

James Madison Papers

A Finding Aid to the Collection in the Library of Congress

Prepared by Manuscript Division staff

Manuscript Division, Library of Congress

Washington, D.C.

2009

Contact information: <http://lcweb.loc.gov/rr/mss/address.html>

Finding aid encoded by Library of Congress Manuscript Division, 2009

Finding aid URL: <http://hdl.loc.gov/loc.mss/eadmss.ms009141>

Collection Summary

Title: James Madison Papers

Span Dates: 1723-1859

Bulk Dates: (bulk 1771-1836)

ID No.: MSS31021

Creator: Madison, James, 1751-1836

Extent: 12,000 items; 103 containers plus 3 oversize; 33 linear feet; 28 microfilm reels

Language: Collection material in English

Repository: Manuscript Division, Library of Congress, Washington, D.C.

Abstract: United States president and secretary of state, delegate to the United States Continental Congress, and United States representative from Virginia. Correspondence, memoranda, autobiography, notes of debates in the Continental Congress (1776) and the Federal Convention (1787), and related material.

Selected Search Terms

The following terms have been used to index the description of this collection in the Library's online catalog. They are grouped by name of person or organization, by subject or location, and by occupation and listed alphabetically therein.

Personal Names

Ambler, Jaquelin, 1742-1798--Correspondence.

Barbour, James, 1775-1842--Correspondence.

Barlow, Joel, 1754-1812--Correspondence.

Crawford, William Harris, 1772-1834--Correspondence.

Dearborn, Henry, 1751-1829--Correspondence.

Gallatin, Albert, 1761-1849--Correspondence.

Gerry, Elbridge, 1744-1814--Correspondence.

Hamilton, Alexander, 1757-1804--Correspondence.

Jefferson, Thomas, 1743-1826--Correspondence.

King, Rufus, 1755-1827--Correspondence.

Lee, Henry, 1756-1818--Correspondence.

Madison, Dolley, 1768-1849--Correspondence.

Madison, James, 1751-1836.

Monroe, James, 1758-1831--Correspondence.

Pendleton, Edmund, 1721-1803--Correspondence.

Randolph, Edmund, 1753-1813--Correspondence.

Rodney, C. A. (Caesar Augustus), 1772-1824--Correspondence.

Rush, Benjamin, 1746-1813--Correspondence.

Rush, Richard, 1780-1859--Correspondence.

Trist, Nicholas Philip, 1800-1874--Correspondence.

Washington, George, 1732-1799--Correspondence.

White, Alexander, 1738-1804--Correspondence.

Organizations

United States. Constitutional Convention (1787)

United States. Continental Congress.

Locations

United States--History--Confederation, 1783-1789.

United States--History--Constitutional period, 1789-1809.

United States--History--War of 1812.

United States--Politics and government--1809-1817.

Related Names

James Madison Papers, 1723-1836.

Occupations

Cabinet officers.

Delegates, U.S. Continental Congress--Virginia.

Presidents--United States.

Representatives, U.S. Congress--Virginia.

Administrative Information

Provenance:

The papers of James Madison, United States president and secretary of state, delegate to the United States Continental Congress, and United States representative from Virginia, were received by the Library of Congress as gifts, transfers, deposits, and purchases, 1905-1989.

Processing History:

The James Madison papers were arranged, indexed, and microfilmed in 1965. Subsequent additions were arranged and described in 1979, and a finding aid to the additions was revised and expanded in 1996. In 2009 the finding aid was expanded by including description of the main collection from the published index.

Additional Guides:

The microfilm edition of these papers (not including additions) is indexed in the Index to the James Madison Papers (Washington: 1965), prepared as part of the President's Papers Index Series.

Other Repositories:

Microfilm of other James Madison material is also available for consultation in the Manuscript Division including letters to Madison from Jonathan Dayton and papers in the Andre De Coppet collection, both copied from originals in the Princeton University Library. Dallas-Jones correspondence was copied from originals at the Historical Society of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia, and a card index in the University of Virginia Library has also been reproduced for the Library.

Copyright Status:

The status of copyright in the unpublished writings of James Madison is governed by the Copyright Law of the United States (Title 17, U.S.C.).

Access and Restrictions:

The papers of James Madison are open to research. Researchers are advised to contact the Manuscript Reading Room prior to visiting. Many collections are stored off-site and advance notice is needed to retrieve these items for research use.

Microfilm:

A microfilm edition of part of these papers is available on twenty-eight reels. Consult reference staff in the Manuscript Division concerning availability for purchase or interlibrary loan. To promote preservation of the originals, researchers are required to consult the microfilm edition as available.

Online Content:

The first six series of the James Madison Papers are available on the Library of Congress Web site at http://memory.loc.gov/ammem/collections/madison\_papers/.

Preferred Citation:

Researchers wishing to cite this collection should include the following information: Container or reel number, James Madison Papers, Manuscript Division, Library of Congress, Washington, D.C.

Biographical Note

Date	Event
1751, Mar. 16	Born, Port Conway, King George County, Va.
1771	Bachelor of Arts, College of New Jersey, Princeton, N.J.
1774	Member, Committee of Safety, Orange County, Va.
1776	Orange County delegate, Virginia Convention and General Assembly, Williamsburg, Va.
1777-1779	Member, Virginia Council of State
1780-1783	Delegate from Virginia, Continental Congress
1784-1786	Orange County delegate, Virginia House of Delegates Read law in Orange and Richmond, Va.
1786-1788	Delegate, Continental Congress
1787	Member, Constitutional Convention
1787-1788	Contributor to The Federalist Papers
1788	Delegate, Virginia ratifying convention to vote on federal constitution
1789-1797	Representative, United States House of Representatives
1794	Married Dolley Payne Todd
1799-1801	Orange County representative, Virginia House of Delegates
1801-1809	Secretary of state
1809-1817	President of the United States
1812-1815	Commander-in-chief, War of 1812
1817	Retired to Montpelier estate, Orange County, Va.
1829	Delegate, Virginia Constitutional Convention
1836, June 28	Died, Montpelier, Va.

History of the Collection

[From Index to the James Madison Papers (Washington, D.C.: 1965), pp. v-ix]

The tangled story of the dispersal of the papers of James Madison is told in some detail in the introduction to the first volume of the edition of Madison's papers now being published by the University of Chicago Press. That account refers to Madison's giving manuscripts as mementos to his kin and sending clipped signatures to autograph collectors. It continues by tracing the segmentation of the papers after Madison's death in 1836: the sale to the Federal Government by Mrs. Dolley Payne Madison, to whom the papers had been bequeathed, of a fraction of the whole in 1837 and, in 1848, of what she considered to be "all the unpublished papers" of her husband then in her possession; the long-time loan of many of these papers by the Department of State to William Cabell Rives, Madison's first biographer, and the eventual return of only a part of the borrowed material; the withdrawal by Mrs. Madison's son, John Payne Todd, prior to 1848 and probably without his mother's knowledge, of a large number of the papers, which he later turned over to James C. McGuire of Washington, D.C.; and the wide dispersal of these manuscripts after Mr. McGuire's death, when much of his collection was sold in a series of public auctions. [1]

Over the years the Library of Congress has fortunately been able to reassemble a good many, but not nearly all, of the papers that were in James Madison's possession at the time of his death. This account will tell how various segments that now compose the Library's James Madison Papers have been brought together and will include a few additional details of the early history of these segments in the hope that they will be helpful to those using the papers.

In 1881, when the Library was still housed in cramped quarters in the United States Capitol and its manuscript holdings were few in number, it received from James Madison Cutts II, great-nephew of James Madison, a copybook filled with the latter's youthful writing, notes on "A Brief System of Logick" which he is believed to have recorded in his junior or senior year at the College of New Jersey. [2] Some 20 years later, after the Library had moved to a building of its own, and a section devoted exclusively to manuscripts had been created, the recipient's copy of a letter of May 13, 1805, from Madison to F.J. Wichelhausen was purchased from a dealer in Germany. The first substantial Madison accession, however, was received in March 1905, when most of the papers the Government had purchased from Mrs. Madison in 1837 and 1848 [3] were transferred from the Department of State to the Library in accordance with an Executive order of March 9, 1903. A few important manuscripts—Madison's autograph notes of debates in the Federal Convention of 1787 and certain related papers—were retained by the Department at that time. These came to the Library in 1922. [4]

The transferred material comprised many significant manuscripts. It included, for example, some papers of the elder James Madison, which helped to supply information about his son's early years. A long and important series of letters James Madison and Thomas Jefferson exchanged over a period of almost 50 years was well represented, and there were other valuable manuscripts. Nevertheless, many papers that should have been in the group were missing. A draft of only one letter from Madison to his Secretary of War, John Armstrong, was included, and there were no letters at all from four Virginia colleagues and friends with whom Madison had corresponded regularly—George Washington, Joseph Jones, Edmund Randolph, and Edmund Pendleton.

The Government was well aware, at least as early as 1855, that it had not received all of the papers that Mrs. Madison had received by bequest from her husband. In that year, Secretary of State William L. Marcy referred for consideration to the Attorney General, Caleb Cushing, certain documents that related to the portion taken by John Payne Todd and sold or bequeathed by him to James C. McGuire; and he asked Cushing's opinion as to the expediency of instituting legal proceedings in the name of the United States to recover possession. The Attorney General decided that Mrs. Madison had put a "construction" on the act of Congress for the purchase of the Madison papers in 1848 and that James Buchanan, then Secretary of State, had not objected to that construction and had accepted delivery of what he deemed essential to the execution of the act.

He concluded that it was "not expedient to institute legal proceedings for the purpose of recovering the manuscripts supposed to be in the possession of Mr. McGuire." [5]

The collector apparently made no secret of the fact that he had a number of Madison's papers. In 1856 he published "Jonathan Bull & Mary Bull," Madison's allegory on the Missouri question, from the original manuscript in his collection and, from 1857 on, he assisted William C. Rives in his work on Madison's biography by allowing him on several occasions to examine and even to borrow some of the manuscripts. [6] He evidently allowed others to see the material also, because in 1859 he wrote Rives: "I have been called upon several times recently by Gentleman whom I wished to oblige to see some original papers of mine, now in your possession. As the time is long past at which you proposed to return them, and presuming you are done with them, I would be much obliged if you would return them . . . by the Meeting of Congress." During the Civil War, McGuire had copies of certain Madison manuscripts made at Rives' request and directed them to the latter's Virginia estate of Castle Hill through the Adjutant General's office. The copies were returned to the sender, however, and only after the war was he able to ask Rives whether they would still be of use to him. [7] McGuire also cooperated with Philip R. Fendall, joint editor with Rives of the "Congressional edition" of Madison's Letters, by allowing copies of a substantial number of his Madison papers to be made and added to the fourth volume. [8].

After McGuire's death, the executors of his estate authorized the sale of just over 2,900 of his holdings of Madison papers at an auction held at Thomas Birch's Sons, in Philadelphia, on December 6-7, 1892 [9]. New York dealer Walter R. Benjamin was the successful bidder for many, but not all, of the McGuire materials in this sale, and 2 months later, in February 1893, a $10,000 gift from Marshall Field enabled the Chicago Historical Society to buy many, but again not all, of the manuscripts Mr. Benjamin had acquired at the auction. Finally, in 1910, the Library of Congress was able to buy the entire group owned by the Society for the price it had paid. [10]

An even 1,100 of the manuscripts thus added to the main body of Madison papers were drafts or recipients' copies of letters Madison wrote between 1780, when he first became a delegate from Virginia to the Continental Congress, and 1836, the year of his death. There were in addition a large volume containing 85 letters written to Madison by John Armstrong while he was Minister to France and Madison's Secretary of War (1804-14); a volume containing 122 letters from Joseph Jones, longtime judge of the general court of Virginia and colleague and close friend of Madison and of Washington (1780-1804); and a volume containing 132 letters from Edmund Randolph, Attorney General and later Secretary of State under Washington (1782-1812). All of this material has now been interfiled in series 1, with the papers purchased from Mrs. Madison, but the symbol "Ac. 1081" on each of the manuscripts received from the Chicago Historical Society serves to identify them.

A third large segment came to the Library in an unexpected way in March 1940, when Mrs. Philip M. Rhinelander, the widow of Bishop Rhinelander, deposited the papers of William C. Rives and other members of the Rives family which her husband had received shortly before his death from the estate of the diplomat's grandson, Dr. William C. Rives. This extensive body of papers was in no discernible arrangement when it was received in the Library, and it required piece by piece examination and sorting. Gradually, one after another, a manuscript in Madison's writing or a letter addressed to him emerged. One whole wooden box marked with the cryptic label "1931 Important" proved to be filled almost entirely with Madison papers. When the arrangement of the whole collection was completed, there was a group of almost 900 manuscripts composed of papers of the fourth President. There were letters Madison had received from Thomas Jefferson and James Monroe, from Judge Spencer Roane and other prominent men. Madison's own writings in the group included, as one of a number, his lengthy "Detached Memoranda." [11]

What had happened was obvious. Many of Madison's papers had become mixed with William C. Rives' own papers while he was working on them at his estate of Castle Hill, near Charlottesville, Virginia. In 1875 he had been permitted to borrow from the Department of State all of the Madison papers purchased from Mrs. Madison; it was 1865—after the papers had fortunately come through the Civil War years without damage—that he returned two trunks of them to Washington. Perhaps a few in the group retained by Rives were manuscripts he referred to as having been "placed at his disposal by private courtesy," but surely most of them had been part of the Department of State loan.

In April 1946 Mrs. Rhinelander generously converted the Rives collection from a revocable deposit to a gift. Except for three fragments that were removed in order to complete manuscripts in the main body of Madison papers, the Madison material received in this gift has been kept as a unit. Now bound in eight volumes, this segment forms series 2 of the Library's Madison Papers.

In addition to the three large segments mentioned above, the Library has from time to time acquired single manuscripts or small groups to strengthen its Madison holdings. Many of these became available with the sale or resale of Madison papers once in James C. McGuire's possession, or when material owned by Madison kin came on the market. [12] A group of 43 manuscripts, composed almost entirely of letters addressed to Madison between 1817 and 1836, was acquired at the American Art Association sale of February 26, 1917; these manuscripts, which had been part of the collection of Frederick B. McGuire, a son of James C. McGuire, bear the identifying mark "Ac. 1817" and are filed in series 1 of the Madison Papers. Similarly, John C. Payne's biographical sketch of James Madison and 17 other manuscripts dated between 1795 and 1842 were purchased in 1922 from Walter R. Benjamin of New York and are marked "Ac. 2696." A group of 46 miscellaneous manuscripts which had been part of a sale held by Stan. V. Henkels, Jr., on October 13, 1933, was acquired the following year; this material, containing Madison's autograph account with the Commonwealth of Virginia for his salary and expenses as a public official, copies of Madison's own will and of the wills of his parents and his wife, and other family material, are bound with his manuscript autobiography in a separate series (series 4).

Of single manuscripts that may be noticed are three autograph letters from George Washington to Madison, which formed lots 37, 59, and 60 at the McGuire sale in 1892 but which were acquired by the Library from a dealer in 1921 and a collector in 1924; two letters from Thomas Jefferson to Madison, dated May 26, 1811, and October 11, 1824, and a 1787 memorandum on state representation in the federal legislature which George Mason submitted to Madison, all of which were in Mr. McGuire's possession at one time; and James Madison's autobiography, mentioned above, and his notes on Wirt's life of Patrick Henry.

Three manuscripts were received separately, from 1924 to 1926, from James C. McGuire II, grandson and namesake of the man to whom John Payne Todd originally turned over so many of Madison's papers, and also the great-grandson of William Madison, brother of the President. [13] These were letters to Madison from Thomas Jefferson Randolph (July 8, 1826) and from his brother, William Madison (December 3, 1791) and a family tree Madison is believed to have drawn between 1813 and 1819. [14] Further evidence of the wide dispersal of Madison's papers is to be found in a letter this donor wrote to the acting chief of the Manuscript Division soon after he had sent his first gift to the Library (December 17, 1924):

I received the official acknowledgement of the Randolph letter. I have given away a quantity of letters similar to these as I never supposed the Government would want them. I gave away a letter recently from Thomas Jefferson outlining his ideas in connection with the University of Virginia which I sent to the University. In going through my papers I will be glad to remember this and if I come across any letters on national matters written by American Statesmen, I will be glad to send them to you. [15]

In addition to enlarging the Madison Papers with material that would once have been retained by him, the Library has also added, whenever possible, recipients' copies of his letters. [16] In this it has followed a practice Madison himself started. He had not been careful to keep copies of the letters he wrote, as had his friend Thomas Jefferson, and after he retired to Montpelier in 1817 and started to put his papers in order for posthumous publication, he attempted to remedy this and "fill up the chasms" in his papers by seeking the return of letters he had sent to a number of correspondents. He was so successful that the hundreds of recipients' copies one would not normally expect to find in his papers is one of their distinguishing characteristics. Most of the original letters that were returned to him were those he had written to five Virginians—Joseph Jones, James Monroe, Edmund Pendleton, Edmund Randolph, and Thomas Jefferson. [17] In only a few cases has it been possible to find evidence of exactly when and from whom he received the letters.

The recipient's copies of 10 letters from Madison to Joseph Jones, all written in 1780, were apparently returned to the writer by James Monroe, Judge Jones' nephew and executor, in 1819 or 1820. Madison hoped to get more of these, however, and wrote Monroe:

In looking over the bundle of my letters to Mr. Jones I find one dated in Decr. 1780, containing a statement of what passed in the old congress relative to the proposed cession of the Miss[iss]ippi to Spain, corresponding precisely with my recollection of it as explained to you. I was disappointed in finding that my letters to him are limited to that year. My correspondence ran through a much longer period, of which I have proofs on hand, and from the tenor of the above letters, and my intimacy with him, I have no doubt that my communications were often of an interesting character. Perhaps the remaining letters or a part of them may have escaped your search. Will you be so good as to renew it whenever & wherever the convenient opportunity may admit. [18]

President Monroe, writing from Washington the following month, replied that all of his "interesting" papers, "including those of our late friend Judge Jones," were in Albemarle County, Virginia. He promised that "when I return there I will make another search for your letters to him not included among those already delivered to you." [19] The search, if it took place, seems to have been unsuccessful, because only the 1780 letters are now among Madison's papers. At an undetermined time, however, Madison managed to retrieve more than 100 letters he had written to Monroe.

According to Madison's later references, it was Thomas Jefferson himself who returned a number of the letters he had received from Madison, although the exact time he did this has not been discovered. After checking the other side of the correspondence, however, Madison decided that he still lacked about 70 letters he had written to Jefferson between 1799 and 1818, and, after the latter's death, he turned for information and assistance on these, and on the subjects of any letters between 1783 and 1799 as well, to Nicholas P. Trist, who had married one of Jefferson's granddaughters and was living at Monticello. Trist seems to have labored under difficulties, because more than six months later Madison wrote him: "I am sorry you thought an apology necessary for the delay in sending me the residue of my letters to Mr. Jefferson, and rather surprized that you should be scrupulous of reading them. I took for granted that you would regard them, as on his files, equally open tho less entitled to inspection than his to me." He suggested that Trist wait for a "private & direct conveyance" if such were in prospect, and late in January 1828 "Mr. Randolph"—presumably Thomas Jefferson Randolph—delivered the bundle to Madison. [20] That Trist was efficient in carrying out the assignment is shown by the few Madison letters that remain in the Thomas Jefferson Papers. [21]

It has been possible in this note only to suggest the material that will, and will not, be found in Madison's papers in the Library of Congress. The complete story of the scattering of his papers will unfold only as succeeding volumes of The Papers of James Madison are published.

Note: This essay was written by Dorothy S. Eaton, Specialist in Early American History, Manuscript Division, Library of Congress.

1. The Papers of James Madison, edited by William T. Hutchinson and William M. E. Rachal, vol. 1 (Chicago, 1962), pp. xv-xxv. This is cited hereafter as Papers.

2. Ibid., p. 33. Extracts from this copybook (now item 1 of series 6 of the Madison Papers) are printed on pp. 34-41.
3. Statutes at Large, V, 271; and IX, 235.
4. Somewhat more than 8,600 manuscripts were transferred in 1905: Madison's correspondence, bound in 11 volumes of "Writings of Madison" and 63 volumes of "Writings to Madison"; his autograph notes of proceedings of the Continental Congress in 1782, 1783, and 1787, in 16 small gatherings; 4 memorandum books containing his autograph notes on exports and navigation, on the Articles of Confederation, on government, and on natural history (now series 6, items 2, 3, 4, and 9, respectively); Thomas Jefferson's copy of his notes on the proceedings of the Continental Congress, June 7-August 1, 1776, which he sent to Madison with a letter of June 1, 1783 (series 5, item 1); 5 volumes of printed material and Madison's copy of Philip Freneau's National Gazette (transferred to the Library's Rare Book Division in 1940); a portfolio of newspaper clippings; and John C. Payne's 2-volume copy of Madison's notes of debates and related papers. A calendar of the correspondence, which reflected the above arrangement, was published as Bulletin of the Bureau of Rolls and Library of the Department of State, No. 4 (Washington, 1894).
5. Official Opinions of the Attorneys General of the United States, Advising the President and Heads of Departments in Relation to Their Official Duties, edited by Christopher C. Andrews, vol. VII (1861), pp. 104-108. The original opinion, partly autographic and with autograph initials, April 4, 1855, is in the records of the Attorney General's Office in the National Archives (Caleb Cushing Papers, Legal File, Box 237).
6. When Edward Coles, who had served as Madison's secretary for a time, heard that William C. Rives was going to examine the McGuire collection, he was reminded that Madison had been apprehensive about the dispersal of his papers after his death, and feared that some of them might be stolen and altered. Coles asked Rives to check the accuracy of the texts in James C. McGuire's edition of Selections from the Private Correspondence of James Madison from 1813 to 1836 (Washington, 1853) by comparing them with manuscripts; apparently he had forgotten or was not aware that this edition was based on manuscripts that Mrs. Madison had sold to the Government. Coles to Rives, February 3 and June 19, 1857. William C. Rives Papers, Library of Congress.
7. James C. McGuire to William C. Rives, November 17, 1859, and February 3, 1866. William C. Rives Papers, Library of Congress.
8. Letters and Other Writings of James Madison Fourth President of the United States (Philadelphia, 1865. 4 vols.)
9. Stan. V. Henkels Catalogue No. 694 (December 6-7, 1892): Washington—Madison Papers Collected and Preserved by James Madison . . . (Philadelphia, 1892). The material belonging to the McGuire estate formed the first 139 lots in this sale, and items 1-75 were for the most part single autograph letters from George Washington to James Madison, which were sold to a number of purchasers. The important series of letters from Edmund Pendleton to Madison (lot 77) has dropped from sight, and historians are dependent, for a partial substitute, on transcripts of 46 of the 135 letters that were made for Peter Force while the letters were owned by Mr. McGuire. These, and transcripts of 24 additional Pendleton letters, not apparently included in the sale, are in Force Transcripts, Miscellaneous Letters (J-P), Library of Congress. Also available are Force transcripts of lot 83, composed of keys and ciphers used by Madison in his correspondence with Thomas Jefferson, Edmund Randolph, Edmund Pendleton, and others.
10. Announcement of the gift and a brief description of the material appears in Chicago Historical Society Proceedings, vol. 1 (1888-1902), pp. 89-94. The material Mr. Benjamin sold to the Society, and which is now in the Library of Congress, composed lots 76, 78, 79, 80, 81, 86, and 89 in the Birch sale and totalled 1,439 manuscripts. This was less than half of the Madison materials sold at that time.

11. The text is printed in "Madison's 'Detached Memoranda'," edited by Elizabeth Fleet, in The William and Mary Quarterly, Third Series, III, no. 4 (October 1946), [534]-568.
12. Several of the more important of these sales, including that by the American Art Association, are noted in Papers, I, xxii.
13. Letter, James C. McGuire II to the Library of Congress, September 28, 1926. James Madison Papers case file, Manuscript Division, Library of Congress.
14. A facsimile of this manuscript forms one of the illustrations in Papers, I, between pages 212 and 213.
15. Letter in James Madison Papers case file, Manuscript Division, Library of Congress.
16. One group of 14 letters written by Madison to Tench Coxe between 1787 and 1821 was acquired in 1922, and as many more have been added singly or in smaller groups over the years. The recipient's copy of a brief letter James Madison wrote to the Reverend Doctor John Mitchell Mason of New York City on January 12, 1810, and the copy it enclosed of a speech delivered by Alexander Hamilton in the Federal Convention on June 18, 1787, are bound together in a small volume that now is designated as series 6, item 5, of the Madison Papers. Although received with the papers of another President, Martin Van Buren, in 1912, these manuscripts are now with the Madison Papers.
17. Madison only borrowed and had copies made of letters he had written to George Washington. For some of the correspondence with Judge Bushrod Washington and Jared Sparks in regard to the loan and return of these letters, see the Library of Congress, Index to the George Washington Papers (Washington, 1964), p. ix-x. In response to a request from Madison, Noah Webster made and sent a copy of a letter Madison had written him on October 12, 1804. In doing this he experienced a difficulty that is common to those who use manuscripts: he admitted in a letter of March 1, 1820, which accompanied the copy, that "one word only being illegible—is left blank." Rives Collection, Madison Papers, Library of Congress.
18. Letter, James Madison to James Monroe, November 19, 1820. James Monroe Papers, Library of Congress.
19. James Monroe to James Madison, December 23, 1820. Rives Collection, Madison Papers, Library of Congress.
20. James Madison to Nicholas P. Trist, June 12, 1827, January 26, 1828, and February 4, 1828. Trist Papers, Library of Congress.
21. During a visit Trist made to Montpelier, in May 1827, Madison gave him a letter he had written to Jefferson on February 4, 1790, relating to the latter's views "with regard to the right to bind future generations." This was among the letters Jefferson himself had returned and Madison found that he already had a copy. By a strange alchemy this letter, bearing Trist's endorsement referring to the gift by Madison, is now in the Library's Thomas Jefferson Papers.

Scope and Content Note for Additions to the Collection

Additions to the James Madison Papers are arranged as Series 7, Addenda. The series contains correspondence, transcripts, photocopies and abstracts of correspondence, newspaper clippings, and other material dating from 1744 to 1845. Comprising previously undescribed parts of the original collection plus subsequent additions, Series 7 is organized in subseries according to the year the additional material was processed.

The 1979-1985 Addition is divided into three parts: Part A contains original documents including correspondence, some with typed transcripts, a receipt, a veto, a speech, and an index and catalog of James C. McGuire's collection of Madison papers. Part B contains copies of documents including family correspondence and other family papers, general correspondence, notes on confederation and federal governments, and abstracts of letters and papers of a political nature written by Madison's contemporaries. Part C includes documents about Madison's papers and newspaper clippings.

The 1996 addition contains two photoreproductions of letters, one to Albert Gallatin, dated 1812, and one to Madison's brother, William, dated 1811.

Arrangement of the Papers

This collection is arranged in eight series:

- Series 1, General Correspondence and Related Items, 1723-1859
- Series 2, Additional Correspondence and Related Items, 1780-1837
- Series 3, Madison-Armstrong Correspondence, 1813-1836
- Series 4, Autobiography and Legal Documents, circa 1751-1852
- Series 5, James Madison's and Thomas Jefferson's Notes on Debates, 1776-1788
- Series 6, Miscellaneous Manuscripts, circa 1763-1836
- Series 7, Addenda, 1744-1845
- Oversize, 1788-1833

Description of Series

Container	Series
REEL 1-24	Series 1, General Correspondence and Related Items, 1723-1859 Letters received, drafts of letters sent, and items enclosed with the correspondence. Arranged chronologically.
REEL 25-26	Series 2, Additional Correspondence and Related Items, 1780-1837 Letters received, drafts of letters sent, and items enclosed with the correspondence. Materials in this series were used by William C. Rives in his nineteenth-century biography of Madison and restored to the Madison papers in 1958. Arranged chronologically.
REEL 27	Series 3, Madison-Armstrong Correspondence, 1813-1836 Copies of letters written by Madison to Secretary of War John Armstrong, 1813-1814, and a few copies of letters by Armstrong and others.
REEL 27	Series 4, Autobiography and Legal Documents, circa 1751-1852
REEL 27	Autobiography, circa 1751-1829 Madison's brief autobiography.
REEL 27	Legal Documents, 1779-1852 Legal documents relating to the estate of Madison's father, James Madison (1723-1801), and a copy of the younger James Madison's will. Also includes items documenting the purchase of Madison's papers.
REEL 27-28	Series 5, James Madison's and Thomas Jefferson's Notes on Debates, 1776-1788 Jefferson's notes on debates in the Continental Congress; Madison's notes on debates in the Congress of the Confederation, and on the Federal Convention; with copies of notes by John C. Payne, including: <ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• Jefferson's notes on debates in the Continental Congress, June 7-August 1, 1776</li><li>• Madison's original notes on debates in the Confederation Congress, 1782-1783, and copies of letters, 1780-1788</li><li>• Payne's copy of Madison's original notes on debates in the Confederation Congress, and copies of letters, 1780-1788</li><li>• Payne's copy of Jefferson's notes on debates in the Continental Congress, June-August 1776</li><li>• Madison's original notes on debates in the Federal Convention, 1787</li><li>• Payne's copy of Madison's original notes on debates in the Federal Convention, 1787</li></ul>
REEL 28	Series 6, Miscellaneous Manuscripts, circa 1763-1836 Book manuscript, notes, printed matter, family tree, and copy of Alexander Hamilton's observations on the federal government, containing: <ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• Madison's "A Brief System of Logick"</li><li>• Madison's "Notes on Exports and Navigation"</li></ul>

- Madison's "Notes on Articles of Confederation "
- Madison's notes on federal governments
- Alexander Hamilton's observations on federal government (copy by Madison)
- Two acts of Congress (printed)
- Resolutions of the Senate and the House of Representatives on the death of Madison
- Madison family tree
- Notes on natural history and foreign trade

BOX 7:1
not filmed

Series 7, Addenda, 1744-1845

Correspondence, transcripts, photocopies and abstracts of correspondence, newspaper clippings, and other material.

Organized according to the year the additional material was processed.

BOX 7:OV 1
not filmed

Oversize, 1788-1833

Container List

Container	Contents
REEL 1-24	Series 1, General Correspondence and Related Items, 1723-1859 Letters received, drafts of letters sent, and items enclosed with the correspondence. Arranged chronologically.
REEL 1	1723 May 21-1783 June 30
REEL 2	1783 July 5-1787 Aug. 31
REEL 3	1787 Sept. 4-1789 May
REEL 4	1789 June 1-1792 Mar. 16
REEL 5	1792 Mar. 22-1795
REEL 6	1796 Jan. 5-1801 June 14
REEL 7	1801 June 14-1803 Oct. 7
REEL 8	1803 Oct. 10-1805 Nov.
REEL 9	1805 Dec. 1-1807 Dec. 10
REEL 10	1807 Dec. 11-1809 Mar. 6
REEL 11	1809 Mar. 7-1810 Jan.
REEL 12	1810 Feb. 1-1811 Jan. 10
REEL 13	1811 Jan. 14-1812 Apr. 20
REEL 14	1812 Apr. 21-1813 Jan.
REEL 15	1813 Feb. 1-1814 Feb. 8
REEL 16	1814 Feb. 10-1815 Jan. 30
REEL 17	1815 Feb. 1-1816 Apr. 22
REEL 18	1816 Apr. 23-1818 July
REEL 19	1818 Aug. 7-1822 Jan. 23
REEL 20	1822 Jan. 24-1824
REEL 21	1825 Jan. 4-1827 Oct. 20
REEL 22	1827 Oct. 21-1830 Jan. 25
REEL 23	1830 Jan. 26-1833 Feb. 6
REEL 24	1833 Feb. 10-1859 Feb. 18 and undated
REEL 25-26	Series 2, Additional Correspondence and Related Items, 1780-1837 Letters received, drafts of letters sent, and items enclosed with the correspondence. Materials in this series were used by William C. Rives in his nineteenth-century biography of Madison and restored to the Madison papers in 1958. Arranged chronologically.
REEL 25	1780 May 21-1809 Dec. 10
REEL 26	1810 Jan. 20-1837 and undated
REEL 27	Series 3, Madison-Armstrong Correspondence, 1813-1836 Copies of letters written by Madison to Secretary of War John Armstrong, 1813-1814, and a few copies of letters by Armstrong and others.

Series 3, Madison-Armstrong Correspondence, 1813-1836

Container

Contents

---

REEL 27	1813-1836
REEL 27	Series 4, Autobiography and Legal Documents, circa 1751-1852
REEL 27	Autobiography, circa 1751-1829 Madison's brief autobiography.
REEL 27	Legal Documents, 1779-1852 Legal documents relating to the estate of Madison's father, James Madison (1723-1801), and a copy of the younger James Madison's will. Also includes items documenting the purchase of Madison's papers.
REEL 27-28	Series 5, James Madison's and Thomas Jefferson's Notes on Debates, 1776-1788 Jefferson's notes on debates in the Continental Congress; Madison's notes on debates in the Congress of the Confederation, and on the Federal Convention; with copies of notes by John C. Payne, including: <ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• Jefferson's notes on debates in the Continental Congress, June 7-August 1, 1776</li><li>• Madison's original notes on debates in the Confederation Congress, 1782-1783, and copies of letters, 1780-1788</li><li>• Payne's copy of Madison's original notes on debates in the Confederation Congress, and copies of letters, 1780-1788</li><li>• Payne's copy of Jefferson's notes on debates in the Continental Congress, June-August 1776</li><li>• Madison's original notes on debates in the Federal Convention, 1787</li><li>• Payne's copy of Madison's original notes on debates in the Federal Convention, 1787</li></ul>
REEL 27	To 1787 July 25
REEL 28	From 1787 July 26
REEL 28	Series 6, Miscellaneous Manuscripts, circa 1763-1836 Book manuscript, notes, printed matter, family tree, and copy of Alexander Hamilton's observations on the federal government, containing: <ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• Madison's "A Brief System of Logick"</li><li>• Madison's "Notes on Exports and Navigation"</li><li>• Madison's "Notes on Articles of Confederation "</li><li>• Madison's notes on federal governments</li><li>• Alexander Hamilton's observations on federal government (copy by Madison)</li><li>• Two acts of Congress (printed)</li><li>• Resolutions of the Senate and the House of Representatives on the death of Madison</li><li>• Madison family tree</li><li>• Notes on natural history and foreign trade</li></ul>
BOX 7:1 not filmed	Series 7, Addenda, 1744-1845  Correspondence, transcripts, photocopies and abstracts of correspondence, newspaper clippings, and other material.

Series 7, Addenda, 1744-1845

Container

Contents

---

BOX 7:1 not filmed	Organized according to the year the additional material was processed. 1979-1985 Addition  Part A, original documents Correspondence (some with transcripts), 1780-1834 Letter of Bishop James Madison (cousin), 3 Apr. 1781 General index to Madison letters Receipt, 17 Apr. 1790 Veto of bonus bill, 3 Mar. 1817 Virginia convention speech, 1829 Washington-Madison Papers catalog, James C. McGuire Collection Part B, copies and abstracts Photocopies Family correspondence, 1803-1845 General correspondence, 1784-1830 Biographical writing about Dolley Madison Indenture between Madison's parents, James and Nelly Madison, and Francis Cowherd, 19 Aug. 1784 Account book of James Madison (father), 1744-1760 Miscellany Notes on confederation and federal governments Resolutions proposed by William Randolph in the Constitutional Convention, 29 May 1787 Abstracts of letters and papers Armstrong, John, 1804-1823 Coles, Edward, 1812-1837 Dayton, Jonathan, 1808-1814 Jefferson, Thomas, John Adams, John Quincy Adams, and others, 1783-1831 Jones, Joseph, 1780-1804 Madison, James, 1780-1830 Pendleton, Edmund, 1752-1792 Randolph, Edmund, 1781-1790 Rush, Benjamin, Richard Rush, and William C. Rives, 1790-1837 Washington, George, 1779-1796 Part C, miscellany "Extracts from The Madison Papers," draft essay, undated List of letters sent and received by Madison, 1796-1836 Newspaper clippings, 1788-1833, undated See Oversize 1996 Addition Photoreproductions of letters, 1811-1812
BOX 7:OV 1 not filmed	Oversize, 1788-1833
BOX 7:OV 1 not filmed	1979-1985 Addition  Part C

Newspaper clippings, 1788-1833, undated (Container 7:2)