Preface

This index to the Thomas Jefferson Papers is a direct result of the wish of the Congress and the President, as expressed by Public Law 85–147 approved August 16, 1957, and amended by Public Laws 87–263 approved September 21, 1961, and 88–299 approved April 27, 1964, to arrange, index, and microfilm the papers of the Presidents in the Library of Congress "to preserve their contents against destruction by war or other calamity," to make the presidential papers more "readily available for study and research," and to inspire informed patriotism.

Presidents whose papers are in the Library are:

George Washington	James K. Polk	Chester A. Arthur
Thomas Jefferson	Zachary Taylor	Grover Cleveland
James Madison	Franklin Pierce	Benjamin Harrison
James Monroe	Abraham Lincoln	William McKinley
Andrew Jackson	Andrew Johnson	Theodore Roosevelt
Martin Van Buren	Ulysses S. Grant	William H. Taft
William H. Harrison	James A. Garfield	Woodrow Wilson
John Tyler		Calvin Coolidge

The microfilm of the Jefferson Papers became available in 1974. Positive copies of the film may be purchased from the Chief, Photoduplication Service, Library of Congress, Washington, D.C. 20540. A positive copy is available for interlibrary loan through the Chief, Loan Division, Library of Congress.

Foreword

Publication of the Index to the Thomas Jefferson Papers and release of a new microfilm edition of the papers bring to a close the Presidential Papers Program of the Library of Congress as authorized by Public Law 85–147, enacted August 16, 1957.

With funds appropriated the following year, the Library established in August 1958 a Presidential Papers Section in its Manuscript Division "to arrange, index and microfilm the papers of the Presidents of the United States in collections of the Library of Congress," as provided in the authorizing legislation. Within two years (June 1960) the first collection had been filmed and indexed—the Zachary Taylor papers, one of the smallest presidential groups in the Library's custody. It was followed almost immediately, however, by publication of indexes to the Abraham Lincoln and William Henry Harrison papers and release of a film of the Martin Van Buren papers, all in 1960. Because the Library's comprehensive 1910 Calendar of the Van Buren papers is in print, a new index to the papers was not considered necessary for effective use of the microfilm.

Over the next five years the Library published 12 additional indexes, at least one a year and as many as four in a single year (1965). By August 1965, seven years after work was begun, 16 of the 23 presidential collections had been indexed and filmed. Nevertheless, immense indexing problems remained, especially in connection with three large 20th-century collections, the papers of Theodore Roosevelt, William Howard Taft, and Woodrow Wilson. In bulk, these three collections account for more than half the Library's holdings in presidential papers. The size of the collections, for example, necessitated publication of their indexes in multivolume sets. The Roosevelt Index was published in three volumes in 1970; the Taft, in six volumes in 1972; and the Wilson, in three volumes in 1973. Altogether, more than 3,000 reels of microfilm, reproducing more than 2 million presidential papers, have been created, with accompanying indexes.

Acceptance of the Library's Presidential Papers Program has been widespread. At this time at least one presidential collection on microfilm is available in research libraries in 47 of the 50 states and four foreign countries. Virtually complete sets of the microfilm exist in more than 30 research libraries throughout the world. In addition, the Library of Congress has made its microfilm copies of presidential papers available to many scholars through interlibrary loan and has identified for many others the location of a library in their vicinity holding the desired film. Through such means the Library has fulfilled the directive of PL 85–147: to preserve the contents of its presidential papers "for the purpose of making them more readily available for study and research to the fullest possible extent. . . ."

During the past 15 years the Library has continued to acquire individual manuscripts or small groups for addition to its holdings of presidential papers, including fairly substantial additions to the papers of Chester A. Arthur and Ulysses S. Grant, among others. Such additions, received in the Library after completion of the microfilming and indexing of a particular presidential collection, are not properly part of the program authorized by PL 85–147. Nevertheless, the Library will from time to time issue supplementary microfilm editions of these additional presidential papers (with accompanying guides) through its on-going programs for the preservation and distribution of manuscripts on microfilm. There are numerous presidential letters and documents also in nonpresidential collections filmed by the Library. For example, the Library's collection of Benjamin Franklin papers (reproduced on 12 reels of microfilm) contains letters of George Washington, John Adams, and Thomas Jefferson. And the papers of Nelson W. Aldrich, reproduced on 73 reels of microfilm, include extensive correspondence with Theodore Roosevelt and William Howard Taft.

It is satisfying to complete so ambitious and comprehensive a project as the Presidential Papers Program. It is doubly satisfying and profoundly appropriate that the project concludes with the papers of Thomas Jefferson, whose abundant spirit presides over the national library which was formed around the nucleus of his own private library. No President was more concerned than he with preservation of historical manuscripts and their widespread use for public understanding. It is, he wrote to Hugh P. Taylor, on October 4, 1823, "the duty of every good citizen to use all the opportunities, which occur to him, for preserving documents relating to the history of our country." A generation earlier, he had written to the historian Ebenezer Hazard, on February 18, 1791: "Time & Accident are committing daily havoc on the originals deposited in our public offices. . . . the lost cannot be recovered; but let us save what remains . . . by such a multiplication of copies, as shall place them beyond the reach of accident."

In that spirit and with that aim the Presidential Papers Program of the Library of Congress has been carried out.

Introduction

Provenance

A striking lack of information concerning the provenance of his papers characterizes the majority of early works on Thomas Jefferson by such diverse figures as Henry S. Randall (1858), Henry A. Washington (1853–54), Paul Leicester Ford (1892–97), and A. A. Lipscomb and A. E. Bergh (1903–04), and more recent studies by Claude G. Bowers (1925, 1936), Bernard Mayo (1942), Marie Kimball (1943, 1947, 1950), Dumas Malone (1948–), and Julian P. Boyd (1950–).[1] This deficiency was partially remedied in 1916 by Worthington Chauncey Ford in an essay which still stands as the most authoritative provenance statement on many aspects of the Jefferson papers' history, both public and private.[2] Ford's essay was complemented by the work of Helen Duprey Bullock in a 1941 article which stressed the origins of the Jefferson collection at the University of Virginia.[3]

Beyond the insights in the Ford and Bullock essays, it should be recognized that Jefferson attempted in his lifetime to remedy gaps in his correspondence; that a small but historically important group of manuscripts collected by Jefferson came to the Library of Congress in 1829; and that there were several notable accretions to the Library's holdings as recently as the 1917–22 period. It is when one investigates the rather obscure figure of Prof. Henry Augustine Washington that new understanding is gained of the tangled tale of the Jefferson manuscripts after 1850. None of these points are developed in the Ford or Bullock essays, which, although models of their kind, require both a note of caution and these additional facts to set their information in proper perspective.

The earlier history of Jefferson's papers is familiar enough to students of the third President's life. Peter Jefferson, Thomas' father, was a surveyor, planter, and county colonel and had no more than a nominal interest in preserving a body of papers. The manuscripts he possessed passed to his son at his death in 1757. Undoubtedly, his father's papers meant little to Thomas at the age of 14. Soon thereafter, the young Jefferson went to Williamsburg to pursue his collegiate and legal studies.

As a student of the law, Jefferson kept his commonplace books and a small library in his rented quarters in Williamsburg. The remainder of his papers, as well as those of his father, were at his home, Shadwell. In February 1770, Shadwell burned to the ground, and with it burned most of the papers of the two Jeffersons. Jefferson wrote to his friend John Page that the fire involved "every paper I had in the world, and almost every book. On a reasonable estimate I calculate the cost of the books burned to have been £200 sterling. . . . Of papers too of every kind I am utterly destitute. All of these, whether public or private, of business or amusement, have perished in the flames."[4] Other than the few items retrieved from the disastrous fire, Thomas Jefferson's small accumulation in Williamsburg was all that remained of his youthful correspondence. The want of pre-1770 manuscripts has, therefore, given historians an imperfect view of Jefferson's formative years.

This essay was written by Paul G. Sifton, specialist, early American history, Manuscript Division, Library of Congress.

A second catastrophe occurred when Jefferson's letterbooks as Governor of Virginia were lost during Arnold's raid on Richmond, in December 1780. To fill in this gap, insofar as possible, Jefferson borrowed, for copying, his gubernatorial letters to Washington as commander-in-chief. To a similar end, Jefferson in 1793 borrowed Gen. Horatio Gates' letterbook to copy 187 letters to 55 correspondents written during the period June 21, 1780, to October 7, 1781.[5] In both these actions, Jefferson was consciously trying to fill in gaps in the gubernatorial correspondence files for the last months of the Revolution.

Additionally, there is a mysterious gap in the 1790's, which commenced immediately after Jefferson left office as Secretary of State. Worthington Ford has stated that these particular papers were destroyed for political reasons; however, Julian P. Boyd disagrees, stating, "There is not a shred of evidence to support such a charge."[6] Fortunately, these are the only serious gaps in the extensive accumulation of manuscript materials which Jefferson left when he died on July 4, 1826, exactly 50 years after the Declaration of Independence was adopted.

Three months before his death Jefferson executed a will which bore the following codicil: "My papers of business going of course to him [his grandson, Thomas Jefferson Randolph], as my executor, all others of a literary or other character I give to him as of his own property."[7]

Sarah Nicholas Randolph, in her charming and informative work, The Domestic Life of Thomas Jefferson, has noted of Jefferson's relationship with his grandson:

> . . . Mr. Jefferson had found the cares of his large estates too great a burden for him to carry in his advancing years, and gladly handed them over into the hands of the young grandson, in whose skill and energy he expresses such perfect confidence. . . . until the day of Jefferson's death, we . . . find this grandson interposing himself, as far as possible, between his grandfather and his financial troubles, and trying to shield him, at least during his life, from the financial ruin which the circumstances of his situation made unavoidable.[8]

Thomas Jefferson Randolph, therefore, as a matter of course was given the important responsibility of guarding the papers of his illustrious grandfather.

In 1829, two important steps were taken under Randolph's supervision. The Library of Congress acquired, in addition to printed books, several bound volumes and bundles of manuscripts concerned chiefly with Virginia history. These items included the records of the Virginia Company of London (1619–24), materials relating to the General Assembly, and other colonial records, as well as notes and commentaries on such subjects as history, philosophy, and the law.[9] In addition, Randolph prepared and edited four volumes entitled Memoir, Correspondence, and Miscellanies from the Papers of Thomas Jefferson,[10] which were to be only the first of several attempts to replicate, with varying degrees of success, the correspondence of the third President.

The publication of Randolph's work led Henry Lee (1787–1837) to revive the long-standing feud between his father, Henry ("Light-Horse Harry") Lee (1756–1818), and Jefferson. In 1794, Virginia Governor Lee had passed secondhand gossip on to Washington about the President's advisers and pro-British sentiments which purportedly had been expressed at Jefferson's dinner table; and in 1796, Lee told Washington that Jefferson was involved in intrigue against his administration.[11] The publication of Jefferson's correspondence clearly indicated that he knew of and resented Lee's machinations. As Light-Horse Harry's son, Henry Lee proceeded to publish three years later the avowedly partisan Observations on the Writings of Thomas Jefferson,[12] which did little to remove the stain on his father's escutcheon.

The vivid partisanship which thus enveloped the first publication of Jefferson's correspondence led Thomas Jefferson Randolph to permit the political economist and author George Tucker (1775–1861) to see "all the letters written" by Jefferson so that he could prepare an impartial rebuttal to Lee's work. As a youth, Tucker had been sent from his native Bermuda to the care of his distant relative, St. George Tucker (1752–1829), who had succeeded Jefferson's mentor, George Wythe, as professor of law at the College of William and Mary. The young man had, therefore, come to maturity among the leading Antifederalists in the Jefferson circle. In spite of this pro-Jeffersonian background, Tucker performed extensive independent research, held many conferences with James Madison, and used a "selection of such letters and papers, never before published, as were thought to throw light on Mr. Jefferson's character."[13] The result of this research was The Life of Thomas Jefferson, a remarkably impartial and fairly successful contribution to early American history.

From 1837 until the sale of the Jefferson papers to the federal government in 1848, no one is known to have made use of the manuscripts. In a letter which Thomas Jefferson Randolph wrote to Frederick Augustus Hall Muhlenberg of Franklin College, Lancaster, Pa., on September 27, 1846, he explained the reason for declining requests to examine the papers:

> You are perhaps not aware that Mr Jeffersons estate was greatly embarrassed under the extreme depression of the period of its sale fell far short of the payment of his debts. these debts have all been discharged by myself and the sale of his M.S.S. afford the only hope I have to protect my family from the effect of an act of filial duty. Many applications are made for copies of letters; to comply would greatly impair their value and I have felt myself reluctantly compelled to decline a compliance. My contemplation is to dispose of the whole in mass where the[y] would be accessible to every one.[14]

Randolph kept the Jefferson collection intact for the period because he was aware of contemporaneous sales of the George Washington papers (1834) and the James Madison papers (1837) to the government. Later criticism directed at the incompleteness of the papers Mrs. Madison had sold to the government led Secretary of State James Buchanan to admonish Randolph to include both public and private papers in the 1848 sale.[15] In due course, the appropriation act of August 12, 1848, providing for the civil and diplomatic expenses of the government for the fiscal year 1849, contained the following item:

> For paying to Thomas Jefferson Randolph, executor of Thomas Jefferson, deceased, the sum of twenty thousand dollars, for all the papers and manuscripts of the said Thomas Jefferson: Provided, That said T. J. Randolph shall deposit all the said papers and manuscripts of a public nature in the State Department, and execute a conveyance thereof to the United States.[16]

The papers were deposited by Randolph in the Department of State for examination, in order that the private papers might be separated from the public and returned to the family. Shortly thereafter, in 1850, Randolph wrote a particularly informative description of the state of his grandfather's papers at the time of their sale to the federal government in 1848:

> The letters written by Mr. Jefferson are all arranged together in chronological order. The papers, documents, official correspondence, notes of transactions while Secretary of State to Gen: Washington, are bound in three volumes of marbled paper, marked A. B. C. The letters received are in three series alphabetically arranged—The first, received during his residence in Paris; the second, during his residence in Philadelphia as Secretary of State, Vice President

[13] George Tucker, The Life of Thomas Jefferson, 2 vols (Philadelphia: Carey, Lea & Blanchard, 1837), 1:xv. See discussion of Tucker in Dictionary of American Biography, s.v. "Tucker, George." In his preface, Tucker states that Randolph allowed him "access to all the letters written" by Jefferson and that Nicholas P. Trist, who had married Randolph's sister, made the selection mentioned in the text. W. C. Ford ("Jefferson Papers," p. 4) suggests that Trist's involvement with Jeffersonian manuscripts may imply a "possible division of the papers within the family." However, there is no definitive evidence that this group of papers either were returned to the Randolphs or the Trists, or remained in Tucker's hands.

[15] This is specifically noted in T. J. Randolph's letter of Aug. 6, 1850, to H. A. Washington, in Tucker-Coleman Papers, College of William and Mary, hereafter TCP. Microfilm copy in Henry A. Washington Collection, Manuscript Division, LC. The point is also repeated in Randolph's letter, receipt stamped Oct. 30, 1869; Miscellaneous Letters, Oct. 1869, Part II, Department of State records, National Archives and Records Service; the department's records hereafter R.G. 59, NA.

The letter concludes: "Your wish in regard to a return of such of the papers as are of a private nature, shall receive proper attention, as far as this Department is concerned."

and President at Washington; the third after his return home.

These are contained in paper boxes, open at top and back, the width and breadth of letter paper folded lengthwise; the name of the writer and date endorsed across the end, added to these are packages with the contents endorsed on the wrapper. There is also an index containing some 40,000 entries of letters written and received, partly in a bound volume and continued on loose sheets stitched together. The arrangements for reference is very convenient and it would be desirable to preserve it. . . . His private family letters were in three square boxes and not intended to be sold, but the Secretary of State Mr. Buchanan expressed a doubt as to the law and advised their deposit. . . . These I wish to reclaim as of no public value and interesting only to his family. . . .[17]

In 1850, however, few could have predicted that Henry A. Washington, based in Williamsburg, would rapidly go through the estimated 40,000 letters in his search for items suitable for a congressionally sponsored publication; that he would arbitrarily divide the Jeffersonian manuscripts into five series; that the personal papers would remain unexamined until 1869; that Randolph's heirs would not receive a portion of the personal papers until 1871; that the federal government would fail to purchase thousands of manuscripts offered to it by other descendants at bargain prices; that there would be a reappearance in 1897 of enough Jeffersonian manuscripts to fill 19 additional volumes[18]; that major segments of Jefferson's papers would be added to the Library's collections as late as 1922; or that a definitive publication of the third President's outgoing and incoming correspondence would not commence until 1950. Randolph's 1850 letter, therefore, assumes retrospective importance as confirmation of the archival integrity Jefferson maintained throughout his lifetime in the control of his priceless collection of manuscripts. It was this integrity which was to desert the collection, for a variety of reasons, for over a century after its receipt in the Department of State by Secretary James Buchanan.

On March 6, 1850, Virginia Congressman James Murray Mason, of the Joint Committee on the Library, asked Henry Augustine Washington of the College of William and Mary to edit the papers of Thomas Jefferson for publication by the government. As a grandson of George Mason, Congressman Mason believed that > it is of great importance to Virginia that this duty should be performed by one of her own citizens whose integrity & capacity may be relied on, that no injustice shall be done to the fame of M[r] Jefferson. . . .[19]

The Mason letter clearly indicates that only material deemed of a "public" nature was to be selected. Further, "It is not expected or desired that any editorial matter should be incorporated. . . ." On July 19, 1850, Professor Washington had the Jefferson papers delivered to him in a room set aside for him in the Department of State, where he worked on them for 59 days at $8.00 per day.[20] However, the most singular point of agreement, which was arrived at after some uneasiness on the part of the Joint Committee on the Library, was the removal of the Jefferson manuscripts from Washington, D.C., to Williamsburg.[21] Professor Washington was determined to maintain his full schedule of academic duties at the College of William and Mary, and by late autumn of 1850 he had persuaded the committee members to agree to the mass removal.[22]

Once the papers were in Williamsburg, Professor Washington speedily set to work copying and collating the material. Between October 1850 and August 1854, he worked 464 days and 2 hours at $6.00 per day, as well as 16 days (at $8.00 per day) in New York City editing the papers at the office of the publishers, Taylor & Maury.[23] At this time, the professor had an even more surprising innovation to suggest:

> In this connection, I take the liberty of making a suggestion which, if adopted, will greatly diminish the expenses attending the publication of the Jefferson papers. Many of the papers are not originals, but press copies & manuscript copies, carefully preserved by Mr. Jefferson.

There is a large mass of this description of papers the expense of copying [which] would be considerable – My suggestion is that [the] Editor be permitted to entrust these copies to the printer – This will save much expense and such being the case, why make copies from copies? . . . It is not proposed that, in any case, an original paper shall pass from the hands of the Editor.[24]

Although the Library Committee did not permit Washington to send the letterpress copies to the printer, he nonetheless left his mark on the letterpress and polygraph copies, often important and unique copies rather than secondary versions. Years later, Librarian of Congress Ainsworth Rand Spofford reported to the Library Committee that Professor Washington was guilty of "inaccuracies, omissions, garbled extracts and evident tampering with letters, mss., and material in his hands."[25] A 20th-century editor has also commented:

Here and elsewhere in this and other press copies by TJ, someone in the 19th century, probably employing a sharp steel pen, traced over the faint and fading lines. The motive was laudable, but the execution was often demonstrably faulty. . . . H. A. Washington was one of those who was responsible for retracing faded parts of press copies.[26]

Working with all possible speed, and in response to pressing reminders from the Joint Committee on the Library,[27] Washington finished the editing by 1853; the nine volumes of The Writings of Thomas Jefferson were published in 1853–54. In addition to editing Jefferson's papers for publication, however, Professor Washington had also agreed "to select all papers worthy of preservation among the National Archives [at the State Department], & arrange & index the same."[28] On December 31, 1853, Assistant Librarian of Congress Edward Stelle wrote on behalf of the joint committee to inquire as to the length, duration, and cost of the publishing project.[29] Professor Washington temporized on the exact length, number of volumes, and possible costs of the publication of the letters and then summed up his work on selecting and binding papers for preservation:

And, in discharge of . . . my duty, ~~between~~ some one hundred & twenty five volumes of Manuscripts have been selected, arranged, indexed, & are now ready for the hands of the binder – leaving in my possession a mass of refuse matter nearly twice as large as that which has been selected [i.e., "public" papers] for preservation among the National Archives, & which will be placed at the disposal of the Library Committee.[30]

It should be noted that the 125 volumes cited in January 1854 grew to 134 volumes by late June, and to 137 volumes, including the index, by early September. On June 30, 1854, Washington wrote to joint committee chairman James Pearce:

. . . the whole mass of the manuscript, which I received from the State Department, has been carefully examined by me, & every thing deemed worthy of preservation, has been selected, & . . . digested, arranged & indexed. . . . The manuscripts selected for preservation from the general Mass amount to one hundred & thirty four volumes, which are now in the hands of the binder under authority received from you, & which will be, when bound, returned to the Archive office, together with the General Index to the whole. The refuse matter, constituting a mass considerably larger than the selected matter, has already been deposited in the State Department in the same condition in which it was received ~~from it~~ by me.[31]

On June 27, 1854, therefore, S. Le Camp, a Washington binder, had acknowledged the receipt of "one hundred & thirty four volumes of the Jefferson

A later two-page, undated (ca. 1854) memorandum in the same collection indicates that the committee had rejected the sending of letterpress copies to the printer. manuscripts, together with an Index to the same," from Professor Washington.[32] The next day, George Chipman, of the Roll Office in the Department of State, received from the professor "three boxes containing all the Jefferson Papers, received by him from this Dept. Except that portion of the same now in the hands of the binder."[33] What was not apparent at this time, however, was that a number of Jeffersonian items may have remained in the hands of Professor and Mrs. Washington; this would be suspected only in 1912, when William K. Bixby purchased 2,500 items of Jefferson correspondence from a descendant of the two editors, George Tucker and Henry A. Washington, a topic to be discussed later.

The selection of the private papers from the unbound manuscripts was apparently overlooked at the State Department until 1869, when Thomas Jefferson Randolph wrote to complain to Secretary of State Hamilton Fish:

> Prior to the late rebellion I sold to the government, the letters and papers of President Jefferson. . . . on the delivery of those papers, Mr. Buchanan, then Secretary of State, required me to deliver his whole papers public and private; those which came under the purview of the act [August 12, 1848] and those which did not; submitting to a committee (I think the Library committee [)] to determine.
> Mr. Buchanan after the delivery give himself no further concern about it. It became impossible to get the committee to act, thus I lost private family papers of no use to any save Mr Jeffersons family, and obviously not included in the terms of the act. These if my memory does not deceive were contained in three square pine boxes marked private papers.
> These papers I desire to reclaim and you sir would lay me under great obligation could you facilitate this object.[34]

Secretary Fish replied to Randolph on November 2, 1869, that the act of August 12, 1848, appeared to him "ambiguous" and also that an examination of the department's records disclosed nothing "to show Mr. Buchanan ever contemplated the return of any portion of the papers."[35] Fish closed by saying he had no legal authority to act, and that only Congress could effect such a restitution.

The Joint Committee on the Library proved to be somewhat less dilatory and on December 13, 1869, voted to request that the secretary of state transmit the "three boxes of private papers" to the Librarian of Congress for his inspection.[36] Under congressional pressure, Secretary Fish wrote to the chairman of the joint committee, Senator Alexander G. Cattel, on December 22, 1869, a letter which was much more forthcoming than his earlier reply to Randolph's plea for restitution.

> . . . there are preserved in this Department three boxes, two of which are marked "Jefferson's Manuscripts – Refuse" and one "Jefferson's Manuscripts," which boxes contain bundles of papers, a number of which are labelled "Private – Examined." Some are the letters addressed to private individuals and others are of a miscellaneous character. . . . the fact that these boxes of papers are not entered on the list of archives in the Department printed in 1855, it seemed not unlikely that the Committee on the Library intended to recommend the restitution of them to Mr. Randolph, but that the matter had been overlooked. At all events, for the last Eight years, copies of papers in the regular five series have been called for by historians and others, but those in the boxes not at all.[37]

Fish thereupon stated that he would deliver the three boxes to Spofford or one of his agents, if they bore the chairman's "official order therefor." The 137 bound quarto volumes remained in the State Department.

On February 17, 1870, the committee resolved that after Librarian Spofford's examination of the papers, he be "authorized to return to the executor of Thomas Jefferson such of the papers of the said Jefferson as upon examination shall be deemed of a private character. . . ."[38] In spite of the allegedly disorganized condition of the joint committee in the 1870–71 period,[39] the papers adjudged private by Spofford were sent to the family. Sarah N. Randolph was able, therefore, to write in June 1871:

[39] On Apr. 11, 1871, L. M. Morrill, a member of the committee, wrote to Mrs. M. C. Sparks, a legatee of the Jared Sparks papers, that "considering the un-organized condition of the Library Committee," they would be obliged to refuse the offer of the Sparks manuscripts; Librarian's Letterbook, LC Archives.

"Jefferson's executor having a few months ago recovered from the United States Government his family letters and private papers which had been exempted from the sale of his public manuscripts," she could print letters never before published.[40]

Unfortunately, the 1870–71 selection of public and private papers was inconsistent; Spofford himself explained that those "papers which were unquestionably private" were returned to the heirs, but those "of a public nature, or partly public and partly private," were retained by the government.[41] The basic fallacy, of course, was the attempt to categorize given letters. If there is such a thing as an "average" Jefferson letter, it might touch upon such disparate subjects as crops, politics, violins, astronomy, diplomacy, and wines. In retrospect, it can be seen that any attempt to classify an entire letter was foredoomed to failure.

Thomas Jefferson Randolph died October 8, 1875, and papers in his possession passed to his daughter under a general bequest. At this point, tribute should be paid to the careful stewardship of Jefferson's papers which had been the hallmark of Randolph's life from 1826 to his death; his 1829 publication of the Memoir; the sale to the Library of Congress in the same year of an irreplaceable group of early Virginia documents; his positive reaction to Henry Lee's partisan work in seeking out George Tucker to write a new and impartial book on his grandfather; his care of the manuscripts until the sale to the government in 1848; and, finally, his valiant attempt in 1850 to convince Professor Washington to honor Jefferson's original intentions in the preservation of his priceless collection.

On February 23, 1888, Congressman Daniel W. Voorhees called the attention of the joint committee to the application of Sarah N. Randolph of Baltimore to re-edit the works of Jefferson, which she said were improperly edited and, in their published form, "very inaccurate."[42] The committee thereupon invited Miss Randolph to appear on March 1, 1888. The witness cited numerous errors in Professor Washington's nine volumes including omissions, inaccuracies, neglect, and ignorance, not to mention "tampering" with the manuscripts. In addition to preparing a new, correct, and thorough edition, Miss Randolph proposed to include documents in her family's possession which would "throw much light upon the private and public life of the great statesman, and present him in many phases of life, heretofore unknown and therefore all the more interesting to the world."[43] After the interested committee heard Miss Randolph's presentation, it directed Librarian Spofford to report to the committee at their next meeting.

For his report at the March 8, 1888, meeting, Spofford prepared a four-page memorandum which largely supported Miss Randolph's contentions of the shortcomings of Professor Washington's work. Additionally, Spofford pointed out that the original letterpress copies "are gradually fading, and may hereafter become indecipherable."[44] Spofford's most devastating criticism was reserved for his summation:

> The deficiencies of this edition are so great as to impair, and in some cases to destroy its value as an index to true opinions of Mr. Jefferson, and to his relation to the men and events of his time. . . . the fact remains that the writings of one of the foremost statesmen in American history have been given to the world in a most incomplete form, omitting far more than they contain. . . .

After hearing Spofford's sobering report, the joint committee appeared to be convinced of the necessity of a new edition of Jefferson's writings to be prepared by Miss Randolph under Spofford's general direction.[45] On April 26, 1888, and again on January 29, 1889, the joint committee came out in favor of sponsoring a new and comprehensive edition of Jefferson's "correspondence sent and received," for which Miss Randolph was to receive $2,500 a year.[46] However, by 1889 the committee was also considering the purchase of the papers in Miss Randolph's possession, none of which were duplicated in the State Department collection. The debate in Congress over the purchase continued for several years and in the meantime the editorial project was shunted aside. Sarah Randolph died on April 25, 1892, leaving the papers to her sister Caroline Ramsey Randolph.[47] The joint committee had recognized the value of reuniting the public and private collections of Jeffersonian correspondence, but it was unable to persuade Congress, and an outstanding opportunity to correct the failures of the previous generation was lost.[48]

In 1897, some 26 years after the return of the private papers to the Randolphs, those papers which had been retained by the government in 1871 came to light again during the move of the Library of Congress from the Capitol to its new building across the street. As Spofford explained in his letter of transmittal, December 29, 1897, to Secretary of State John Sherman:

> These valuable papers have just been discovered by me in the clearance effected of a room next to the Congressional Library in the Capitol, in which have been piled for many years (it being the only place under lock and key) the accumulations of manuscripts, rare books, etc. which could not be protected in the Library proper.

These Jefferson papers were sent to the Joint Committee on the Library, with others, upon an application of the heirs to have returned to them the papers of a private nature, which had been in possession of the government pending the selection of material to be published. An examination of all the papers resulted in the return by the Committee of a selection of the papers which were unquestionably private, to Miss Sarah N. Randolph, representing the heirs, leaving all which were of a public nature, or partly public and partly private, in the hands of the Committee.

This deposit, with multitudes of others, was completely overlooked by me in the multiplicity of increasing cares and labors pressing upon the librarian in the Copyright Bureau and the Library proper, and their discovery, after so many years, enables me to perform a most gratifying though tardy act of justice in restoring them to the Department. They are believed to be wholly intact.[49]

The material was added to the Jefferson holdings of the Bureau of Rolls and Library at the Department of State, which already included, according to an undated holograph list:

This is the sole characterization of the five bound series, as designated by Henry A. Washington in 1854. The list is also important for noting the existence of a number of "loose" and unbound items.

The material sent from the Library of Congress in December 1897 was bound in 19 additional volumes and formed a sixth series of Jefferson papers.[51] By an act of Congress, February 25, 1903, however, heads of government agencies were authorized to turn over to the Library of Congress "books, maps, or other material" no longer needed in the conduct of their business. The Jefferson papers formed one of the first groups to be transferred in accordance with this act and following an executive order of March 9, 1903. The Library received them on July 25, 1904. The Department of State retained two groups of Jeffersonian letters: transcripts of his Parisian letters, May 11, 1785–August 6, 1787; and his official letters, as minister to France, to Congress and to John Jay, secretary for foreign affairs. [52] In addition to the six series of bound papers, the Library of Congress received:

The Virginia Almanack for the 1773, Containing Memoranda in Jefferson's handwriting relating to money matters.

Letters to Jefferson, 1801–1804. 32 unbound mounted sheets.

Design of a Monument to Jefferson by Larkin G. Meade, 1878.[53]

Altogether, more than 55 years had elapsed before all the manuscripts obtained from Thomas Jefferson Randolph were reassembled in one place. The government had preserved all that had come to it, but its custody up to that time had been marked by apparent confusion and seeming neglect.

It should be noted in passing that in 1916 Worthington C. Ford wrote that an additional group of Jefferson manuscripts was found in "1906, or 1907" in Spofford's office.[54] This is probably an incorrect assertion because such a discovery would have been reported in the Librarian's letterbook and in other appropriate records. No such proof has been located. It is more likely that Ford misconstrued the nature of a number of groups of unbound Jefferson items either in the Bureau of Rolls and Library transfer or in the Library of Congress. We have previously noted the number of loose Jeffersonian items listed in the holdings of the State Department and in the transfer to the Library of Congress.[55] There is no conclusive proof of an additional discovery in 1907 of "upwards of two thousand pieces," in addition to the large group found in 1897 by Spofford.

Helen Duprey Bullock has covered in some detail the fortunes of the private papers returned to the Randolph family. Caroline R. Randolph inherited the papers from her sister Sarah in 1892, and in 1898, Thomas Jefferson Coolidge, a great-grandson of Thomas Jefferson, purchased from Caroline R. Randolph approximately 7,000 items, which he presented to the Massachusetts Historical Society in June of that year. A selection from these papers was printed in the Society's Collections.[56] After the death of Caroline Randolph in 1902, her remaining papers were bequeathed to three nieces, Mrs. William Mann Randolph, Cornelia J. Taylor, and Eliza Ruffin. Most of the papers owned by Mrs. Randolph were lost in a fire, and after Miss Ruffin's death in 1904 her portion was divided between the two survivors. After the death of Miss Taylor, her nieces Olivia and Margaret Taylor inherited her share of the papers and transferred them, along with many papers of the Randolph family at Edgehill, to the University of Virginia.[57]

Following in his father's footsteps, Thomas Jefferson Coolidge, Jr., in 1911 located and purchased from Mrs. William Mann Randolph and Cornelia Taylor a large group of Jefferson's architectural drawings for Monticello; these he similarly deposited in the Massachusetts Historical Society. The drawings were subsequently printed in 1916.[58]

As heir of Caroline R. Randolph, Wilson Cary Nicholas Randolph gave 62 of Jefferson's sketches

In addition, the presence of various types of Jefferson "papers" is noted in the several undated lists of material in the custody of Bureau of Rolls and Library for the period antedating 1897; R.G. 59, NA. While none of these lists are conclusive, they indicate that the existence of unbound Jefferson material was known to Ford and his contemporaries.

and plans for its original buildings to the University of Virginia, and upon here husband's death in 1907, Mrs. Randolph presented 181 drafts of letters by Jefferson concerning the University of Virginia to the Library of Congress.[59]

A final outstanding private purchase of Jeffersonian letters took place in 1912. The prominent St. Louis collector William K. Bixby acquired 2,500 pieces from George P. Coleman of Williamsburg and Richmond, whose ancestor, George Tucker, had edited the Life of Jefferson noted above. Coleman's mother had married Henry A. Washington and, after his death in 1858, Charles W. Coleman. It appears probable that the Jefferson material in the Coleman collection had come from the papers of the two editors, Tucker and Washington. Wishing to share his collection with the public, Bixby distributed more than 500 Jeffersonian items to 46 individuals and repositories, and 1,100 he presented to the Missouri Historical Society. A selection of these he printed in 1916,[60] and the Missouri Historical Society has since printed another collection.[61] Also in 1912, the Library of Congress acquired 131 "inedited letters" at a sale in Philadelphia.[62]

In 1917 the Library acquired an important group of about 300 Jefferson letters dating from 1774 to 1826, most of which were addressed to Thomas Mann Randolph, together with several bound volumes and miscellaneous papers.[63] The materials included Jefferson's memorandum book and diary (1779–82), two of his commonplace books, notes on religion, verses in Greek, Latin, and English, copies of early legal instruments and precedents, a holograph library catalog listing the books Jefferson had accumulated after the sale of his first library to the government, and an annotated copy of the 1801 edition of the manual of parliamentary practice for the use of the United States Senate.[64] These Randolph family papers no longer constitute a separate group: the Jefferson-Thomas Mann Randolph correspondence has been chronologically interfiled in the Jefferson Papers; the other types of material are now in the Jefferson Collection, Rare Book Division, and following the main correspondence series in the Manuscript Division's Jefferson Papers.

Also in 1917, the Library received from Col. Jefferson Kean three Jefferson memorandum books of household and legal matters, 1768–70.[65] Bullock has noted the location of all the Jefferson account books; photostatic sets of the entire group are available to scholars in the University of Virginia and in the Library of Congress.[66]

Some 18 years after the large transfer of 1904, the Department of State on January 4, 1922, transferred in accordance with the provisions of Executive Order 3594, dated December 19, 1921, Jefferson's annotated rough draft of the Declaration of Independence, his directions for his epitaph and gravestone, and a letter, dated September 16, 1825, concerning the Graff House in which he composed the Declaration.[67]

Of these, the treasure was the rough draft. Its history belied its incomparable importance in national life. Even the hard-pressed Professor Washington, in an undated draft memorandum (probably mid-July 1850), was struck by the poor condition of the document which had come with the papers Thomas Jefferson Randolph sold to the government in 1848:

> Many of the ~~manuscripts~~ papers are very valuable & should be by all means be carefully preserved.

[67] Three receipts signed by Charles Moore, Jan. 4, 1922; Manuscript Division files, LC.

> Among them is the original draught Declaration of Independence as reported by Mr. J. to the Committee appointed to prepare a Declaration, with interlineations by Mr. Adams & Dr. Franklin in their own handwriting. . . . The original rough Draught of the Del. of In. to which I have alluded, is in a very frail state—Since Step[s] should be taken for its preservation without delay—I believe that the draught of the Declaration should be joined together if the Committee so desires.[68]

According to a January 1922 report on the condition of the rough draft after its arrival in the Library the document had been "slightly repaired" and joined together while in the State Department's custody.[69] Additionally, as Julian Boyd has pointed out, the rough draft has been subjected to facsimile reproduction several times.[70] The Manuscript Division holds at least five examples of such copies taken from the rough draft while it was in the custody of the State Department.[71] Since its arrival in the Library, the document has undergone additional preservation measures and has frequently been on display in the Library's Main Building.

The last important group of Jeffersonian manuscripts was transferred from the Department of State to the Library on August 30, 1922. This group of letters and papers pertaining to the establishment of the District of Columbia was an artificial collection created by the Department from the manuscript collections of George Washington, John Adams, Thomas Jefferson, James Madison, James Monroe, and others. The 10 bound volumes of material also included the letters and papers of such figures as Benjamin H. Latrobe, Pierre Charles L'Enfant, and Andrew Ellicott, and covered the period 1790–1816. Manuscripts in this group belonging to presidential collections in the Manuscript Division have been restored to their respective collections. The Jefferson material has not been chronologically interfiled in the Jefferson Papers, but remains a separate District of Columbia series which follows the main chronological series in the collection. The Library has since acquired other Jefferson items as additions to the Jefferson Papers and other collections, or as separate purchases or gifts.[72] These, with the scattered holdings among what Henry Randall called a "multitude of inheritors,"[73] complete the record of the collection Thomas Jefferson bequeathed to Thomas Jefferson Randolph in 1826.

From the four series of published writings of Jefferson, edited in sequence by Randolph, Henry A. Washington, Paul Leicester Ford, and A. A. Lipscomb and A. E. Bergh, much of the public and some of the private life of the man was revealed. However, it was not until 1950 that the authoritative edition, The Papers of Thomas Jefferson, was started, under the editorship of Julian Parks Boyd; this will appear in a projected series of 40 to 50 volumes.[74] Thus for the first time scholars will be able to read most of Jefferson's incoming and outgoing correspondence in letterpress form. The Boyd volumes will attempt, in printed form, to restore the Jefferson papers to the archival care and historiographical thoroughness which they possessed when Jefferson bequeathed them to his favorite grandson.

How to Use This Index

The index to the Thomas Jefferson Papers is designed primarily as a means of ascertaining what documents are in this collection and where they may be found in the microfilm reproduction. Thomas Jefferson letters in other collections in the Library of Congress or elsewhere are not indexed in this volume. This work is essentially a name index, listing the names of writers and recipients of letters and other documents, alphabetically first, and then chronologically when the name appears more than once.

This is not a subject index, but most public statements, memoranda, and other noncorrespondence writings are indexed with subject or title subheadings under the name of the writer. Some miscellaneous writings of unknown authorship are indexed under a subject or title entry.

To find a document, note the series number (column S) and the date of the document under the main entry, then turn to the document in its sequence in the appropriate series. The physical arrangement of each series is detailed in the section entitled "Description of the Papers."

This index was produced by the use of electronic data-processing equipment, a procedure which imposed certain limitations. Some of the peculiarities of this work are illustrated in the sample entries following this explanation, and the list of abbreviations explains other usages.

The names of correspondents, including organizations and government agencies, are arranged alphabetically in column 1. A letter not written to or by President Jefferson is indexed by both writer and recipient (see lines 10 and 13 in the sample entries). Correspondence on behalf of an organization is indexed under the name of the organization rather than the name of the signer. Local organizations are indexed under their geographical location. Except for the largest cities the name of the town or county is followed by the abbreviated state name (lines 1 and 4).

When only the surname of a correspondent is known the entry bears the surname followed by three dashes (line 9). If a document is unsigned or if the signature is illegible, the entry is indexed under "Unknown." An asterisk preceding a name or a date indicates that the editors have supplied information not found on the document. Abbreviations of months have been reduced to two letters.

The number of pages given for an item (column P) includes only pages bearing the text. The page count does not include covers, docketing, endorsements, or sheets bearing only file numbers. The addenda column of the index entry has been used as a catch-all for supplementary information. Documents other than letters are identified by form in this column (lines 7, 11, and 12). Foreign-language documents are identified by language in the addenda (line 9). When a manuscript for some reason is not in a normal chronological or alphabetical order on the microfilm—for instance, an enclosure filed with its covering letter rather than under its own date—a "location reference" in the addenda gives the location of the out-of-sequence item (lines 5 and 10). A "location reference" usually consists of the last name of the correspondent and the date of the document immediately preceding the out-of-sequence item.

Entries for Jefferson's manuscript volumes of Virginia laws and historical records from his library (Series 8) carry in the addenda the item number of the volume's description in Millicent Sowerby's Catalogue of the Library of Thomas Jefferson (Washington, 1952) or are identified as a volume from his books sold at auction in 1829 (lines 15 and 16).
