Scope and Content Note

The papers of Francis Winslow (1818-1862) span the years 1833-1863 and parallel his naval career, which began with his appointment as a midshipman at age fifteen in 1833 and a cruise to Brazil in 1834 and ended in 1862 with his death at sea of yellow fever while commanding a gunboat. The collection, consisting mostly of correspondence, journals, and logs, is arranged alphabetically by type of material and thereunder chronologically.

General correspondence, all with his wife, Mary Nelson Winslow, or with other family members, is arranged alphabetically by name of correspondent. Elizabeth Winslow Pickering, addressed as "mother" in Winslow's correspondence with her, was an aunt who raised Winslow when his mother died during his infancy. J. J. Wilkins, whom Winslow addressed as "aunty" in correspondence, was his wife's aunt.

The letterbook documents Winslow's only independent commands of the gunboats Water Witch and R. R. Cuyler during Civil War blockade duty in Louisiana, Alabama, and Florida waters.

The official correspondence, consisting of orders, appointments, notifications of promotions, letters from commanding officers, and a minor incident report, summarize Winslow's career from his appointment as midshipman in 1833 to his commission as a lieutenant in 1844.

A journal dated 1834-1837 covers Winslow's first cruise to South America aboard the Brandywine (frigate) and his subsequent duty on the Brazil Station and ashore at Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, Montevideo, Uruguay, Buenos Aires, Argentina, and other locations, as well as aboard the Erie (sloop-of-war) and other vessels.

A journal and log dated 1839-1842 is an account of Winslow's cruises on the sloops-of-war Marion and Dale in Atlantic and Pacific South American waters. A journal and log spanning the years 1854-1859 relates to cruises on sloops-of-war Falmouth and Saratoga and the Merrimack (frigate), flagship of the Pacific Squadron.

The oversize passport was issued by the United States consul at Leghorn (Livorno, Italy) in 1851 during a period spanning 1849-1852 when Winslow was cruising the Mediterranean aboard the frigate Independence. Information from this and other periods not documented by his journals, such as his cruise aboard the Washington (brig) from 1847 to 1848 during the Mexican War, is included in Winslow's lengthy letters to his wife in the general correspondence.

In 1935 Winslow's son, Arthur, published Francis Winslow, His Forebears and Life, largely based on these papers. However, material used for the book did not include the earliest and most engaging journal of 1834-1837 relating to Winslow's midshipman cruises at Brazil Station.
