

The following tribute is from the pen of a distinguished officer of the U. S. Navy, Admiral J. A. Dahlgren:

"That we should lose the services of one so able as Mr. Alger, is much to be deplored; but it is to be remembered that his term extended to three-fourths of a century, and that his sterling integrity, rare abilities and unceasing industry, have built him up a durable fame, which is at once a rich legacy to his family, and an example worthy of imitation. He possessed that rare quality—sagacity, which constitutes in truth the highest attribute of the intellectual man, and enabled him to arrive at results which others sought by disciplined study, laboriously, and often in vain. Minds of this cast are seldom met with, and they are invaluable to their time and generation. I shall ever retain the most profound regard for the many excellent virtues and great abilities of Cyrus Alger."*

He was b. at West Bridgewater, Sept. 2, 1781, the son of the Rev. Dr. John Reed. At the age of eighteen he entered Brown University, and was graduated with distinction in 1803. After graduating he was engaged for two or three years in teaching, first as preceptor of Plymouth Academy, Bridgewater, and next as tutor in Brown University. He then studied law with the Hon. William Baylies, and upon being admitted to the Bar established himself in practice at Yarmouth on Cape Cod. He soon attained eminence in his profession, and was elected a member of Congress. He was reelected again and again, until he had served for the unexampled period of twenty-four years. By some of the Southern members he was familiarly denominated "the life member." In 1844 he was chosen Lieutenant Governor of Massachusetts, and continued to serve in that capacity for seven consecutive years. At the end of that time he retired to private life. The degree of LL.D. was conferred on him by Brown University in 1845. He d. at Bridgewater, Nov. 25, 1860, aged 79. His children were by his first wife:—

220. NAHUM ALGER (James,⁶⁰ James,¹² Israel,⁴ Israel,² *Thomas*¹), m. Catharine-Sampson, daughter of the Rev. William Rounseville, of Freetown, Aug. 15, 1815. She was born April 5, 1799, and died at Hooksett, N. H., Dec. 26, 1840. Her father was a Baptist clergyman, a justice of the peace, and for ten consecutive years a representative to the General Court. Her grandfather Capt. Levi Rounseville commanded a company of minute men that marched from Freetown to Lexington on the 19th of April, 1775, and subsequently was a captain in the 9th regiment of the Continental army.*

Nahum Alger was the agent of Alger & Fobes's Iron Foundry at Freetown, and acted in that capacity until the failure of the firm. He taught school for awhile, and then went to Boston, where at the time of his death he was occupied as a lawyer's clerk. He died at Hooksett, N. H., while on a visit to his daughter, May 8, 1846. He was a man of good abilities, but was unfortunate in his affairs. He occasionally wrote verses which show that he possessed some poetic feeling. Children :—

431. OLIVIA ALGER (Cyrus,²¹⁰ Abiezer,⁴⁵ James,⁷³ Israel,⁴ Israel,² *Thomas*¹), m. Thomas Richardson, Oct. 1828. She was killed by falling from an elevator, Dec. 19, 1871. Mr. Richardson was born at Billerica, Mass., Aug. 31, 1796. In 1817, he went to Mobile, Alabama, where he entered the commission business; and in 1821 and 1822 filled the office of alderman. In 1828, he came to South Boston, and established an iron foundry. Withdrawing from this soon after, he engaged in various enterprises, particularly the Mediterranean trade. In 1835 and 1836, he was a representative from South Boston to the General Court, and in 1837 and 1838 an alderman of the city. He d. Dec. 16, 1872. Children:—

693. i. THOMAS-FRANCIS, b. March 13, 1830; m. Ellen Phelps, Oct. 9, 1861. He graduated at Brown University in 1852, and at the Cambridge Law School in 1854. Resides in Boston.

432. FRANCIS ALGER (Cyrus,²¹⁰ Abiezer,⁴⁵ James,⁷³ Israel,⁴ Israel,² *Thomas*¹), m. Mary Louisa Jones, May 9, 1835. He was divorced from her, and m. Lydia M. Smith, Oct. 13, 1858.

As a boy he exhibited little inclination for study, and received only a common school education. When he was about seventeen years old, however, he became interested in the science of mineralogy, and from the love which he acquired for it was led to the study of kindred sciences. A taste for reading and reflection was thus awakened, and he became a student in other paths of literature. To mineralogy he gave especial attention, and at the time of his death possessed one of the finest collections of minerals in the country. For years he was in correspondence with Heuland, the great mineral dealer of London, who sent him boxes of specimens to select what he wished and to sell or return the rest. He knew all the fine specimens in most of the private cabinets in the United States, and was ready to buy them when they were offered for sale. He purchased several mines in the State of New Hampshire, more for the sake of the minerals they yielded than from any hope of pecuniary gain. He was also interested in the iron and zinc mines of Sussex Co., New Jersey, and made that locality famous for its rare and unique minerals.

In 1826, he made a trip to Nova Scotia with his father, who went thither for the purpose of erecting a smelting furnace at Clements, on the Annapolis Basin. On his return he published in the scientific journals a description of the minerals found in that region. The following year, in company with Dr. Charles T. Jackson, he explored the mineral region of the Peninsula of Nova Scotia, and the results of their researches were published in a joint essay. In 1849, he made another exploration with Dr. Jackson, a schooner being chartered for the voyage which served as a home along the wild coasts of the Bay of Fundy. Many new discoveries were made, and a revised and enlarged memoir was prepared for the American Academy of Arts and Sciences. Shortly after its publication, he was elected a member of that learned body. He was one of the original members of the Boston Society of Natural History, and for several years its Curator of Mineralogy. In 1849, the degree of Master of Arts, causa honoris, was conferred on him by Harvard University. In 1856, he succeeded his father in the management of the South Boston Iron Company. During the Rebellion he had large contracts with the Government for cannon and projectiles of every description. He invented and patented two fuses adapted to shells for rifled guns, and a pouch to contain the bursting charge used in shrapnel.

In his religious belief he was a zealous Unitarian. At the age of nineteen he drew up a paper, and, in conjunction with a friend, obtained the list of subscriptions, amounting to about $2,000, which formed the initial organic basis of the American Unitarian Association. This paper, in his handwriting, is still preserved in the archives of the Association. He was, during its whole existence, the soul and life of the Young Men's Book and Pamphlet Society, an association for gratuitously distributing the best Liberal Christian Literature. He was anxious that at the centenary of the burning of Servetus a monument should be raised to that Unitarian martyr on the spot of his sacrifice, and anonymously made the public offer of $500 for that purpose, on condition that $1500 more were subscribed.

While in Washington, on business with the Government, he was attacked by a fever, and after an illness of a week, expired on Friday, Nov. 27, 1863, in his 56th year.

One of two gentlemen conversing at his funeral said, "I have been intimately acquainted with Francis Alger for twenty years. I have seen him constantly, under all sorts of circumstances, in the most confidential relations; and I sincerely declare that I never knew him, in a single instance, to do one act, say one word, or reveal one sign of character, inconsistent with the most exalted standard of Christian duty and Christian purity." The other replied, "I have known him intimately for twenty years longer still, and can say the same thing that you have said, with unhesitating emphasis."

The following is a list of his writings:

1. Notes on the Minerals of Nova Scotia, 12 Amer. Journ. Science and Arts, 227, published in 1827. Also, a List of the Minerals brought from Annapolis Basin, published in Bost. Journ. Phil. and Arts, and reprinted in 12 Amer. Journ. Science and Arts, 176.

WILLIAM R. ALGER.

Lynn Forum, and afterward engaged in the clothing business with Mr. John Alley. He served as a member of the City Council, and d. June 16, 1854. The following is extracted from an obituary notice which appeared in the "Lynn News":

"Mr. Alger was a capable man in an eminent degree, and always did well what he undertook to do, exerting a salutary influence upon all with whom he was connected in life. He was an inoffensive man, carefully avoiding the doing to others what he should dislike to have done to himself. Whoever saw, conversed and became acquainted with him, never forgot him. He had a distinctive individuality which could not easily be confounded with that of any other man. He had no deceptive appearance, all was transparency and clearness. You at once seemed to see his heart, his integrity, his unaffected goodness, his moral incapability of vice; and the first impression never deceived you. He took great interest in the support of public worship, and was zealous, to a remarkable degree, in the support of that blessed doctrine which was so beautifully illustrated in his life. Long will the religious society, of which he was such a prominent and active member, feel his loss, for it is in no small degree owing to his zeal and efficient aid, that it occupies its present prosperous condition. He was ever ready to espouse a movement having for its object the amelioration and advancement of humanity, and his worth was felt, and his great influence for good acknowledged by many humane organizations, and as a member of our city council."

Children:—

729. i. JAMES-EDWARD, b. April 11, 1845. He served as a soldier in the Union Army, from Dec. 1, 1864, to May 31, 1865, and was wounded in battle.

454. Rev. WILLIAM-ROUNSEVILLE ALGER (Nahum,²⁰ James,⁵⁰ James,¹⁵ Israel,⁴ Israel,² Thomas), m. Anne Langdon Lodge, daughter of Giles Lodge, of Boston, Sept. 21, 1847. Thrown at an early age upon his own resources, he obtained work in the cotton mills at Hooksett, N. H. His desire for knowledge was such that he devoted the greater part of his leisure time to study. Fastening pages of his grammar on a post in the mill, he committed them to memory as he tended his machines. In the odd moments of rest which the care of the machinery frequently permitted, he worked out problems in arithmetic and algebra, with a bit of chalk on a strip of wood, or read a page in some history or romance. At the end of five years, having fitted himself, and saved sufficient money to pay for tuition, he entered the academy at Pembroke, N. H., where he remained one year. He then went to the academy at Lebanon, and from there, after a half year's instruction, to the Cambridge Theological School, from which he was graduated in 1847.

On the 8th of September, 1847, he was ordained over the Mount Pleasant Congregational Society in Roxbury. In 1852, Harvard University conferred on him the honorary degree of Master of Arts. In 1855, he resigned the pastorate of the Roxbury church, to accept a call from the Bulfinch

St. Society of Boston, over which he was installed on the first Sunday in January of that year. In 1857, he accepted an invitation to deliver the Fourth of July Oration before the city authorities of Boston, and improved the occasion, although the pro-slavery feeling was then at its height, by an uncompromising protest against the slave power at the South and its upholders at the North. The Board of Aldermen refused to pass the customary vote of thanks. Seven years after, in 1864, the vote was passed. In 1868, he was chosen chaplain of the Massachusetts House of Representatives. In the autumn of 1868, the members of his church and others of the liberal faith organized a society for the holding of free services in the Boston Music Hall. There he preached every Sunday to audiences of from two to three thousand persons. In 1871, he sailed for Europe to enjoy a short season of rest and recreation. While in Paris his health broke under the tension of overwork, and for months his recovery was doubtful. A year of entire rest, however, with the best care, made him stronger than before, and in May, 1872, he resumed his preaching in the Music Hall, continuing it until September, 1873, when he resigned. In December, 1874, he accepted a call from the Church of the Messiah in New York.

He has served on the Boston School Committee, and has filled the office of Grand Chaplain of the Massachusetts Grand Lodge of Masons. Many lectures have been delivered by him before lyceums in various parts of the country. A member of the Phi Beta Kappa Society of Harvard College, and of the American Oriental Society. His first work in book form was published in 1851. It was entitled "A History of the Cross of Christ." In 1856, he became widely known to the literary world through his "Poetry of the Orient," a series of original metrical versions of the thought, sentiment and fancy of the East, prefaced by an historical dissertation. A fourth edition, enlarged by a number of original poems, was printed in 1874. In 1860, he issued his chief work,—the result of twelve years of patient study and labor,—"A Critical History of the Doctrine of a Future Life." The seventh edition was published in 1874. His next work appeared in 1866,—"The Solitudes of Nature and of Man; or, the Loneliness of Human Life." Up to the present time it has passed through eight editions. The following year he published "The Friendships of Women," which has also reached its seventh edition. In 1868, appeared "Prayers offered in the Massachusetts House of Representatives during the Session of 1868." He has edited, with an introduction, "Studies of Christianity; or, Timely Thoughts for Religious Thinkers," by James Martineau. He has contributed largely to the North American Review, Atlantic Monthly, Christian Examiner, and other magazines, and has published from time to time the following discourses, orations, &c.:—

Valodictory Address, delivered at the Annual Exhibition of the People's Literary Institute and Gymnasium, Pembroke, July 18, 1843. Inferences from the Pestilence and the Fast: a Discourse preached at Roxbury, Aug. 3, 1849. Facts of Intemperance, and their Claims on the Public Action of the People, 1852. that time until 1857 was engaged in teaching, and in writing for the Boston and New-York press, being editorially connected with two Boston papers. In 1860, he completed a three years course of instruction at the Cambridge Theological School, defraying his expenses in the mean time by contributing to a number of periodicals. In 1860, he made a trip to Europe, and returning in 1861 established himself at Cambridge as a private instructor. There he remained until 1864, when he received a call to the Unitarian Church at Brewster, Mass., and on the 8th of December in that year was ordained as its pastor. His connection with the society was dissolved in March, 1866. He then went to New York city for the purpose of devoting himself to literary work, and there is domiciled at the present time.

He is best known as a writer of juvenile fiction, and as such has achieved a reputation second to that of no other in the country. The majority of his stories are illustrative of the different phases of street life in the cities. He has not, however, confined himself to prose. Before he entered college he wrote verses, and while in college was appointed to deliver one or two anniversary poems. In 1857 he published a satirical poem entitled "Nothing to Do, a Tilt at our Best Society." He contributed a considerable number of verses from time to time to "Harper's Weekly" and other periodicals, and in 1875 he published a volume entitled "Grand'ther Baldwin's Thanksgiving, with other Ballads and Poems." His publications in book form are as follows:—

643. EDWIN-A. ALGER (David,²⁰⁰ Nathaniel,¹¹⁰ Nathaniel,⁸⁶ Nathaniel,⁷ Israel,² *Thomas*¹), m. Amanda M. Buswell, of Hartland, Vt., Sept. 15, 1843. After receiving a common school and academic education, he was employed as a teacher in Canton, Mass. At that time there flourished in the village a lyceum which had been instituted for the purposes of debating, declamation, theatricals, &c. Here he displayed and developed a talent for speaking and debating that attracted attention, and awakened in him aspirations for a career in one of the professions. He did not remain in Canton long, but turned his steps towards the city of Boston. There he was employed, first as a clerk in a large shipping establishment, and afterwards in Burnham's bookstore where he had access to a large collection of books, and was enabled to gratify a taste for reading and study. In 1841 he went to Lowell, where he attended the Dracut Academy. In 1842 he entered the office of the Hon. Alpheus R. Brown as a law student. In 1845 he was admitted to the bar, and immediately formed a partnership connection with Mr. Brown, which still continues. In 1864 they left Lowell and came to Boston, where they are actively engaged in practice at the present time. Aside from his professional duties Mr. Alger has been active in politics as a Democrat, speaking during the various campaigns in the principal cities of the State, and serving as a delegate in many of the Democratic State Conventions. He was a delegate to the National Union Convention held at Philadelphia, Aug. 14, 1866. In 1858, 1862 and 1863 he was a member of the Board of Aldermen of the city of Lowell, and in the latter year was one of the committee appointed to revise the City Ordinances. During the war for the suppression of the Rebellion his sympathies were with the cause of the Union, and his efforts were put forth in its behalf. One of the companies which performed active service in the field, namely, Company F, 33d Massachusetts Regiment, was named in his honor. In 1872 he was nominated by the Democrats of his district as a candidate for State Senator. In his religious views he is a Universalist; and while in Lowell he was Superintendent of the Sabbath School of the First Universalist Church. He resides in Cambridge. Children:—
