Scope and Content Note

The records of Blair & Rives, Washington, D.C., publishers of the daily Washington, D.C., Globe and weekly Congressional Globe newspapers, span the years 1821-1905, with the bulk of the material from 1830 to 1848. The collection consists of general correspondence, 1821-1871, and miscellany, 1826-1905.

The general correspondence consists chiefly of the day-to-day business operations of the Globe. Many letters are readers' responses to issues discussed in the newspaper and usually concern national political topics, especially the rechartering of the Second Bank of the United States. There are also letters between Francis P. Blair (1791-1876) and John C. Rives about financial matters. Letters written from the period 1847-1855 by Andrew Jackson (1809-1865), Francis P. Blair, his son Frank P. Blair, and Godfrey M. Fogg, concern their efforts to protect President Andrew Jackson's homestead, the "Hermitage," from creditors. Other letters, 1828-1848, sent to Benjamin B. French, Henry S. Foote, and John E. Norris, the secretary of Washington's Jackson Democratic Association, concern that organization's activities. Correspondents also include Mark Alexander, Henry Baldwin, James L. Blair, Benjamin Gratz Brown, John R. Church, Warren R. Davis, Henry Dilworth Gilpin, Duff Green, William H. Haywood, Jr., John C. Harris, William A. Harris, John W. Hungerford, Ralph Isaac Ingersoll, Amos Kendall, Robert Mayo, Alfred O. P. Nicholson, David Settle Reid, Thomas Ritchie, Benjamin G. Shields, Lawrence Taliaferro, William Wirt, and Silas Wright, Jr.

The miscellany contains legal documents, bills and receipts, and printer's copy and proofs for government and private printing work produced in the Blair & Rives establishment. Also in the miscellany is genealogical material relating to the Arthur Donaldson, Franklin Rives, John Tree, and Hubell families, and research notes by Jeannie (Mrs. Franklin) Rives concerning the history of Washington, D.C., during the Civil War.
