A perfect School of INSTRUCTIONS

WILL. of Wilson's

Officers of the Mouth:

SHewing September 1789.

The Whole ART

A Master of the Household, A Master Confectioner, A Master Carver, A Master Cook,
A Master Butler, A Master Pastryman

Being a Work of singular use for Ladies and Gentlewomen, and all Persons whatsoever that are desirous to be acquainted with the most Excellent ARTS of Carving, Cookery, Pastry, Preserving, and Laying a Cloth for Grand Entertainments. The like never before extant in any Language.

Adorned with Pictures curiously Ingraven, displaying the whole Arts.

By Giles Rose one of the Master Cooks in His Majesties Kitchen.

LONDON,
Printed for R. Bentley and M. Magnes, in Russell-street in Covent-Garden, 1682.
To the Right Honourable Sir STEPHEN FOX,
Knight, one of the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury, and Chief Clerk of His Majesty's Honourable Board of Green Cloth, and to his ever Honoured Lady.

Right Honourable,

O sooner had I finished my Theatre of the World, or a Prospect of Humane Misery, but I was as soon invited by the Stationer into the Kitchen, (it being my proper Sphere) to give this our little

A 2 World
The Dedication.

World a view of the Officers of the Mouth, as they act, and are Published by Authority in France. And finding that I had but too much time to spare, I was as willing to gratify him in the Translating of this last, as he was to exhibit my first undertakings to Public view. And indeed, the kind and general entertainment which my first Treatise received from several Honourable Personages, and particularly from your Honours, did encourage me to attempt the Translation of this second little piece, and to Dedicate it (in the first place) to your Honour, in regard you have travelled abroad, and do excellently well understand both the Tongue and Ways of France. And Secondly to your Lady; because here is not only employment for Men, but curiosity
The Dedication.

First, for the other Sex also: As first by instructing them in the ordering of Linen, and next in the use of the Preserving Pan.

These Considerations have induced me to make this Dedication to you both, that under the benigne Protection of two such Honourable Persons, it may meet with a favourable Reception in the World, and may be secured from the assaults of those envious Detractors, who love not to speak well of any, but of themselves, and the insipid Off-spring of their own sterril Inventions. But besides the obliging many of my Friends, here is something of gratification to all those who are affected with Novelties; for here they may be acquainted with the French ways, which might be very profitable to them, if the Character be true.
The Dedication.

which Sir Thomas Overbury gives of a French Cook, who affirms he is his Masters Alchymist, and can extract Gold out of Herbs, but yet it is to be suspected, that the extraction will be dear when it is done; because (as he says) he gives only a taste to every one of what he can do; as this Book doth of many Professions and Callings in one single Volume, or (as I may say) several Books in one.

Many do believe the French way of working is cheapest, but let them examine this Book, and then they may see (for their satisfaction) which is the best Husbandry to extract Gold out of Herbs, or to make a Pottage of a Stone, by the example of two Souldiers, who in their Quarters were minded to have a Pottage, the first of them coming into a House and
The Dedication.

and asking for all things necessary for the making of one, was as soon told, that he could have none of those things there, whereupon he went away, and the other coming in with a Stone in his Knapsack, ask'd only for a Pot to boil his Stone in, that he might make a Dish of Broth of it for his Supper, which was quickly granted him, and when the Stone had boiled a little while, then he asked for a small bit of Beef, then for a piece of Mutton, and so for Veal, Bacon, &c. till by little and little he got all things requisite, and so made an excellent Pottage of his Stone, at as cheap a rate (it may be) as the Cook extratled Gold from the Herbs.

But (for my own part) I shall say but little, either in the praise or dispraise of any Countries fashions.
The Dedication.

ons, but leave every one to his own Fancy and Opinion; only thus much I shall presume to assert, in reference to my self, that when the Cooks of England do throw away their Knives and Aprons to Translate other Mens Works, it is much to be feared, that there is either a cold Kitchen, or a hot Cook, or else this piece of Work had not learned to speak English in a French dress, as now it doth, and yet here is variety enough both to please the Beholders, and delight the Eaters, and to satisifie all others who have any part to act, either in Work or Service, as the curious may inform themselves, by reading the Book, and spare me the pains of telling them any more what the whole Work contains.

But I fear some may alledge, that I have made a long preamble
The Dedication.

ble, and yet said nothing to the matter; therefore be that pleases to peruse the ensuing Treatise, may see the great Master of the Household, with his attendance both in Town and Camp, giving of his necessary Orders to all Offices: The Butler folding of his Linnen, and covering of his Table, and setting of his Charge in order: The Carver dividing to every one a Portion, both of Fish and Fowl; as also the Confectioner busied in his Preserving-Pan; as likewise the Cook and Pastry-man, each in his Office. Where I shall leave them, and return to your Honours, humbly beseeching you, that you will vouchsafe (according to your accustomed Goodness) to pass a favourable Construction upon my Presumption in this Dedication, and to receive the following Prod...
The Dedication.

draft of my vacant hours into your powerful protection, and then I dare confidently assure myself; that that Veneration, which is deservedly due to your Honourable Names, will be sufficient, not only to appease the Storms of Envy, and restrain the Tongues of malicious Censures, but will also oblige me to glory in your Patronage, and to remain,

Your Honours,

most Devoted, and

most Humble Servant,

Langly Park,
June 24.
1681.

Giles Rolle.

To
which there may be some small mistakes Pres's, bath made me doubt that distance of my Implyy from the in this place, but only for the their should I have said any thing to take it into his Protection, neithe speak his praise, and the other Printer and Reader, the one to Work, but left it wholly to the caution nor preface to this Work, made neither Deity, the Author of this Reader.

TO THE
To the Reader.

which neither the Printer, nor my self could help; but to shew the Reader, that such Errata are not my fault, I have Dedicated the Translated Work to some of my best Friends, that under the Shadow of their Protection, I hope the thing done will find a safe passage into the World after a long and tedious Travel, under which it hath so long groaned for a deliverance, but I do not know any one that can be blamed for its not appearing sooner in Publick, but only the too much haste of Pamphlets. And as for the praise of the Work, I need say but little, because I have Translated the French Printers Preface to the Reader, who gives you a true account of the Book in full, which serves here for a Preface also to the Work, as it is now
To the Reader.

now done into English: His words are these.

KIND Reader, I here present thee with a Book which contains many in one Volume, and each of them useful and advantageous to the Publick, so that there is not one of them but may at some time or other be very useful and necessary to all Capacities, as it is not very hard nor difficult to make it appear, by the lift of what it treats of, as it shews you at the first view.

As for the First it is without all Contradiction, and the Second will demonstrate no less to you, if by experience you put it into practice; insomuch that if it were only my self, that am to tell it, should give the commendation of the Work, I need not to be suspected of either Interest or Flattery, notwithstanding I put it into Print, neither have I any design of my own, by putting all into one Volume, which belongs to the Service of the Table, as well for the great ones as those of a lower condition, but only by this means to make the whole more commodious for carriage; and as there may be some one of these Treatises, that may be of no use at all to some Persons, yet it may be both useful and necessary to others. And withall the Reader hath a great many pretty little Diversifications, which are not everywhere practised, to content the curiosity of those who have but a stupid knowledge or an imperfect understanding.
To the Reader.

As
To the Reader.

As for Example, for a man to know how to Carve and break all Meats at a Table; or for a Butler to know how to fold and pleat his Linnen, are things not to be despised, but on the contrary they are very commendable; besides it doth often fall out, that a man is put to the blush for shame that he doth not understand the First: As also he passeth for a very subtle spirited Person, who doth but well understand the Second; and besides if any one hath a mind to serve in a great man's Family, in the quality of a Master of the Household, or Steward, and is not well instructed what his Charge is, but is ignorant, and to seek what to do; why, this Book will soon give him light in his business, how he shall behave himself in it.
To the Reader.

So also there are many that will undertake to be Confectioners, and yet understand but very little or nothing at all: After they have been at a great expence of Time and Money, and profited very little by it, these may also find their Instructions here, by what is written in this Book, so that they may come off with Honour and Contentment to themselves and others; and to speak more home to the matter, it oftentimes falls out so, that a Man may have an occasion, by a rancounter, to dress a Dish or two of Meat, or to make a Ragoue in a short time, as namely, upon a Journey, in the Field, or by the accidental arrival of a Friend, or the like; why at the opening of the Book, you are furnished with
To the Reader.

with the Instructions of what sorts you please; as likewise in many particular Houses; and amongst the rest, such as are seated at a great distance from either Town or Village, these may have an occasion for a piece out of the Pastry, which some will go about without any knowledg, and by that means make that which is worth nothing at all; these also may be instructed by this Book, to do their work with a great deal of ease, and come off with Credit and Applause.

These are my Reasons why I said, that there were few or none to whom this Book might not be useful and necessary at some time or other.
To the Reader.

And withal I am to tell you by the by, That there is another Book that bears the same Title as this doth, but I would not have you do like Æsop's Dog in the Fable, to catch at the Shadow, and leave the Substance, which you will assuredly do if you take that for this; and this I speak, not to do another wrong, but to shew you how much I am devoted to your Service; for these Reasons the Author made no Dedication of his Work, but only left it to the Protection of the Reader, for whose use it is wholly recommended. If he finds it agreeable to his humour, it needs no other Protection but his own, which I wish him long to enjoy, not by reading only, but by Practice. And this is the Desire and well wishes of the Translator also. So farewell Reader: And I have my Desire.
To the Reader.
THE

CONTENTS

Of the whole

BOOK.

1. The Master of the Household.

Shewing you what his Charge and Power is, with his mannner of Serving well at the Table, with the setting of all things in their due order and fashion, and the manner of his making Provision for the whole year
The Contents.

year about, with Figures for setting of his whole Service upon the Table.

2. The Master Carver.

Who shews you by Discourse and Figure in what manner you ought to break up any Meats, either Fish or Fowl, Fruits or Sweetmeats, with the difference and distance of pieces, and the manner how you ought to present it to each Person, according to his Rank and Quality.

3. The Master Butler.

Shewing you what is his Charge, with the manner how to fold and pleat your Table Linnen into many Figures, and the Carving of all sorts of Fruits into divers fashions, with a Print of their Figures.

4. The
The Contents.

4. The Master Confectioner.

Shewing you to make all sorts of Sweetmeats, both wet and dry, with the Compounds of Fruits and Sallets, with the manner how to make all Delicious Drinks, very Pleasant and delightful to the Taste and Pallat.

5. The Master Cook.

Shewing you in a very familiar way how to make all manner of new Dishes and Ragoues, and the manner how to season all Meats, both Fish and Flesh, as also the method of Services for all the four Quarters of the Year, as well Inter-messes as Deserts.

6. The
The Contents.

6. The Master Pastryman.

Shewing you how to make all Bake-meats in Perfection, with the Composition of all Pastes, as Biscuits, Makaroons, and Marchpains.
Le Maistre de Hostel;

OR,

Steward of a Family.

WITH

A brief Instruction of what concerns his Charge, his Business, and Power in the Family; being all very amply explained in this place.

In all great Mens Houses, and more especially amongst Persons of Quality, the very Name and Charge of a Steward is none of the least in a Family, no more than his Charge is unconsiderable; for the very Name imports the signification of the thing itself:
without making you a long Preamble, to give you a definition or distinction of all the particulars that properly belong to his Place and Office, which would be too tedious to make all the Divisions thereof here in this place, and to set them down in order; I shall only say, in short, That as all Crowned Heads, as well as other Persons of high and eminent Qualities, are not all Equals, but differ the one from the other in many Degrees and Circumstances: So likewise all Stewards are not Equals in Function and Power. I speak here in the general, according to the succession, therefore every one is to chuse, according to his judgment, as he shall see it necessary and convenient.

Therefore if any one hath such a Place in a House of Quality, it will not be necessary for me here in this place to give him instructions how, or to whom, he should address himself; whether to his Lord, or Lady, or to their Attendants: But I suppose him to have given them both a full
For the Officers of the Mouth.

full satisfaction of all that belongs to his Charge and Office; so that I now judge him to be seated and established in his Employ and Calling; and being fully informed of all that belongs to his Charge, I judge it but convenient and necessary, in the first place, that he make a general Visit into all Offices very exactly, and into the Kitchin in particular, taking an exact Inventory in every Office; as namely, of all the Plate, by weight and number of pieces; as of all the Linnen, and other things that are moveable about the house: and so likewise in the Kitchin, he must take notice, and see what is wanting, and what there is belonging to the Mouth, as well as other things that he shall find necessary; and then, having given his necessary orders to the Master of each Office, as well as to the Master-Cook, he should go himself to the Market and buy in all the Provisions that he shall judge necessary for service: and being returned from the Market, he goes to the Master of each Office, and to the Kitchin, there there giving such necessary orders for all things, as he himself hath received for all that must be for that Meal, and whether they should hasten or stay. The hour of Meals being come, and all things are now in a readiness, le Maistre Hostel takes a clean Napkin, folded at length, but narrow, and throws it over his Shoulder, remembrance that this is the ordinary Mark, and a particular sign and demonstration of his Office; and to let men see how credible his Charge is, he must not be shame-faced, nor so much as blush, no not before any noble Personage, because his Place is rather an Honour than a Service, for he may do his Office with his Sword by his side, his Cloak upon his Shoulders, and his Hat on his Head; but his Napkin must be always upon his Shoulder, just in the posture I told you of before.

First Course being dished up and ready, he must cause it to be carried to the Table in very good order, by those that are designed for that Employment, ployment, himself going before it all the way; and being come into the Hall, where the Company are to eat, he pulls off his Hat, but immediately puts it on again upon his Head, and so proceeds to covering of the Table with Dishes and Plates, beginning at the upper end and continuing till he comes at the lower end; but to the end that all things should be done in very good order, he should begin, as I said before, at the upper end of the Table, but set on the first Dish at the right side of the Cadinat, or Cover, (which is always set if any great person be to be treated) and the next on the left side of the Cover, with a Plate upon a Rider between the two Dishes, against the Salt-seller, doing this all a-long till he comes to the lower end with the last Dish.
For the Officers of the Mouth.
The first Figure sheweth you the furnishing of an ordinary Table; that is to say, a long Table with two ends, on which you are to place twelve Dishes of Meat, with a Reserve of three Dishes for any persons that may come at the time of serveing, or when
For the Officers of the Mouth. when the Company are seated: The second is an oval Table, whereon you are to place eight Dishes of Meat. The third and last is a round Table, whereon to place nine Dishes of Meat, in manner and form as they are marked in the Figure of each Table; so that with the cast of an Eye, and the touch of a Finger, you may sort and order your Table, observing the Figure, with Honour and Credit; wherefore I shall not need to make any long discourse, as judging it altogether unnecessary and superfluous in this place; only you are to take notice of the Figure of the oval Table, that the great Figure is a Charger, the lesser are Dishes, and the least of all are Plates.

The Company disposing themselves to wash their hands, he takes the Towel by both ends and delivers it to the Company, neatly, with care and respect, and not rudely; and when the Ceremony is ended, and all have wiped their hands, then he takes the Towel away again, and carries it to the side-Cupboard, and there leaves it.
The Company being seated, he stayes in the Hall, either behind his Master's Chair, or some one of the chiefest persons at the Table, till it be time to fetch in the second Course; for which occasion, let him be sure to take with him people enough to bring all away in good order at once, both Dishes and Plates, and himself marching along before it as he did at the first: And be sure to observe the same order in placing of the second Course, as was observed in the first; and more in particular, be sure to have always an eye to the Master and Lady, still waiting the sign for setting on and taking away, as they shall give him command, till the last, that the Banquet and all are taken away with the Cover; then he gives order for the covering of the other Tables as he shall think fitting and convenient, for all their whole Family in order to their degrees and qualities.

And it is farther to be taken notice of, That all the time of Meals he hath the sole power in himself of com-commanding all the Officers of the house, except the Gentlemen and Gentlewomen, the Chamberlain, or Valet de Chambre, and Chamber-Maids, over whom he hath neither power nor command, but only to give them that which is necessary for them, both of Meat, Drink, and the like. I said here during Meals, that is, if there be not a Gentleman, or Master of the Horse, which usually commands those that wear the Livery, in whom that power alone depends, as having the whole charge of them in himself to command them.

Neither doth this Charge depend upon a Steward only, for buying in and providing for all Services of meats and other necessaries, day by day, or from Meal to Meal, but for the providing of all things at their due season, and at times when they may best be had, which ought to be one of his first Maxims, or one of the first Maxims of his Oeconomy; so that the Steward is as chief Minister, or Intendant for all Expenses.
pences whatsoever: wherefore I advise him to think of this only thing very carefully, as being the chief of his Charge: as for Example; in Summer to provide himself with Wood, Charcoles, all sorts of Sweet-meats, both wet and dry; as likewise for the Pastry, all sorts of Fruits to serve in the Winter; all sorts of refreshing Syrups and Pickles; as namely, of Cowcumbers, Purslane, Samphier, Champignons, Morilles, dry Mushrooms, Vinegar of all sorts of Flowers and tastes, to be kept in store for all the Winter, &c.

In Autumn buy in Wines, more Wood and Charcoles if need require, and that you are not sufficiently provided with them in the Summer; so likewise buy in Lard, Bacon, and Candles, with other things that may be wanting, and are fit to be provided in that Season.

And in Winter store your Ice-houses with Ice and Snow for the ensuing Summer, and provide Rosanolis, Populo and Angelica, &c.

In the Spring make your Provision for
For the Officers of the Mouth.

for the approaching Campagne, fitting all things to go into the Army, as Lard, Bacon, Gammons, both Mayenne and Bayone, Sallages of Bologna, dry'd Tongues, Buttecks of Beef, salted and dried after the Bones are taken out, Cheeses of all sorts, and such like things as these; besides Olives, Capers, Anchovies, Pepper white and black, and long Ginger, Cloves, Mace, Nutmegs, Sinnamon, Green Citron, Gum dragon, Musk, Amber, Sugar, Almonds, Pistaches, Wax-lights, Sifes, Candles, Flamboyes of Wax, and the like, not forgetting to fill his Cellars with Bottels well stored with Spanish and Burgundy Wines, with other good delicious Liquors, such as are above-said, when he speaks of the Provisions that are to be made in the Winter, as namely, Blanquet, Rosafolis, Populo and Angelica; besides Rose-Vinegar, and pure sweet Oyl for Sallats, and the like; all which Provisions, being made for the approaching Campagne, must be as carefully put up into a Chest, and well well packed for Carriage either by Waggon, or Cart, or else for the more speed to be carried by Mules, all which must be done by the care and industry of the Maistre de Hoster.

And then his next care must be likewise for good Packing and Carriage of his Plate, Table-Linnen, with all other Utensils necessary for the Kitchin, as well as for all other Offices; which Plate and Linnen must be very carefully locked up: And now the necessaries for the Kitchin are these; first, a Copper Oven, three Skillets, an Iron Furnace, a Preserving-pan, a Fish-pan, a Stone-Mortar with a Peftle, a Nest of six Pots one in another, two Kettles one in another, Saufe-pans twelve, small Gembole Racks with Broatches, small and great Larding-pins, Ladles, Scummers, Cullenders, a Chopping- Knife, a Mincing- Knife, and many such like things not here inserted. And the Butler is likewise to provide Bottles, Glassses, and Knives, and all other necessaries belonging to his Office. And
And now by the bye, it will not be amiss to insert another part of a very necessary care; that is to say, in case of necessity, if the Carriages cannot come in by reason of bad Ways, or over long Journeys, that the Master of every Office, and the Master Cook, do every one of them take something in a Budget made of Leather for that purpose, and carry it a-long behind them for their present uses; as namely, Plates, Spoons, Forks, Knives, and Linnen, and some small Plates for Fruit; all which are necessary for covering of a Table, &c.

And the Master-Cook likewise, with his Assistants, may in like manner put in Budgets behind each of them as much Plate as will serve for their Potages and first Service, their Servants each laying some things upon their Horses, and so they may in case of necessity, have Goods enough and Provisions too for a whole Meal; which may be done with a great deal of ease if all parties are but willing.

And
And now by this time we judge them ready to march, and the hour of their departure being come, the Master-Cook and the chief of every Office are now mounting on Horseback; the Master-Cook is desired not to forget his Larding-pricks, nor the Master-Butler his Essay; they go away before the rest, either to the Dining-place or to the Lodging; and being come to the Inn, they are to take up whatsoever is necessary for the Table of their Master, and the rest of his Train, upon as good account and honest conditions as they can agree, disposing of all things according to the Orders they have received. The Meal being ended, and their Plate secured, every one is to give in his account to the Master de Hostel, who is to satisifie all according to equity and justice; they again continue their journey quietly and merrily; for if the Master be well served, and his Officers contented, and neither he on the one side nor they on the other suffer loss nor dammage, then without all doubt all will go
For the Officers of the Month. go well, and they may return in safety, and (as they say) bring the mould to their Doublets again if God be so pleased, and that they may by his goodness have the grace to be thankful, then all will be well, &c.

So much for le Maistre de Hostel.
Le grand Escuyer tranquill;

O R,

The great Master Carver;

SHEWING

Both by Signs and Figures, as well as by discourse, how and in what manner he ought to break up and carve out all manner of Meats, Fish, and Fowl, Fruits, and Confectionary Goods, as likewise the difference and distinction of all sorts of pieces, and in what manner he ought to present them to persons according to their Rank, Quality, and Conditions.

THE Exercise of a Master Carver is more noble and commendable it may be than every one will
For the Officers of the Mouth. will imagin; for suppose the life to be the Basis and Foundation of all that is done in the World, and this life is not to be sustained without eating and drinking to maintain our natural heat, which is done day by day to support our natural life, which would soon fail if there were a want of bodily sustenance; and as there are divers distinctions amongst men, so by consequence there is or ought to be in their manner and fashion of eating, as well as living, a great deal of difference: And as it is but reason that all common people should cut their own Meat, so it is but just that all Kings, Princes, and great Lords, and Persons of Quality, should be exempted from this small pain; not of necessity, but for Honour and Ceremony: for as it is certain that the Spirit is much better, and more excellent than the Body, so it is likewise avowed, that this comes much nearer the Spirit than the Body, or resembles more the Spiritual than the Corporal; which things are the more considerable, because what what is material is always applied to the material matter: So it is much more to be avowed that the Ceremonies which are used and practised amongst men, and the honours that are conferred on men, either by Birthright, or by elevation above others by their Titles or Places, are more Spiritual, and yet they are but the invention of man’s spirit, which the material hath not in the least made any contribution to at all; and so by consequence those that are employed in giving and in practising several Exercises, are doubtless more considerable than those that employ themselves in nothing but what is meerly corporeal: So the Charge and Office of a Master Carver is of that nature: Wherefore he is so much advanced, that he is more high and noble, it may be, than every one will or can imagine; always provided that the honour of having a Master Carver be preferred on none but Crowned Heads, and Sovereign Princes, for he takes his Commendation from all the particular parts of
For the Officers of the Month.

of his Object, as well as from his end and Exercise.

But having so largely discoursed the dignity of the Charge of a Carver, it will be necessary to tell you, though in a gross and confused manner, what he ought to be, and what he ought to do.

And in reference to the first, we need not any long discourse to persuade you, that if any one undertake this Charge of a Carver, he ought to be a very handsom comly person, of a good behaviour and well clad, because his appearance and service is always before his Master, at the best hours in the day, that is at Meal-times, and sometimes before Strangers and extraordinary Company; and therefore it must of necessity be very ill taken of such a person, to make his appearance, not being so qualified as becomes his Place and Charge.

And in regard of the second, he ought amongst other things to know how to dispose of his Plates so, that if it happen that many persons of Qua-
Quality should chance to meet at Table together, that he give no cause of discontent to any one of them; in the next place he ought to study the appetite of his Master, to the end that he may always present him with that bit which is most agreeable to his Princes Stomach; and in the next place, he is to study the qualities and kinds of all meats, and then the dissection of all meats, both Fish and Fowl, as well as of grosser meats and banquets. His place is always at the end of the Table, or just over against his Master: but above all, let him be sure to remember to have all things that are necessary for his service in readiness, in a place designed for that purpose by themselves.

The Company being seated at Table, he must go to the place of his preparation, and there take a clean Napkin, which should be folded long and laid upon the Knives, and put it upon his left shoulder, and, taking a Knife with him, come and uncover the meat which was served in covered dishes, dishes, then taking the Essay with a square slice of bread which was prepared for that use and purpose, conforming himself to the Use and Custom of the Country where he shall happen to serve, that he may know how to learn their Ceremonies.
For the Officers of the Month. 23

And having taken his Essay, this is the order of his Dishes that he ought to take; first the bold meats, next Ragouses, Salses and stewed meats before the rest; all these sorts must be disposed of in their due order: so soon as they have Salse upon their Plates, and Salt by their brims, which will not be necessary if the meat be salt of itself, he begins to look to his baked meats, which are of divers sorts, some hot, some cold; some of gross and solid Meats, as of a Stag, Wild-Boar, or Hare; others of more light and delicate Meats, as Pigeons, Chickens, or other Birds: There are also some of Fish, as of Trouts, Pikes, &c. Pyes made of Flesh, that are to be eaten hot, ought to be cut in slices Crosswise, but be very careful that you do not not break the Bottoms, nor forget to put Salt upon the Plate with the Meats; those that are made of Fowl ought to be cut in Joynts; if they be of Fish, he ought to open the Fish on the Back, railing of the Fins, and so serve it forth, as it is very easie to be done and known.

They ought to serve the Sweetmeats with a Fork, but the Dragee, or small Seeds of Sugar with a Spoon; but let me give him this advice along with him, that he never wholly empty the Dish, but leave alway something at the bottom.

And as there are several sorts of Feasts, so there are several sorts of Carvers; as for Example; a Prince hath his Carver in ordinary, but if upon occasion of a Rejoycing, or something extraordinary, as at a Wedding, or Christening, or the like, all the Congregation cannot sit at the Princes Table, therefore it will be necessary to pray some Gentleman to carve for the Ladies and Knights; and, as it is very ordinary upon such occasions, to have many Tables,
Tables, so it is but necessary that some one take that Charge upon him; and that doth it ought to set himself about the middle of the Table, that he may do it the more commodiously, and serve all the whole Company: Or if by chance a Gentleman should fortune to come into the Company of Ladies that have no Carver, common Civility will oblige him to serve them; wherefore he may rise up and Carve out several Dishes, and make distribution to the Ladies, and so set himself down again; and, if in case need so require, he may rise up and do the same thing again, carving for the whole Company; but this way is not so handsom, nor yet so decent.

But when you would entertain a Prince, or an Ambassadour, there should always be a Gentleman by the side of the Carver, he doing of his Office, and the Gentleman presents the Plate covered, but the place of the Carver is always the same. But at home if any one will undertake to Exercise the Office of a Carver, he ought ought sometimes to rise up to the reign, to acquit himself with civility;
but if he doth not know the Ceremony, he is exempted from the pain that he need not lose so much time.

And now I have told you in as few words, as is possible, the Charge and Exercise of a Carver: I think, in the next place, That as in the division of Fowl is the most difficulty; So it is a thing that is the least known; and therefore it will not be amiss to tell you in general the names of all the Joynts in a Fowl, to the end that you may with the less difficulty practice upon every sort of Fowl, Fish, or other meats, as followeth, as they are marked with their Number and Figure in every Joynt as followeth, which is the first of a great many others that follow, and every one of them having a small discourse upon his own proper Subject.

And first of all the names of every Joynt in a Fowl.

1. The left side of the neck.

2. The right side of the Neck.

3. A
3. A piece under the right Wing.
4. A small Joint of the right Wing.
5. The under side of the right Wing.
6. A Joint near the Knee of the right Thigh.
7. The upper part of the right Thigh.
8. The under part of the right Thigh.
9. The right side of the Rump.
10. The left side of the Rump.
11. The Rump itself.
12. The Joint of the Knee of the left thigh.
13. The under side of the left Thigh.
14. The upper side of the left Thigh.
15. The upper side of the left Wing.
16. The small Joint of the left Wing.
17. The under side of the left Wing.
18. A piece upon the Stomach.
19. A piece above the Stomach.
20. A little Fork of the Neck, or Merry-thought.
21. A little Fork on the right side of the Neck.
22. The other little Fork on the left side of the Neck.
23. The right side of the Carcass.
24. The left side of the Carcass.
For the Officers of the Mouth.

The dissection of a Fowl.
But it may be this Discourse of Figures and Numbers may seem very frivolous to those that do not understand the practice, but it would not be unnecessary if a man could but understand all that is couched in this Book, for otherwise it would be but a vain Expence of Money and Time: but as it is not intended for any, but only to instruct the curious, who may sometimes by chance fall into the company of Ladies, or persons of Quality, and not knowing how to break up, or carve a Fowl, how would he be put to the non-plus, for shame, that he knows not how to make the dissection of a Fowl; wherefore it will not be amiss to insert the least particulars. Secondly, some people will say ordinarily, that such a thing is nothing worth; but what we value it at; and the common sort of people are of Opinion that the merit of the thing is by the price that is set upon it; and the most rare things lose their luster when they are not prised to their full value. Thirdly, the most ordinary things things are very often the most ignorant, because for the most part men are persuaded that they know all things but too well, when at the same time they understand nothing but their own gross practice, which hath nothing of solidness in it; and these three Reasons hath obliged me to insert, the best way that I could, all the Joynts of a Fowl, to the intent that I might content the curious, and instruct the ignorant.

You may be pleased to take notice that I have not, nor never do mark the two small forked pieces of the neck, nor the two sides of the Carcasses, because that is to be practised when you make a Dissection of any sort of Fowl, this being the last piece that is cut up in the carving out of any Fowl.
The Dissection of a Throgb after the Italian fashion.

All these sorts of Fowl, and all such like as these are, are to be carved all of one fashion, as you may see by the figure, that is, to say at nine strokes, after the Italian fashion, as for example:

1. The one side of the neck.
2. The other side of the neck.
3. The right wing.
4. The right thigh.
5. The one side of the rump.
6. The other side of the same rump.
7. The left thigh.
8. The left wing.
9. The fork of the neck, or merry thought; but ordinarily they present these small Fowls whole, but whether you present your Fowl whole or in pieces, forget not to put Salt on the Plate before you present it.
The dissection of a Thrush after the Italian fashion.
The Dissection of a Pidgeon after the Italian fashion.

For Pidgeons of all sorts, or suchlike Fowls as they are, are to be cut up all after the self-same fashion; the Italians give them thirteen cuts, or makes so many pieces of one, as it is very easie to be seen by the Figure; but many present a Pidgeon whole, and others will have it as it is in the Figure: I have not explained all things here as I did in my first, for I have not named the Joynts, nor the fashion of carving this sort of Fowl, neither shall I do it to the next Figure, because it is a thing very easie to be known by looking on the first figure.
The dissection of a Pidgeon after the Italian fashion.
The Dissection of a Pidgeon in two pieces.

The Pidgeon, as I said before, may be served whole; but yet it is not amiss sometimes to serve it cut into two pieces, that it may not over-charge a Plate; and besides, it may be more pleasing to the person to whom it is to be presented; but however this depends upon the discretion of the Carver, who ought to have regard to the greatness of the company.
The dissection of a Pidgeon in two pieces.
The Dissection of a Boyled Hen.

This is a sort of meat that is ordinary and common enough, and yet for all that it is not every one that can carve and serve it out with Ceremony; for, suppose there were eight persons at a Table, and every one were to be presented with a piece, the first must be presented with a Wing, which is the first piece; the second with one side of the Rump, with the little-fork of the Apron; the third the other Wing; the fourth with the other side of the Rump, and some little bit with it; the fifth with the back and end of the Rump; the sixth with the breasts; the seventh with one of the Thighs; and the eighth with the other thigh; but if it should fortune that any great person should be present, you may present him with some other piece, as one part of the Rump, or the brawn of the breast.
The dissection of a boiled Hen.
The Dissection of a Hen.

And this is to be done like as we do a Capon, on the high Dutch fashion, which is shewed you in the next figure.
The diffecion of a Hen.

For the Officers of the Mouth.
The Dissection of a Capon after the Italian fashion.

The Italians cut a Capon into a great many pieces, and those pieces are but very small; wherefore you ought to consider and to serve first a wing, 2ly, a part of the rump, with a little of the brawn of the breast; thirdly, the other wing; fourthly, the other part of the rump, with a little more brawn of the breast; fifthly, the merry-thought, with the rest of the rump; sixthly, the belly, with the two little forks; seventhly, a thigh; eighthly, another thigh, which you must always do the last because they are the pieces that are least esteemed.

And if there be any person of quality, you must do as I told you in the dissection of a boiled Hen, serve him better than the others; and you are to take this notice too by the bye, that there is not a more delicate bit in all the whole Capon than the brawn of the breast, nor a more worthy to be presented to any person of quality.
The dissection of a Capon after the Italian fashion.
The Dissection of a Capon after the High-Dutch fashion.

A Capon is more eat after the high Dutch than after the Italian fashion, as having fewer pieces, and they more honourable and hand-fomer; yet you may make eight Plates of one Capon: 1. the first a Wing; 2. a part of the Rump; 3. another Wing; 4. the other part of the Rump and Forks; 5. the Breast; 6. the Back and rest of the rump; 7. and 8. to each a Thigh; you may for the adorning of each Plate raise a bit of the breast with a Fork, and lay it with a piece of the rump upon the Plate, but it is left to the discretion of the Carver.
For the Officers of the Mouth.

The dissection of a Capon after the High Dutch fashion.
A Turkey-Cock may be cut up in two fashions; that is to say, either upon your Fork held up, or else lying in the Dish, as 'tis easie seen by the figure; you may also cut him into many pieces; for the doing of which, observe this order; the white of the Breast is always held for the most delicate piece, therefore you may present a piece of that with a piece of the rump for the first Plate; 2. a small Fork, with some more of the brawn of the breast; 3. the other side of the rump, with a little of the brawn of the breast; 4. the two little forkes, with some more of the brawn of the breast; 5. a wing; 6. another wing; but as this Fowl is big enough ordinarily of himself, so you may divide the wings or thighs into several pieces at your own discretion; and as it is easie for you to know what pieces are most delicate and best pleasing, so you may cut the brawn of the breast into as many pieces as you shall think fit, which are many more than I have here specified.
The dissection of a Turkey-Cock.
The Dissection of a Turkey-Cock, hot or cold.

This Fowl, as is abovesaid, you may cut him up upon your Fork, but however if he be too big you may carve him up in the Dish, which I think is the best way for either hot or cold; if you have but a small company you may cut him in the middle, in halves or in quarters, always taking heed, that you cut the most part of the Stomach, as it is the best, and so you follow the order of the eight propositions.
The dissection of a Turkey-Cock.
The dissection of a Goose after the high Dutch fashion.

We usually carve a Goose after the high Dutch fashion, otherwise than the Italians do, for they cut the breast into more pieces, and so by consequence fill more plates, for this is the order how they carve, and how they send it away; as 1. of the first Plate a thigh; 2. another thigh, 3. a side of the rump, with a piece of the breast; 4. the other side of the rump, with another piece of the breast, 5. a wing; 6. the other wing; 7. the rest of the stomach upon which, if there be little of the brawn left, you may join the two small forked bones; to the eighth the merry-thought with the rest of the rump, and any else, at your own discretion.

If you will you may join some of the breast with the best piece which you always present to the most considerable person at the Table first, and take notice too by the bye, the brawn of the breast ought to be for the most part served out first.
The dissection of a Goose after the high Dutch fashion.
The Dissection of a Goose after the Italian fashion.

You may cut your Goose, after the Italians, into a great many pieces, as well as that of the high Dutch, and follow the same order of serving it; but if you will, you may begin at the stomach, and follow with the Thigh, and the rest, as in the former figure.
For the Officers of the Mouth.

The dissection of a Goose after the Italian fashion.
The dissection of a Duck.

The Duck being little you serve him whole, but if he be great you must serve him thus: 1. a thigh, and a little piece of the neck; 2. the other thigh, with the two little pieces of the neck; 3. one side of the rump, with a little piece of the stomach; 4. the other side of the rump, with another piece of the breast; 5. a wing, with the Carcass; 6. the other wing, with the other piece of the rump. And we begin for the most part to serve with the two pieces of the stomach, which we reckon to be the best, but this depends all upon the discretion of the Carver.
The dissection of a Duck.
The dissection of a Woodcock.

The Woodcock is for the most part served whole, but sometimes in pieces; but when you serve him whole upon a plate this doth not hinder but that you may carve him up, but so as that all the pieces may hold together, although they be cut as though they were to be served in pieces; but however in such a case you must leave the eighth piece, and joyn the seventh with the ninth; and if you serve it out by pieces, you must begin with the thighs, and then with the wings, and so with the rest; but remember that a Cock is to be broached with the same fork as the Pidgeon is.
For the Officers of the Mouth.

The dissection of a Woodcock.
The dissection of a Partridge.

A Partridge is for the most part carved and served whole, like a Pidgeon; but yet he may be served in pieces: but when you will carve him to serve whole, you must only cut the Joynts and lay them abroad; but if you serve him by pieces you must begin to serve with a wing.
The dissection of a Partridge.
The dissection of a Fowl.

The dissection of this Fowl is very indifferent, for many are of an opinion that the brawn of the breast is the only delicate bit in the whole body; others believe the thighs to be the best, wherefore I shall leave it wholly to the discretion of the Carver that is to do the Office.
The dissection of a Feasants.
The dissection of a Loin of Veal.

A Loin of Veal is a dish of meat that is great and massy enough, and therefore it may be carved into a great many pieces, which you may know very easily by the numbers that are in the figure; wherefore I shall give you no advice about the dissection of it, but only this, that when you do present any piece of it to any person of quality that is at the Table, be sure to give some of the kidney with the fat with it, and Pierce or broach it with the same fork as you use for a Hare.
The dissection of a Loin of Veal.
The dissection of a Gigot of Mutton

The Gigot of Mutton, with the hanch of either Buck or Doe, or any other Beast of that nature, are all to be carved on the same fashion, and you may make as many pieces as you please, only take notice that you present the first piece you cut with the great fork to him you cut it for.
The dissection of a Gigot of Mutton.
The dissection of a Shoulder of Mutton.

And this dissection is so easy, and so ordinary, and so well shown in the figure, that it will not be necessary to make any long discourse upon it.
The dissection of a Shoulder of Mutton.
The dissection of a Breast of Mutton or Veal.

The Breast of Mutton or Veal are carved both of a fashion, that is to say, Rib by Rib with the great fork.
For the Officers of the Mouth. 69

The dissection of a Breast of Mutton or Veal.
The dissection of a Wild Bores head.

The Wild Bores head is always served in cold, therefore to carve it up in good order, you are to begin by the Ears, and continue to the chops, which you are to cut out in slices, as near to the sides of the neck as you can; but take notice, that you forget not to serve the two slices, before the ears, as you may see by the Figure very plainly.
For the Officers of the Mouth.

The dissection of a Wild Boar's head.
The dissection of a Calves-head.

In Germany, and in other Countries, it is the custom to serve a Calves-head in whole, with the Scull opened, for which cause it is but requisite that you begin your dissection at the Ear, as you see it in the Figure, from whence you take your order of serving; and first you present to the one and to the other at a time, that is, as I understand it, to two persons together, so near as may be; to each an Eye, with a piece that is near to the very Chops, and so continue it along to the Ears, till you come to the Chops and the Tongue, which you are to cut into slices, but remember this is to be done with the great Fork, and the Brains are to be left standing before the first of the company.
The dissection of a Calves head.
The dissection of a Hare.

So soon as you have cut off the two Feet put them upon a Plate, and give them to a waiter, or Servant, and then take heed of the rest of your dissection, following the numbers marked in the Figure: There are some that hold the Legs behind are the best; others, that the Fillits are the best; however take notice that there is a Fork a-purpose for a Hare, because her Chine is very little; but however for want of another Fork you may use the great one, fastning it into the Chine.
For the Officers of the Mouth. 75

The dissection of a Hare.
The dissection of a sucking Pig.

This sort of Animal, is one of the biggest that is ordinarily served whole to a Table in France, wherefore for its dissection they usually broach it twice with a Fork; first they stick the Fork into his Chops, and the first cut they cut off, is his head, and separate it cleverly from the body, and so on; and at the second and third cuts they take off both the Ears; at the fourth they cleave his his head into 2 pieces; this done, with the same Fork you broach him into the Back a-cros, and then begin to divide it out by the Thighs, and first the left Thigh, which makes the fifth piece, and so to the left shoulder, which is the sixth piece; and for the seventh you cut off the right shoulder; for an eighth piece you cut off the right Thigh; for the ninth cut out a long piece by the side of the back, on the left side; and another on the right for the tenth piece, leaving your Fork in it, and cutting it in two pieces, this makes your eleventh piece in all; and now take out your Fork and put it to the Belly, and then cut it to the right and to the left to make the twelfth piece; then giving two cuts a-thwart, and this will make the thirteenth and fourteenth pieces, which will make all your dissection confor-mable to the Figure, as followeth.
A School of Instructions

But for the order of serving it, there are those that hold the piece by the end of the neck to be the best; especially if it be very well rosted; but others do believe the legs to be the best; but for my part I shall agree with them that hold for the side.
For the Officers of the Mouth.

The Dissection of a suckling Pig.
The dissection of a Fish.

All sorts of Fish are to be cut up after the same fashion, and what you are to observe by the bye, is, that if your Fish be great you must cut him over-thwart, as of that way to make the most pieces, but before you cut him up, remember to take away all Scales, and leave to the head a good fingers thickness of the meat, which will make your first piece to be presented; if he be to be cut up, you are to observe to carve it as you see it in the Figure, but be sure always to clear the Scales and the fins before you do present it, and if there be any Sauce put always some upon the Plate; but I would advise you first to take away the Scales and Fins from off the back and under the Belly before you begin to Carve, which you do in cutting up your Fish in the Form of a Cross, as you see it in the Figure; and when you have cut it up as you will, cover it up again.
For the Officers of the Mouth.

The dissection of a Fish.
Another dissection of Fish.

Notwithstanding I told you in the fore-going Figure, That all Fish are to be carved the self-same way, yet some are of the Opinion, that it is the best way, first to cut off the Head and Tail, and then open it on the back, and after you have taken away the Fins on the Back, cover it up again, and when you cut it out, carve it out as you see it in the Figure.
Another dissection of Fish.

The
The dissection of a Lobster.

This Fish, as you see it in the Figure, hath but four pieces, as one can easily discern, and therefore it will be needless to make any long discourse about it, but proceed to the Method of the Carvers serving of Fruit.
The dissection of a Lobster.
THE Service of Fruit hath a special dependance upon two Officers; namely, the Carver and Butler; the one for dishing, carving, and setting them out, and the other for presenting of them at the Table to the Company; but the Butler hath abundance more to observe than the Carver hath: wherefore I shall not make any long discourse in this place to instruct him in this last, but only give him advice to carve as quick as he can possible, and to carve no more but the first four Apples, the 4 first Pears, the 4 first Peaches, when it is their Season; and to make use of a three-pointed-fork to present them with; which if he hath not, let him use the other, only prick the fruit a-thwart; but for the Figs, they are not carved any where out of Italy; and as for the Million, after you have cut the two first sides, nature shews you the rest; I do not speak here of the several sorts of Figures and Impressions that you may give to any sort of Fruits, which are things things that concern the Butler only, which is to be treated of immediately in its own proper place; where you may see a great number of Ornaments and Representations which one may give them; the which if they do not give you a full instruction, yet they do much recreate the sight, with a consideration of him who hath disguised such things as these with so much ingenuity and curiosity.
Le Sommelier Royal:

OR,

The Royal Butler.

Which is to shew him what is his Charge, with Instructions how to fold his Linnen, and to fit it to cover a Table, in divers sorts of figures, with other Rarities and Gentility.

After having shewn you what concerns a Master de Hôtel, and a Carvers Office, I have judged it not altogether unnecessary to join to these the Office of the Butler; I call him Butler, because this name imports I know not how much honour to his Title and Commendation, since there there are many things in which France doth excel above other Nations, so doth this Charge above others; as being none of the least Consequence; for besides that the Butler is to trim and set out, so he is likewise to preserve and keep, as well as to give and distribute abroad where it is necessary: Wherefore it is necessary for any one that will undertake this Charge upon him, to be indued with these three qualities; first, Fidelity, Good-behaviour, and Affability towards those whom he hath to do withal; in general to all in his charge; so that being thus qualifyed, I suppose him now entering upon his Charge; wherefore in the first place I advise him to endeavour all he can to understand his Lord and Master, and next those that pertain unto him; and then inform himself, as to the order of the Table, how and with what Services it is to be served; and the distribution of those things which are committed to his Charge, as Plate and Linnen belonging to his Office.

The
The hour of Meals being now come, he must put himself in a posture of serving; and first let him put his Covering into a Basket which is for that purpose, covered with a clean Napkin; then let him set in his Basin and Ewer, the Eslay Cup, and Cadnet, Flagons, Salts, Plates, Spoons, Forkes, Knives, Riders for Plates, Table-Cloaths, Napkins; of which two at the least folded in the fashion of a broken Staff, with Bread, and all other things necessary that belongs to the Covering of a Table, and side Table.

The hour of Dinner or Supper being now come, he and his Helper or Servant, takes the Basket thus furnished betwixt them and carries it into the Hall or Chamber where they are to eat; not forgetting the Pepper-box, and Cruet of Vinegar, both furnished, the one carrying one, the other carrying the other with them into the Room.

And so soon as you are come into the Room, set down the Basket, and so begin to cover your side-Table.
first, with a clean Cloath, and then set on your Plate; first, your Basin and Ewer, and your Flagons ranged against the Tapestry-Hanging, mingled one amongst the other; then underneath compose another range of Eßay Cups, Sugar-Castors, and Glasse with the Feet downward, and upon each of them put an Eßay-Cup, or Cover over them.

This done, the Butler begins to cover the Table thus, first the Table-Cloth, then the Salts, and the Riders for Plates, or Enter-mese, then the Plates with the Coat of Arms towards the middle of the Table, so many as are necessary, but let them not touch the edge of the Table by three or four fingers.

At the right hand of each Plate place a Knife, with the edge towards the Plate, then the Spoons, the brim or edge of the Spoon downwards, with Forks, but be sure not to cross or lay them the one on the other, then the Bread upon the Plate, and the Napkin upon the Bread, and so much for covering a Table.
And now take notice that the upper end of a Table is always the end next the Window, the farthest from the Door, on the side next towards the Chimney.

But if there be a Cadnat (which is not usual, except it be before a Prince, a Duke, or a Peer of the Land) you must set it on the right hand of the Plates, and lay a Napkin upon it, and upon that a Knife, a Spoon, a Fork, with a Salt filled with Salt, then cover it over again with another Napkin that must cover your Cadnat and Cover.

It is likewise to be observed, that you are not to lay or place any Cover at the end of the Table, nor Plates on the right hand of the Cadnat.

And as the number of Plates must far exceed the number of persons that are to sit at Table, so you must have several piles of Plates ranged upon your side Table at length, and upon each pile of Plates a Napkin folded in baston rompu, or, broken staff; and over this another or more, if need so require, unfolded, which serves to wipe the hands when they are washed.

At the end of the side-Table you must have a Cive or shal low Tub, and a Cistern full of Water; &c.

After the Butler hath thus covered his Table, let him now begin to dish up his Fruit either in Plate or Cheyney, or such as he finds in the house.

And as I speak here but of a Butler of consequence, I suppose him to be in the Service of some Prince or Crowned Head; therefore it is but necessary that he should know how to order and adjust his Fruit, and disguise it into several figures; as how to carve-peek it into many fashions, but because it is not to be learn'd ordinarily, but only by seeing and practising of it by ones own ingenuity and study, as serving only to be looked upon with admiration, for fashion-fake, therefore I shall not give you any instructions for the doing of it, but only shew you some presentations of it by Figures and Cuts in Fruits, which cannot be altogether unnecessary and useless.

And
And last of all he must furnish his Plates for Riders or enter-meses with Salats and Fruits, as neatly as is possible, for his credits sake.

And it is also as necessary for him to know how to fold, pleat, and pinch his Linnen into all manner of forms both of Fish, Beasts and Birds, as well as Fruits, which is the greatest curiosity in the covering of a Table well, for many have gone farther to see a Table neatly covered, than they would have done for to have eaten a good meal at the same Table.

And now the hour of eating being come, let him bring in his Wine, present his Basoon and Ewer to walk, take his Essay both of Wine and Water; this done, he goes towards the end of the side Table, and there attends the orders that shall be given him what to do.
For the Officers of the Month.

Here follows the several sorts of Cuts for all sorts of Fruits, and amongst the rest it is to be taken notice of, that this bunch of Grapes as you here see in Figure, is not to be laid in a Dish, but to be set artificially upright, as if it were growing in the Earth, and were yet fast to its own proper stem where it first grew, &c.
For the Officers of the Mouth.
For the Officers of the Mouth.

10

7

11

8

12

9

F 3
For the Officers of the Mouth.
For the Officers of the Month.
For the Officers of the Mouth.
A brief and familiar way to instruct you how to fold all sorts of Table-Linnen in all sorts of figures, &c.

And for the doing of this, it is very necessary that you should first know how to battonner and frise, that is, to pleat and frise your Linnen; for these are the two first and principal things to be known by any one, who would employ himself to the attainment of this neat and gentle Art, the curiosity of which is here to be taught you, and that as briefly as I can.

But as I suppose, if any one will undertake the doing of this, as he hath heard it spoken of before, so I shall only say, that to battonner a Napkin, he must first take a Napkin and fould it over-thwart, and so gather it up into little pleats with his fingers, the closest and smallest that he can possibly do, pinching it hard too with his fingers, as he goes along, along, as low and close to the Table as may be; this fashion will serve to make a great many covers, and doth ordinarily serve to be presented when hands are washed, or else to be wet and laid between two Plates, as was said in the Treatise for covering of a Table.
For the Officers of the Month.

You may, if you please, put this Napkin at its full length, or else fold it double in two, or in three, or into a heart, and for this last you must double it just in the middle, and bring the two ends together, and then return them again about four fingers in length, tye the middle, and leave the two ends within the inside; so that the middle will make a long point, and the two sides will make or form a very excellent heart.

To frise a Napkin.

When your Napkin is thus done, as is above said, that is, battomed or pleated in small pleats, then you must begin to frise it either at the one end, or else you may begin in the middle middle to pinch it again cross-wise, very small, and as close and thick as you can, but be very careful to pinch the pleats very close the one to the other, as hard as ever you can possible.

A Napkin thus done will serve for a great may sorts of covers of different fashions.

A Napkin folded in bands.

Take a Napkin cross-wise, that is, from selevge to selevge, and raile up a small band against the Hemn, about the depth of your Thumbs-breadth, then make another close to that of the same breadth, and so continue doing this on both sides till you come to the end, then turn over your Napkin on the other side, and fold or turn it in three; this fashion will serve like the former for many sorts of covers of different fashions.
To pleat a Napkin in the form of a Cockle-shell double.

Take a Napkin cross-ways, and fold it in the middle, and make a band of a Thumbs-breadth near the middle, continue doing this till you come within half a foot of the Hemn, then turn your Napkin on the other side, and make the bands again in the same manner as you did the former, then take it at its length, and pinch as much and as hard as ever you can, then raise up the pleats of every band with the point of a Pin or Needle, one after another; do this on both sides, then open the under side of your Napkin that is not pleated, and fasten a Loaf in it, and gather the pleats together again upon the Loaf, then raise up your Napkin at its highth, and lay it down in the form of a Fan that is open.

To do the same single.

Pleat your Napkin over-thwart to a foot of the one Hem, so that the pleats may be under-motl, then make bands of a Thumbs-breadth from the pleats to within half a foot of the Hem; then take your Napkin at its full length, and buttoner or pleat it very small, then raise or take up the pleats with the Pin or Needle, and then raise it up in the same manner as you did the double and friese above.

To pleat or fold a Napkin in form of a Melon double.

Take a Napkin cross-ways, or over-thwart, and a band in the middle of a Thumbs-breadth, and continue doing this till within 6 or 8 fingers breadth of the Hem, then take the other end and do the same, then turn your Napkin over, and buttoner, pleat him at his full length, and you may friese it also if you will, like as you did that in the fashion of a Cockle-shell double, and when this is done put into your Napkin underneath a long roawl of Bread, and pleat
For the Officers of the Mouth.

pleat the two ends of your Napkin upon your Bread.

To fold a Napkin in form of a Melon single.

Take a Napkin overthwart or cross ways, and pleat it in bands, then battonner or pleat it very small at its full length, then put a Rowl under, and make your Napkin hold fast in a round about your Loaf or Rowl, you may frieze it also if you please, as you did that of a double Cockle-shell.

To fold a Napkin in the fashion of a Cock.

Take and fold a Napkin in the middle, so that the two selevges may joyn together, then battonner or pleat it at its full length, in as small and close plaats, and as hard as possibly you can; and frieze it also, but in the frieing of him be sure to keep it as close as possibly you can, then open it again to within a fingers breadth breadth of the middle, and joyn the pleats together again, put in a good handsome round Loaf into the middle under the fold——put the edges of the Napkin upon the Loaf, and then pull out the Head and Beak of the Cock out of the middle of your Napkin, which you must raise upon high, you must make him a Comb, and Wattles, and Beard of some red stuff; and for the end of the Beak you may make it of a large Quill, which you may cut and fashion like a Cocks-Bill, which must be fastened with a little Gum-Dragon, steeped in Orange-flower, or other sweet Water, then pull out and fashion him a Tail out of the other end of the fold and raise it up, and set it as high up as you can.

A Napkin pleated in the form of a Hen.

Fold and pleat your Napkin in the same fashion as you did the other, only it must not be so big, nor raised up so high.
For the Officers of the Month. 115

A Napkin folded and pleated in the form of a Hen and Chickens.

Pleat your Napkin like the two last, but only instead of putting the edge of the Napkin upon the Bread, you must make a many little heads of Chickens, as though they were coming out from under the Wings of the Hen.

A Napkin folded like two Pullets.

Fold your Napkin in three at breadth, and battonner or pleat it at length, and open two of the three folds or sides, and put a Loaf under each of the two folds, and then pull out the two heads and the two tails of your Pullets, in the same manner as you did that in making of the Cock, the one on the one side, and the other on the other side.
A Napkin pleated in the form of a Pidgeon upon her Nest in a Basket.

Pleat your Napkin in the same manner as you did that for a Cock, and put a Loaf under the middle of the Fowl, and then form a Head and Tail of your Pidgeon, and make a good large brim or edge round your Napkin, out of which you may make little pleats like a Basket, and let the Head and Tail appear above the Baskets brims.

To pleat a Napkin in the form of a Partridge.

Pleat your Napkin in the same fashion as you did that for a Pullet, and when it is done and fashioned, sprinkle some flowers over it, that is of the same colour as a Partridge is.

You may either make one Partridge or many out of one and the same Napkin, by only giving it so many pleats as to make the like number of folds as you would make Partridges.
To pleat a Napkin in the form of a Pheasant.

Battonner or pleat a Napkin at its full length, and fliese him to within half a Foot of an end, then put a Loaf of Bread under, and pull out and fashion the Head out of the middle of the Selvege——and raise up your Napkin as high as you can, and make a Tail like a Fan of that end which is not fliised, and be very careful to make and form the eyes and beak very artificially, and sprinkle flowers of divers and different colours about your Napkin so done.

A Napkin folded in the form of two Capons in a Pye.

Plait your Napkin in the same fashion as you did that for your two Pullets, put a long Loaf or Rowl under each fold, and form the edge of your Napkin like the crust or sides of a Pye, and let the heads and tails of your your Capons appear over the sides of your Pye.

You may practice the same things in all sorts of all other Fowls, in what number you please, in folding your Napkin as many times as you intend to make figures.

A Napkin folded like a Hare.

Pleat your Napkin in the same manner as you did that for a Cock, then open it, and lay a long Loaf under the Plate in the middle, then draw out a Tail or Scut out of the fold, and the 4 feet out of the four corners of your Napkin, and put in a small Loaf at one end under the fold, and so form out the Head, Ears, and the Neck.

A Napkin folded like two Rabits.

Fold a Napkin in three, and pleat it at its full length, then pinch or friese it, then open it on both sides within half a fingers breadth of the fold, and put in two Rowls under each fold, and a little round Loaf for
For the Officers of the Mouth.

for the head at the one end; then pull out the feet out of the four corners, and the Tails out of the folds.

To fold a Napkin like a sucking-Pig.

Bastonner or pleate your Napken overthwart, in very small pleats, and then pinch it, then put in a large long Loaf betwixt in the middle near the end; and at the other end another Loaf for the head, then fashion the Head, Ears and Tail of your Pig, as for Feet you must make them out of four Corners, and the Tail out of the middle of your Napkin.

To fold a Napkin like a Dog with a Choller about his Neck.

First make a band about a Thumbs-breadth within a foot of one end of your Napkin, then bastonner, or pleat and pinch it all at length except the band; and then raise up the pleats with a larding-pin, or a great pin; then put in a small round Loaf under one end, and then fashion the Heads, the
the Ears, and his Chops, into the which you may put a small Loaf, but you must have a great and long one to fashion the body, you may draw the Taile out of the middle, and the four feet out of the four Corners of your Napkin.

To fold a Napkin like a Pike.

Make a band at one end of your Napkin, of about half a foot large, and make it so that the Hem may joyn to the one end of the band; then fold the four Corners of your band within, so that they may make a point about the middle of your band, that is indifferently large; then pleat it at its length, but do not pinch the band, because that must make the head of your Pike; then open the point of your band, and put in a long Loaf into it, and pinch your Napkin pretty neat too, that is to say, within four fingers of the band, and leave other 4 fingers unpinch'd, and then pinch four fingers more in breadth: do this continually, till you you leave four or six fingers breadth of the end of your Napkin unpinched, and of this you must make and fashion his Tail, and put a long Rowl under your Napkin to form him a body.

To fold a Napkin in the form of a Carp.

Make a band about half a foot wide, at one end of your Napkin, in the same fashion as you did that for your Pike, only you must not fold the ends of your band; then fold your Napkin at its full length, and pinch or freeze all the band; but leave the breadth of your four fingers without freezing, and then freeze all the rest to within four or six fingers breadth of the end, which you must leave unfrozened to make a Tail; then open the band, and put in a round Loaf to fashion the head, and a long Loaf for the fashion of the Body.

To fold a Napkin in fashion like a Turbot.

Take and fold a Napkin the same fashion fashion as you did for a Cock, but do not freeze or pinch the sides or edges of your Napkin at length, by the breadth of three fingers, and so likewise leave at the end of your Napkin the breadth of three or four fingers without freezing or pinching, to make or fashion a Tail, then open your Napkin, and put in a large flat Loaf of Bread, and fashion the Head of your Turbot on the right side of the fold, and enlarge the edges of your Napkin that is not pinched about your Loaf, and then make but a small Tail, and of this fashion you may make or shape a Flounder also.

To fold a Napkin like a Mitre.

First fold your Napkin a thwart or cross-wise, so that the two hems may be together, and fold in the four corners, so that they may make a point about the breadth of your Thumb, then pleat or battonner your Napkin at its length, and freeze or pinch it almost to the point, and then put in a round Loaf of Bread into the
the place of your Napkin that is pinch-ed, or as they say freeze'd; then erect him at his full heighth, and if you please you may put in a long Rowl upon the round to keep your Mitre in his fashion.

To fold a Napkin like a Turkey.

First Fold your Napkin in the same fashion as you did for a Cock, and put a large Loaf under him, and make a Comb of a little bit of red Taffaty that may hang down upon his Beak, and stick the Head and Throat with small Flowers of different colours; then pull out a Tail at the other end of the fold, and the Wings out of both sides.

To fold a Napkin like a Tortoise.

Battonner or pleat your Napkin at its full length, and pinch or freeze it very small and fine, and put a pretty big round Loaf under the middle, and pull out and fashion a Head out of the middle of the Hem, and raise it up a little.
little, and then pull out a Tail out of the other side, and let that hang a little down, and then pull out the four Legs out of the two sides of your Napkin.

To fold a Napkin in the fashion of a Cross, like the Order of the Holy Ghost.

Take a Napkin corner-ways, and joyn the four corners together in the middle, then turn over your Napkin on the other side, and again joyn the four points together in the middle as before, and so turn him over again on the other side, and join the four points together as before, and put a Loaf under, and you shall see that your Cross, or the Order of the holy Ghost, will be perfectly made.

To make the Cross of Loraine.

When you have made a Cross like the Order of the holy Ghost, then turn over your Napkin on the other side, and pull out the four points from the middle towards the upper side, and you will see the Lorain Cross very perfectly made.
Le Confiturier Royal:

O R,

The Royal Confectioner.

Shewing how to make all sorts of Sweet-meats, as well wet as dry, as also the Composits of Fruits, and Salts, and Draggs, &c. or dry Sugar-plums.

After the Butler it is but just that we bring in the Confectioner, because he is as it were one of the same charge, for to make all manner of Sweet-meats, and such like things which are ordinarily made to be served in at the desire: I have mingled a great many things with the Confectioner's Office, which a great many people will believe ought not to be interspersed.
serted in this place, because they cannot think that they do properly appertain to the Confectioner; as, composing of Salats, &c. but I have done this here because they are things which are very ordinarily done in some particular houses, although a Confectioner is not obliged to have them in his Shop, yet notwithstanding this doth not hinder but that they may be prepared by a Butler, as well as all sorts of Confectionary stuff is by him prepared; but besides the design of serving the publick, and giving them all the Instructions that may be for the easie furnishing of a Table at a small price, with that which would cost a great deal more if bought or furnished by a Shop-keeper; therefore this may be done with ease at a Rencounter, if occasion be. Therefore I thought it could not be altogether improper to insert in this place such things as these, although many will object that it is altogether confusedly treated of in this place; for say they, here is treated sometimes one thing, and sometimes another, which which will be shewed bye and bye: to which I answer, that this complaint is altogether unnecessary and unreasonable, since I have provided against this complaint and inconvenience, by making an Alphabetical Table which shews you in what page you may find every particular thing that is treated of in this whole Discourse.

How to clarify Sugar, or Cassanade.

Take one hundred weight of Sugar, and put it into a large Pan for that purpose, put to it 10 French pints, or 9 English quarts of Water, and stir this altogether, and set it on a Charcoal fire, and then take a dozen of good fresh Eggs, break them into a pan without taking away either Yolk or Tread, then beat them so long together till they become a froth, then when you see your Sugar boil, then take about a pint of Water, and a good quantity of the Eggs thus beaten, and then let them boyle thus together a little while, and then scum it very well, and put in more Eggs and water, and scum it till it be very clear, then then pass it through a Strainer or Bag of Cloth, or Searge, or else through some Linnen that is very white and clean, and you will find that your Sugar is boyled to a liss, as they say, or to a fit smooth Substance to preserve withal, and this is the right way of boyling your Sugar, to preserve withal you may clarifie in this manner any quantity of Sugar or Castanade, observing to put in a quantity of Water and Eggs according to the proportion of Sugar you intend to clarifie.

The different ways of boyling of Sugar.

As water is always necessary in the boyling of Sugar, so it is but necessary that you should know the quantity of each that should be put together; as for example, if you should ask how much Water would serve to put to a pound of Sugar, I answer, a half of the 7th part of a quart will suffice for a pound of Sugar, but if there be any more it must evaporate away by the force of boyling, that the Sugar may come to its proper height of boyling for your use.
To Boyle your Sugar to a Lisse, or as I judge it to a Smooth Sirup.

The first boyling of your Sugar is called in French, a lisse, and you may know when this is so by taking up some of this in the boyling with your forefinger, and laying it upon your Thumb of the other hand; if it doth not run but stands, like a pea round upon your Thumbs Nail, you may be sure that it is in the state and condition that you would have it in, that is to say, Boyle'd to a lisse, as you call it.

Boyling your Sugar to a Pearle.

When it is Boyle, to this height you may know it by putting in your finger, and laying it to your Thumb, and if they cleave together fast, and when you open them your Sugar draws and clings like Threads so long as one can open them, this boyling is called, The gross Pearle, and when it holds lisse it is called, The smaller Pearle, and so forth.
How to boil Sugar a soule, or to be blown away.

This way of boiling of Sugar is called by some a Rasar, and it is to be marked, that when your Sugar is boiled to this height, you may take a Scummer and dip it into your Sugar a-boyling, and when you have taken it out again blow athwart the said Scummer, and if your Sugar be boyld enough it will fly away like dried leaves, but if it run you must boil it again, for it is not boyled; or you may instead of a Scummer put in a Sparkle, and if your Sugar be boyld it will flie away in the Air, likewhile with a Swinge.

To boil Sugar a Casse, or to break.

Wet your finger in cold Water, and put it into your boyling Sugar and as quickly pull it out, and again dip it into the cold water, and if your Sugar become dry, and breaks in the water upon your finger, then it is e-nough;
For the Officers of the Month.

nough: but if it sticks and is clammy, then it is not; but if in case you are afraid of your fingers, then take a stick that is very clean and try the experiment with the stick which you should have done with your fingers, and if your Sugar be boil'd it will break as well on your stick, as it would have done on your finger.

Here follows the Composts or Preserves in their Liquor.

How to preserve Pippens, a Composte.

Take Pippens, and pare, coare, and quarter them, and put them into fair water, take in also some of their parings, and the parings of some other Apples which you will pare and quarter also in small quarters, and make them boil till they are tender; then put them into a clean cloath and let the Water run from them, and then take as much of that water or decoction as will serve to Boyle up the quarters that you have reserved for your Composts, and put it into a Copper-pan very clean, and put in as much fine Sugar as you please, but in proportion to the quantity of quarters of Apples that you had reserved for your preserve, put them all together, and make your pan boil upon a good Char-coal fire till they are very tender, stirring them sometimes with a Spoon, but not to break them, then take them out, and lay them upon the brims of a Dish, or on a clean Cloth a-running: after this you may dish them up upon a Plate, and then make an end of boiling your Syrup upon a quick fire, putting in some more Sugar, and the juice of Lemons, and let it boil till it be a gelly, and then take it off from the fire, and let it stand till it be cold, and then pour it over your Apples, and on the brims of the Plates, as you shall see fit. Remember to take out the parings of your Apples before you strain the Decoction from your Apples. This Decoction is very good for the doing of almost all other fruits, but some will boil the paring before the fruits, and strain out the water.

Ana-
Another of an Apple that is called Calville.

Take the Apples and pare away the Rind, and take out the Cores and Kernels, cut them in half or in quarters, but it is best to cut them first, and so you take away the Core with the paring, and so you do not cut it to the Edges of the Apple, boil them in the Decoction of Pippens, and finish your work up as in the foregoing manner, only you should not put in the juice of Lemon at the first, but keep it as a reserve instead of which you may put in a little red Wine if you please.

The Composte of Lemons sliced.

Cut your Lemons in slices to the white, then take out the Kernels, and put the slices into Water, till the meat becomes a little softened, then take them out, and put them into fresh water; and then take a little Decoction of Pippens, with Sugar, and boil them them as you did your Composte of Pipins, putting in a little juice of Lemon, but put not in your slices of Lemon till they are pretty dry, and your Syrup pretty well boyled, but you need not let it boyl so much as you did that of the Apples, &c.

Composte to be made of the meat of Le mons.

Make a Gelly of Apples and make it boyl, and when it is boyled take a large Lemon, and pare it very thick and near to the juice cut him at length in the middle, then make many slices of the halves, take out the seeds, and put the slices into the gelly, and make them boyl well together till such time as your gelly come to the same thikness as it was when you put in your slices, then take it from the fire, and let it stand till it be half cold; then charge a Plate with the slices of Lemons, and cover them with your gelly, and you may do with this as you did with the former.
To make this of Oranges is the same except this.

You must not boil them in the Decoction of Apples, but their Syrup ought to be boiled to the boiling of a Pearl.

The Composie de Marons, or of large Chestnuts.

Take the biggest and the fairest Chestnuts you can find, and roast them in the Embers or hot Ashes, and when they are enough, peel them, and lay them one by one in a Dish, as many as will fill a Plate, ranged one by one, this done pour over them the Syrup of Apricocks, or Plums, or any other as you please; or if you please you may take the Decoction of Apples, boil'd with Sugar to the heighth of a-la-Perle, and pour it over your Chestnuts, this done, cover them up, and let them boil softly over a gentle fire, putting in between whiles a little Syrup as it boilles away till they are in a condition to be serv'd away hot, this done take a Plate cover the Dish in which they are and turn the Dish over as you would do a Cheese, that the Chestnuts may stand in the plate as they did in the dish, then put over them a little more Syrup to moisten them, &c.

The Composte of Barberries.

Take this fruit and take away the stalks and the seeds, and make a Syrup with water and sugar, let it boil, and scum it very well, and let it boil almost to a lisse, then put in your Barberries, and keep them close covered as near as you can, but keep them wagging for fear of burning, and so let them boil thus till your Syrup be boil'd to a-la-Perle and then it is ready.

To make the same Composte of Pears.

Take your Pears and make them boil a good pace in fair water till they be tender, then take them out, and put them into cold water to peel them.
them; if they are great, split them in the middle, or in quarters, and take out the Cores, and put them into a Skillet of Copper, put to them one pound of Sugar, and almost a pint of water, and make them boyl till your Syrup be boyl’d to the height of a-la-Perle, then take them out again.

Another fashion of the same.

Pare your Pears and put them into an Earthen-pot, or into a Copper-Skillet, and put to them some water, Sugar, and Cinnamon; set them a-boyling, and when they are half boyled put in a Glass of your gross red wine; keep them close covered till they turn red, give them near upon as much boyling as you do other Syrups for Confectionary-stuffs, but let them boyl in small quantities.

Another of the same.

Take your Pears and rost them in the Embers, and when they are rosted peel them and split them in the middle, or in quarters, as they are in bigness, take out the Cores, and put them them into a Skillet, with a little Water and Sugar, make them boil till such time as they appear as if there were no more Syrup left, and they become dryish on the upper-side, but shake them often by the handle of the Skillet for fear of burning; then dish them up upon a Plate, and squeeze over them the juice of an Orange or two, &c.

Another of the same.

Your Pears being ready and disposed of as they were in the last, make a Syrup for them with the juice of Lemon or of Orange-flower-Water, put your Pears into your Syrup, and give them a boil or two, and then put them upon a Plate, &c.

Apples a la Bovillonne.

Take Pipins and cut them in halves or quarters, take out the Core, and put them into a Skillet with the rinds downwards, with a pretty deal of water and Sugar, and let them boil till till there is scarcely any Syrup left, and they begin to look reddish, then turn them out upon a Plate, as you would do a Cheefe, and the rinds will be all uppermost.

The Compositt of Quinces.

Take indifferent small Quinces and wrap them up in wet Paper, and lay them in hot Ashes or Embers, till they be tender enough, then cut them in quarters or into halves, take out the Core, and put them into a Skillet, and make them boil with Water and Sugar, till their Syrup is made thick, then put them upon a Plate, and serve them up hot, &c.

Or thus,

Your Quinces being roasted in the Embers, peel them, and cut off that which is the best, and softest into a Dish, and put to it some Sugar in Powder and Orange-flower-water, cover them up, and set them upon a little hot Ashes.
and so let them simmer a little, and the Syrup will make itself, &c.

Another fashion for the same.

Take Quinces and peel them, and cut them in quarters, take out the Cores, and put them into fair water, in what quantity you please, then put in the Rinds and Cores, and other Quinces cut in quarters also, and boil all this well together, and then strain out the Decoction, as you did that of your Pipins, then put your Quinces into a Skillet, with a good deal of Sugar and Water, put to them a little Cinnamon, cover them up, and make them boil over a soft fire, and endeavour to make them take as reddish a colour as you can, and when your Syrup is boil'd to a Gelly, take them off and dish them up for service, &c.

To do your Orange-flowers in Syrup.

Have your Orange-flowers well blown and pick'd, the flowers from their
For the Officers of the Mouth.
their buttons, make them boil about twenty walmis in fair water, then take them out and put them into cold water, put Sugar into a Skillet, and make it boil to a liule, and then put them into your Sugar, and let your Syrup boil till it is boiled a la Perle; after this take them off from the Fire, and dish them up for service.

Boiling of your Sugar to a liule, and a-la-Perle, is told you in the beginning of this Treatise.

To conserve Orange flowers in liquid, or to make Marmalad of Orange flowers.

Pick your Orange-flowers, and make them boil as you did the last, then let them run a little, and then beat them in a Mortar of Marble, or Stone, and when they are very well beaten, then boil your Sugar, a soufle, as I told you at the first, to be blown away, then take it from the fire, and put in your Orange-flowers, and be sure to keep them stirring; after this take them off, and let them cool, and being being cold, put it into a pot and cover it up very carefully: but if you are in trouble to know how much sugar you ought to put in, I will tell you that to each pound of orange-flowers you must take two pounds of sugar.

Marmalade of Apples.

Take 10 or 12 Apples, pare and cut them into fair water, and then put your Apples and Water into a Skillet, together with about half a pound of Sugar, or thereabouts, and so make them boil, and stir them often in the boiling, for fear of burning, and when they are so much boil'd that you can scarcely see any water in them, then strain them through a Strainer, and take what you have so strained, and put it into the same Skillet with the outward pill of half a Lemon grater'd, that hath been steeped about half an hour before in a little warm water to take away the bitterness of it, but be sure to keep it always stirring in the boiling for fear of
For the Officers of the Mouth. 143

of burning, and when it is boyled to a Gelly, and that little or no moisture appears, then it is enough, and so take it off from the fire, and put it upon a Plate, or any thing else, and spread it abroad with a Knife or Spoon, the thickness of a Crown-piece.

Sallets for the four Seasons of the year?

A Sallet of Succory.

Search out the whitest and the best Succory you can find, pick it and wash it very well, and carefully swing out the water, and so dish it out upon a Plate in what form or fashion you please, either high or flat, the Leaves cut or whole, but so as you may leave room on the brims of your Plates for your Garniture which sets out your Sallets to a good appearance and Ornament in the Winter; as for Example, you may garnish with bold beet-roots, cut into what fashion you please, Lemon sliced, plain or rased, CMors or Pomgranates, or some some of the same Leaves minced, or all of these things mingled together, and in the Spring you may put your flowers either whole or cut, and mingled with all sorts of Colours, but to do well every Sallet should be garnished with that which doth most properly belong to it in its season or kind.

A Sallet of boyl'd Succory.

Take the whitest and the best Plants of Succory, pick away the bad Leaves, and cut off the green ends and the roots, so as the plant may remain whole, boyl it in a little Water and Salt, and as soon as it is boyled put it into some cold Water, and as soon take it out again, and dry it very well with a clean Cloth, then cut it out into lengths as it shall please you, and dish it up on a Plate, and garnish it very handsomely with beet-Roots, or Lemons, or Flowers well mingled of divers colours as is aforesaid.

A Sallet of wild green Succory.

Take the Leaves of this Herb, cut them
For the Officers of the Month. 145

them small, and put them into fair water, and so let them lye two hours change your water three or four times, then swing it out very well, and Dish it up on a Plate, and garnish it with any thing, either white or red. You may do the same with the white of wilde Succory, only garnish it with either red or green, or both if you please.

A Sallet made with your Parsly of Masidon, or Smallage.

Take this Herb, and pick of the outside Leaves, and cut off the ends to about a handful long, which you may cleave into about six or eight quarters, within a thumbs breadth of the end of the Leaves, and throw them into fair water, wash them out and drein them, dish it upon a Plate, and garnish them with Lemons, Granade, or sum of their own Cotten, Sprout, or Leaves, hash'd small; This Sallet is to be eaten with Oyl, and Vinegar, and white Pepper.
A Sallet called Apuy, boyl'd, or the Sprout of Roman Lettice.

Take the Stalks of Apuy, that is very white, scrape it and cut it in pieces, of about six fingers in length, bind them up in little bundles, and boyl them in water and salt, and when they are enough, take them out and let them run, then dry them in a clean Napkin, and dish them upon a Plate, garnished with Lemon and Orange rind, and Beet-roots boyl'd.

To make a Sallet of their Roots.

Take the heart of the Root, & split him in two or in four very neatly, and put them into fair water, wash them clean, and dish them upon a Plate garnished with Lemons and boly'd Beet-Roots; this Sallet is usually eaten with Salt and white Pepper.

As for your Sallets of Sellery serve them both boyl'd and raw, as these two former ones, and their Roots in like like manner as the Root in your last, for they are to be eaten all a like.
For the Officers of the Month. 147

To make a Sallet of Lemons.

Take of your fairest Lemons, either sweet or sour, peel off the rind to the white, cut them out in round slices, put them into fair water, but take them out again, and let them run a little, then dish them upon a Plate garnished with preserved Lemon-pill or green Citron, Pistachews and Granades; This Sallet is to be served with Sugar.

A Sallet of Granades.

You must take the Seeds of the Pomgranates the redest you can find, well pick'd, put them on a Plate garnished with preserved Lemon-pill, sweet Almonds, Pistachews, or Lemon sliced; and this is to be served with Sugar as the others were.

Sallets of Olives and Capers may be served alone, each by themselves or mingled, only garnish your Plate brims brims with Lemon, Beet-roots, and Charvile, each by it self, or all three upon a Plate at your pleasures.

A Sallet of Beet-roots, either boyld or roasted in the Embers, are to be sliced upon a Plate that is garnished with Capers, and Charvile, and Lemon sliced if you please.

To make Sallet of Lemon pill, or green Citron.

You must have your Lemon Pill preserved very green, Raspe it into a Dish, and raise it up lightly with a Fork in form of a little Rock, very neatly, or any other Fashion at your own fancies, upon a Plate garnished with Pistaches, the Seeds of Granades, sweet Almonds blanched, and cut very small; this Sallet is to be served with Orenge-floure-water, and Sugar scrapt over it.

To make a Sallet of sweet Almonds.

You must take the best sweet Almonds blanched into fair water, then dry dry them and cut them in little pieces and serve them upon a Plate garnished with the Seeds of the Granades, Pistaches and slices of Lemons, with a little Orange-flower-water, and Sugar scraped over it.

To make a Sallet of Pistachios:

Take the best new Pistachios and blanch them in warm water, and put them into cold water, then take them out, dry them and mince them small, and serve them upon a Plate garnished with the Seeds of Granades, and preserved Lemon Pills, or green Citron.

For a Sallet of pickled Cucumbers:

Take and peel them and cut them, either in long or round slices, and serve them upon a Plate, garnished with Samphire pickled, Purslane, and Beet-roots.
To make a Sallet of Anchovies.

You must take the best Anchovies, and wash them well in Water, or Wine, till the liquor be clear, then dry them in a Napkin, take off the Tails and Fins, or any thing that is superfluous, split them in the middle and take out the Bone, and cut him again in the middle, and place them very handsomly upon a Plate, and garnish them with Parsly, and young Onions, or five, slices of Lemon and Beet-roots, and put to them some sweet Oyl and the Juice of two or three Lemons, well beaten together with a Spoon, and put over your Anchovies.

Or thus.

Take your Anchovies and dress them as you did in the other Sallet, then take some slices of Bread, cut long and toasted, and placed upon your Plate, and lay your Anchoves upon the Bread, and garnish them with Capers, and the same garniture as
For the Officers of the Month. 151
as the other Sallet was garnished
with.

A Sallet of Small Lettice.

Take a handful of small Lettice, and cut off the roots, pick them very carefully from weeds and dirt, wash them very well, then swing them dry and dish them, upon a Plate, in what fashion you please, and garnish them with slices of Lemon and Granade seeds.

To make Sallet of Purslan.

Take it when it is young, and pick it very well, and wash it, and swing it, and then lay it upon a Plate garnished with the slices of Lemon and the seeds of Granades, or with all forts of other Hearbs at your own dicretion.

A Sallet of Lettice and Purslan.

Take of the newest Purslan, pick and wash it very well, swing it out, H 4 and
and lay it in the round of the Plate; and Lettice round about it, do this as the others were, garnish the brims with Charvile and Flowers hashed together of divers colours very small.

For a Sallet de Sante.

Take all sorts of Hearbs that are proper for salletting, as little Lettice, Purslan, Cresses, Tripe Madam, Corn de Cerf, Stags or Bucks horn, Baum, Sibalets, Sives, the Buds of the Rose Tree, the young Sprouts of Fennel, and such like Herbs as these, pick and wash them very well altogether, then swing them out, and put them on a Plate without any garniture at all.

To make a Sallet of Brocolis.

That is to say, the sprouts of Coleworts that are very tender, take away their first Leaves and thin Skins, and boil them in fair water and salt, and when they are boil'd, take them out, let them run, and so serve them upon a Plate, like Sparagus, with a little Salt and white Pepper.
For the Officers of the Month. 153

A Sallet of Reponeses raw.

Take your Reponeses very young and tender, pick and scrape them like Radishes, wash them very well, and serve them upon a Plate, and garnish them with small Herbs and flowers: To boil them do the same; and boil them in water and salt, and let them run, and then dish them upon a Plate handsomely, and garnish them with Lemon sliced, or Flowers, or both.

A Sallet of Lettece called Gennoway.

Take of the tenderest of these Letteces, wash them very well, swing them out, and cut them in quarters, and lay them in the middle of the Plate very handsomely, and then garnish the brims with Purilan.

That of Broom-buds is the same, only take away the Tails of the one, and not of the other.

A Sallet of the common Lettece is to be used as the other were above written, only you must garnish the middle middle of your Plate with all sorts of Herbs, and the brims with Lettice and Flowers of all sorts and colours.

A Sallet of Roman Lettice.

Take these Lettice, the whitest and the tenderest, wash and dry them as they should be, and then dish them upon a Plate, either in quarters, or leaves upright or laid at length, garnish these with Charvile and Flowers.

To make a Sallet of the Cardons of these.

Take the Succors or Stalks of these Roman Lettice, and peel of the leaves and skins, cleave them in quarters and put them into water, then dry them and serve them upon a Plate in the shape of Sparagus, putting small parcels of Salt and white Pepper on the brims of your Plate.

A Sallet of Cucumbers.

Take your middling Cucumbers and pare them and slice them in thin slices,
For the Officers of the Mouth. 155

Slices, take out the seeds or inside as you please, put them into a dish, with a little Salt, and let them lye to take their water from them, then put them into a Cullender and let them run, then put them into a dish with some Vinegar and an Onion, and so let them lye to mortifie, and then set them a running again, and then serve them upon a Plate garnished with Flowers of different colours.

Raddishes, green Figs, Mulberries, and butter are usually served in with Sallets, between, as inter-Messes.

And now if you will make a Crowned, or Grand Sallet, you may do this.

Take a Ballotin or great Citron, cut off the two ends as if you would slice him out, then raise up his rind very even with a great Knife to the very white: then raise up the Meat or white of your Fruit the thickness of a Crown-piece, keeping you Knife turning round the Fruit at that even thickness, till you come to the heart or seeds of your Fruit, then throw it into into fair water, and when this is done take a clean Napkin and spread it upon a Table very even, then upon this Napkin you must lay your Meat of the Ballotin, and there carve it neatly into what Form or Figure you think fit, that may serve to make a Crown, by the help of a Steel Saw which hath been cut; the French say cut in the day, that is, that you may see clearly through it, and you are to take notice, that you are to begin the work at the lower end of the Crown, and pursue it to the middle and finish it at the top or head. But because there are many sorts of Crowns, you are to take notice that a Royal Crown is to be cut at the top with Crosses and Flower-de-Luces.

And you may take notice, by the way, that thus you may make any Crown or Crownet, as big or as little as you please, this being left to your own discretion.

And when you have done carving and cutting of your Figures for a Crown, and drawn and pick’d out all the loose pieces, that your Work may
For the Officers of the Mouth. 157

Say shew it self, then put your Crown into cold water, and take fair Lemons and Oranges, cut off the two ends and take off the Pith to the white at their full bigness and height, to the thickness of a crown-piece, and throw them into fair water, let them lye a little, then take them out again and cut them into what Figures you please, but at their full length: to make a half Crown, you must have about fifteen of these of both sorts, which will suffice to set round the brims of a Plate.

Then you must have all sorts of good salad herbs, and to make a Bed of them, when they are cut indifferently small, upon the hollow of a large brim’d Plate, and garnish them with Beet-roots, and when that great Crown hath been taken up and let run a little, place him handsomely upon your bed of Herbs, at what bigness you please, and garnish him within with all sorts of good herbs, then Ralph the Rinds of green Citron, and make a kind of a Rock within the Crown upon the herbs to that height.
height that it may come a little above the Crown, and the Crown seem as if it were made fast about the Rock, but do not forget to garnish your works of the Crown with the seeds of Granades that are very red.

Then take your little Crowns out of the water, and let them run, and place them round about the great one upon little beds of good Sallet herbs or Beet-roots, and fill them within with good herbs, and on the top of each a little of your green Citron or Lemon Rasped like a Rock, and they should be garnished: also with the seeds of Granades, Pistaches, and sweet Almonds, and handsomly ranged and mingled, first an Orenge then a Lemon; thus garnish and set about your great Crown what garniture you please, for delight, between each little Crown: this will be pleasing to the Eye, set in the middle of a Table, and ought to be served with Orenge-Flower-water, and rasped Sugar over it.
Pastes of all sorts of Fruit.

To make Paste of Cherries.

Take of the best fair Cherries, and the ripest you can get, pull out the Stalks and Stones, and put them into a Skellet with a very little water, and let them boil a little, then put them into a Cullender, and let them run a little, then set a Dish under, and so bruise your Cherries and strain them quite, and when you have so done put the Pulp of your Cherries which you have drawn through your Cullender into a clean Skellet or Bozon and dry them over a small Fire, keep them always stirring for fear of burning, with a Spoon or Spatel, as well from the sides as the bottom, till you see them begin to be dry, which you may very easily perceive by their coming clean from the sides and bottom of the Skellet; this done, put in half a pound or three quarters of fine Sugar, in powder, and work it very well together, and put out your Paste,
Paste, thus made, upon your working Board (or Slate) and work it into what form you will have it, and dry it in a Stove, as you do other dry Sweet Meats.

Another fashion.

Take Cherries after they have been boyled in a little water, & strain them through a Strainer, & to a French pint or English quart of the Pulp of the Cherries thus strained, four ounces of the Pulp of Apples, which are boyled and strained together, make them dry, and do them into Paste, as you did the above written. And to make the Paste of Goosberries, only pick them clean from their filth, and do with them as you did with the Cherries aforesaid.

To make Paste of Raspberries.

Take your Raspberries that are very ripe, pick them clean, and strain them through a very fine Strainer, and order them as you did your Cherries.
To make a Paste of Apricocks.

Take Apricocks that are very ripe and pare them, and take out the Stones, boil them in a little water, then take them out and let them run a little, then strain them through a Hair Strainer, and make your Paste as you did that of Cherries.

Another fashion.

Have your Apricocks very ripe, and peeled, as is above said, put them into a Skellet, without water, and set them upon a Fire, and keep them stirring often with a Scummer till they are very tender, this done, take them from the Fire, and put in the quantity of your Pulp of boyl’d Sugar.

To make Paste of Peaches.

Take Peaches that are not too small, peel them, and take out the Stones, and boil them with a soft fire, till they begin to grow green, then take them them from the fire and let them cool in their own liquor, being cold, put them into a Cullender and let them drain, then strain them and make your Paste of them as you did of your Cherries.

Paste of Verjuice.

Take Verjuice ripe enough to preserve, take away the Stalks and Seed, let them be green a little as you did the Peaches, and then finish your Paste as you did that of the Peaches, as is aforesaid.

To make Paste of Quinces.

Take Quinces that are through ripe, pare them, and take out the Core and Stones, and boil them in water, and then finish your Paste according to the first fashion of your Cherries.

Another of Quinces.

Your Quinces being boiled, as above, strain them through a course Strainer then dry them upon a soft fire, fire, this done, mingle them with your Sugar, and give them five or six turns upon the fire, but let them not boyl at all, put them up half cold, &c.

To make Paste of Apples.

Take Pippins and pare them and take out the Core, make them boyl in a little fair water, and being boyl’d, put them into fair water again, and then take them out and let them drain, and then pass them through a Strainer of Hair, then dry them upon the fire in a Skellet, keep them stirring always both at bottom and sides with a Spartel; till they begin to come clear from the bottom, then take them from the fire and put in half a pound or three quarters of Sugar, mingle them very well together, and fashion your Paste upon an Ardoise or Slate, and let them dry in a Stove, as you do other dried Sweet-Meats.

To counterfeit all sorts of Paste, you must take Marmalade of Pippins, and strain it as you do to make Marmalade of Apples.
To Counterfeit Paste of Cherries.

Take the Marmalade of Apples and put it into a Skillet, and let it dry as if you would make Paste of Apples, but instead of Sugar put to a pound of Marmalade about three quarters of a pound of the Syrup of Cherries which was made with your Cherries, that are to be dried, and then dry it again till it will come clean from the bottom of the Skillet, then lay it upon your Ardoise or working Slate, and work it into the form of Cherries, or what Fruit you please, putting to it the Stalks of Cherries, or the other Fruit, and so dry it in a Stove as the other Pastes were before; and so you may counterfeit all sorts of Fruits, only taking notice, that to any Fruit that you would counterfeit, you must take the Syrup of the same Fruit to your Marmalade of Apples, and putting in the same Stalks, and making the Fruit into the same form or resemblance of what you counterfeit.
For the Officers of the Month. 163

To make a certain sort of light Paste.

Take the White of an Egg, and beat it very well with a little Orange-flower-water, and allay it with Pistaches, or Sweet Almonds in powder or finely beaten, and some fine Sugar in powder, work this very well together and put a little Musk into it, and bake it in a paty Pan covered up with a few hot Ashes under it and above it.

All sorts of Colours for colouring of all counterfeit Pastes or Conserves.

To colour red, take Cochenil, Alum, and Mineral Chriftal, a like quantity of each, beat it very well in a Morter till it be all a fine powder, then allay or moisten it with a little Verjuice, and strain it through a clean Linen cloath, and put it in some of the Juice that you have drawn out into your Marmalade at the same time that you put in your Sugar or Syrup, but take heed that you put not in more more than the proportion to the colour that you desire it to be, either pale or lively.

Or thus.

Take Sanders and beat them in a Morter, and allay them with the Spirit of Wine, and then make them up into little Balls upon Paper, and let them dry, and when they are dry make it into powder again when you would use it, and you will find that the colour will be very lively.

To colour Green.

Take the Leaves of the white Beet, that are very young and tender, but take out the Stalks, wash them very well, let them run, then beat them in a Morter and strain out the Juyce, put it into a Skellet or a Dish, let it boil a warm upon the fire, and then throw it upon a Strainer or Napkin, and then take that which remains upon your Strainer, to give a colour to any thing you please.
To colour Yellow.

At the time of the year, when the Lys or Lilies are in Flower, take the little yellow seeds or specks that are in the flower and dry them, and when you have occasion to use them, make powder of them, all these colours may serve for all common Pastes, as of Sugar, Fruit, Bisquet, or Milks, Preserves, or all sorts of Butter if you please.

To make Paste of Flowers.

Paste of Violets.

Take a pound of Marmalade of Apples, and strain it through a Hair Strainer, then take four ounces of Gilli-flowers very well pickt, and beat them in a Marble Morter, and being well beaten, mingle them with your Marmalade and more Sugar, and then dry them in a Skellet over a fire, this done, take them out and fashion it, and dry it in a Stove.
Paste of Orenge-flowers.

Take the same as in that of Viollets, one pound of Marmalade of Apples, and strain it through a Hair Strainer, and then take half a pound of Orenge-flowers well pickt and boyled, beat them in a Morter as you did for your liquid Conserve of Orenge-flowers, and mingle them with your Marmalade and Sugar, and dry them upon the fire, fashion it and dry it in your Stove like other Paste.

To make Paste of Quinces, called Paste de Gennes, or Geneways.

Take Quinces that are very ripe, rub off the Moss with a course Cloath, and make them boyl in a good deal of water, and when they are boyled put them into cold water, then pill them, and chuse out those that are the best boyld, and are free from stones and redness, then strain them through a Hair Strainer, then take Sugar that is boyld a foule or high Candy, or to be blown away and put in your Quinces, and mingle them very well together, and put them into an Earthen Pan to cool, and when it is cold, make it up upon Sheets of Tin, on your Ardoife or Slate, or else fashion it in a Mould made of Tin for that purpose, in the representation of a Dog, a Dolphin, a Syren, or a Vessel full of Flowers, or Leaves, or any other thing you fancy, then take them out of the Mould, and polish them, and order them according to the form you have given them, this done, let them dry in your Stove, and serve them like your other Pastes, and when you have the occasion to use them you may put leaf-Gold upon them in those places that you shall think most convenient. But to take notice, that to do well, you should take above three quarters of Sugar to a pound of Quince, thus strained as is above said.

How to make Almaner of Bisquets.

Take and break, to make common Bisquet, eight Eggs Whites and Yolks into into a Bowl or Earthen Pan, beat them together with a Wooden Spattel or Slice, about half an hour toget-ther, then put in a pound of Sugar in powder, and beat it very well toget-ther, and add to it a pound of fine Flower, mingle this well together, and beat it half an hour longer, put in as much Anniseeds in fine powder as you can take up between your Finger and Thumb at twice, or thereabouts, when this is well beaten and ingled together, let all stand a while, and in the mean while prepare your Coffins or Moulds of Tin or Papers, then put in your Stuff, and let it into an Oven as hot as you can suffer your hand in it, or else into a Copper Oven, with a Charcoal Fire above it and under it, leave them in this heat tell they are risen and have taken colour, a little ruflet or reddish, and when they are bak'd, take them out, and raise them with a Knife out of their Moulds, and lay them in a warm place, to dry a little more; forget not to have a little Sugar in powder mingled, for to Ice them over, & c.
To make Orange-Flower Bisquit.

Take a new laid Egg, break it, and take the White, for the White is sufficient, of one Egg, to use a pound of Sugar, put this into a Stone or Marble Morter, and put in your Sugar by little and little, and a little Orange-flower water, do this till your Paste become thick and fit to be handled, and then form it into little round Balls or Bisket, as you please, working it in your hands, with powdered Sugar always in your hands, and so lay the Balls upon a white Paper, a pretty way the one from the other: but if in Bisket, upon a Table and roul it out with a rouling Pin, adding always Sugar in powder above and under it, often changing its place, till it be come to the thickness of a Crown-piece, this done, cut them with your Knife as long & large as you please, into the form of Biskets, lay them upon Papers a little distance the one from the other, as you did the Balls or Cakes: But be it in Cakes or Biskets, you may may bake them in your Copper Oven; with a moderate Fire, above and under them, and being bak'd, let them stand and cool, and when they are cold, raise them from their Papers; to this sort of Bisket may be added a little Musk or Amber, which you may do by beating your Paste in a Morter of Bell-metal and a Pestel of the same, putting in your Musk and Amber with your Sugar in powder, to the quantity of Bisket, that you intend to perfume, and you may give them what colour you please, as is shewed above.

To make Paste with Orange-flowers Iced.

Make your Paste the same fashion as you made the other, roul it out and cut it likewise, as is above said; after this put the Whites of Eggs into a Dish beaten, and put your Biskets into the Eggs one after another, and let them run, then put them into another Dish, with a quantity of Sugar in powder, covering them with Sugar above and under, lay them upon
For the Officers of the Mouth. on Papers, and bake them as you did the other above-written.

To make Jellemy Bisket.

To make this Bisket you must have the Jellemy of Spain, or for want of this, common Jellemy very well pickt the Flowers from the Stalks, and beat them in a Marble Morter, beat them very well, and add to them the Whites of Eggs and Sugar in powder, and so finish your Bisket like the other.

Bisket of Lemons.

Have the Raspings of Lemons prepared, like that which is to be preferved, and make your Paste like that which you made your Orenge-flower Bisket of, and in the beating of it, put in your Raspings of Lemons, all the rest is the same.

To make great Biskets of Lemons.

First boil your Sugar to break in French
French a cake, take it from the Fire, put in a little Rasplings of Lemons, and give it what colour you please, and put in the Whites of two Eggs very well beater, mingle all together very well, and put it into your Coffins very handsomely made of double Paper, either long or large, in proportion to the Sugar you intend to use, and when your Past is cold, cut it out into what fashion you please.

To make Savoy Biscets.

And they are to be made of the same fashion as the other, but only you must take away the Whites of five Eggs, and put in their place a little Orange-flowers, and beat them very well, as is above said, then put your stuff with a Spoon upon Papers as you do a Preserve, and afterward take some Sugar in Powder, and mingle with it a little fine Flower, and dust this over your Bisket and blow away the Flower from off the Paper, and having done this, bake them, but with a less Fire than you did the others, and when they
For the Officers of the Mouth. 175
they are bak'd take them up with the edge of a Knife.

Another fashion.

Take the Yolks of six and the Whites of eight Eggs, and a pound of Sugar in powder, three quarters of fine Flower, and a little Anniseeds, beat all this very well together, and make it boyl very well, and then make a Paste of it, that is, not too moyst nor too dry, but if it happen to be too moyst you may help that, by adding more Flower and Sugar in powder, to bind it, and being in a fit disposition to work, put it into your Moulds of Tin, and half bake it in an Oven, then take them out and moysten them again with the Yolks of Eggs upon the top, and set them into the Oven again, and bake them out, but be careful you do not burn them, nor leave them too moyst, and when you have drawn them out of the Oven again, set them in a place that is not too dry nor too moyst.
Take eight fresh Eggs, and take away the Whites and the Treads, and put the Yolks into a Dish or Earthen Pan, beat them with a Silver Spoon, and in beating of them put some fine Sugar in powder into them, by a spoonful at a time, and keep beating of them alway as hard as you can, and some time after put in two spoonfuls of fine Flower, a little fine powder of Anniseeds, and a little Orange-flower-water, mingle them very well together, putting in always a little fine Sugar, till all come to be like a Paste, then put them into Moulds or Papers, in what form or fashion you please, and being fashioned, bake them in a Copper Oven with a little Fire above and a little under them, and being bak'd, and cold, raise them up very handsomely for your use.
To make March-pane of all sorts.

A common March pane.

Take a pound of sweet Almonds, and blanch them with hot water, and put them into cold a little while, take them out of the cold water, and let them run in a clean Napkin, then beat them in a Stone or Marble Morter with a Wooden Pestle, sprinkling them often with the White of an Egg, or Orenge-flower-water, or some such sweet Water, beat them thus till they are as fine as Flower, this done, boil three quarters of very fine Sugar to the height of soufle, or to be blown away, & put it to your Almonds, stirring them with a Spatel, set this again over the Fire, keep it very carefully stirring for fear of burning either by the side or bottom of the Skellet, and when you do perceive that all is come clean from the bottom and side, turn it out of your Skellet, and make it into what fashion you please; and last of all bake 15 then them in an Oven of Copper, or another at your discretion.

To make March-panes Royal.

Take the Paste of the common March-panes, and sheet it to a fingers thickness, cut it out into pieces, and make Figures with it about the bigness of an Egg, wet these Figures in the Whites of Eggs, and then cover them wholly up in Sugar, finely powdered, then take the White of an Egg and beat it in a Morter, and in beating of it put in some Sugar, by little and little, and cease not doing thus till it come to a kind of Paste, that is fine and moist, and being in this condition, make it into little Balls about the bigness of the inside of your Figures, then take your Figures from out of the Sugar where you had covered them, and range them upon Paper, and lay in each one of these Figures a Ball of this last Paste, and so bake them in a Copper Oven, or any other.
March-pane Frise.

Take good Sweet Almonds blanch'd and beat them as you did the others, and put in your Sugar by little and little, keep doing this till you have made a Paste to be handled, then you may roll it out and cut or fashion it into what form or fashion you please, this done lay it upon Paper, and bake it, but on the one side first with only the Shutter or Cover of a Copper Oven, and let them cool, and being cold, then bake the other side also, as you did the other, then take them from the Paper very hot and you will find that your Marchpane, thus made, will be very delicious, light, handsom, and perfectly good.

Another.

Blanch a quarter of a pound of the best Almonds, and beat them in a Morter, with the Whites of two Eggs, add to it fine Sugar in powder, continue continue beating of it thus till it be a mainable Paste, then put it through a kind of Sirringer with an Iron, then lay them in forms upon Papers, as you shall think fit, then bake them in a Copper Oven, with a gentle Fire, and you will see that they will be very handsom, and as good as they shew for.

Another March-pane Moist.

Blanch a pound of sweet Almonds, put them into a Morter with a pound of very fine Sugar in powder, and grate in some green Citron, beat all this very well together, and lay them upon Paper in what fashion you please, and bake them but on the one side first, with the Cover of the Oven, and let them cool, and being cold, bake them on the other, and do with these the same as you did with the other before.

A March-pane of Oranges.

Blanch and beat a pound of sweet Almonds
For the Officers of the Month. 181

Almonds, then boil three quarterns of Sugar to a souple, or to be blown away, and put in your Almonds into your Sugar, and stir them very carefully from the Fire, then put in about half a pound of preserved Orenge in liquid, but the meat only, when it is a little dreined from the Syrrup, beat it very well; first mingle this very well, and let it boil, alway stirring it together, both at the bottom and sides, till it come away clear from your Skellet, then take out your Paste and fashion it in what fashion you please, upon Paper, and bake it on one side first, and let that cool, and when it is cold, bake the other, but first Ice it over on the side that is not baked, then bake them to be all alike: And to make the same of Lemons is all one, only instead of the Meat of Orenges you take the Meat of Lemons.

To Ice your March-pane.

Make your Paste like the common March-pane, and spread it upon a Table,
Table, and make it up into what fashion you please, dry it a little in the Oven, then take little Orenge flower-water into a Dish, and put in sum fine Sugar in powder by little and little, beat them very well together, with a Spoon, till it be as thick as Paste.

Or if you please you may take the White of an Egg, and beat it with a Spoon, and mingle it with Sugar, and make an end of this Icing like the former; but do not forget to put in a little Juice of Lemons, when your Icing begins to be of a pretty thickness, so when you have finished your Icing, either this way or the other, take your dried pieces of March-pane and indore them with one of this Icings, then put them upon Paper, and bake them first on one side, and then the other, with the Cover of the Oven; and you may please to take notice that these two Icings may serve for all sorts of Paste, Tarts and Fruits.
The Conserves.

And first of Roses.

Take Province Roses, the redest you can get, and dry them in a Silver Dish, or the like, upon a gentle fire, stirring them often with your hand, and when they are as dry as you can make them, then beat them in a Morter, as fine as possible you may, and put them through a fine Strainer, then take the Juice of a Lemon, and put to it half an ounce of this fine powder of Roses, but for want of Lemon take Verjuice, then take Sugar and boil it in French a la plume, as much as to say, beyond a Candy height; being boil'd, take it from the Fire and make it whiten with your Spatel or Slice, then put in your Roses in powder, and let them stand till your Composition hath taken colour, and if by chance your Sugar should be too much boil'd, you may put in the Juyce of a Lemon, or of the half of a Lemon, as you shall judg it necessary to the proportion.
proportion, let it all cool together, and then take it out.

Another fashion.

Take of your Province Roses in powder, allay your powder with the Juyce of Lemon, boyl your Sugar a fouflé, and take it from the Fire, and put in your Roses, mingle them well together, and take them out and keep them as you do the other.

Orange-flowers.

Take a little handful of Orange-flowers, pick away the Leaves from the Buttons, and cut them small, and boyl a pound of Sugar a fouflé, and take it from the Fire, and plunge in your Orange-flowers, with a Spoon or Spartel, and when they begin to take or incorporate with the Sugar, they are enough, then take them out with the same instrument and dress them uppon Paper.
For the Officers of the Mouth. 185

Or thus.

Take your Orenge-flowers, clean pick'd from their Buttons, and beat them in a Morter, then boyl your Sugar a soufle take it from the Fire, and put in your beaten Orenge-Flowers, & so finish your Work like the former.

Conserve of Orenge-flower-water, or Juyce of Lemons.

And this is made like the former, only you must mingle your Orenge-flower water with your Sugar, after your Sugar is boyl'd, and taken from the Fire.

To make Conserve of Lemon-Pill Rasped:

Take a very fair Lemon and grate it, and let the Rasplings that come from it fall into fair water, then strain the water from the Rasplings through a clean cloath, and make it very dry, then boyl your Sugar a soufle, take it from the Fire, and put in your Rasplings, and finish your Conserve like the former.
How to Preserve or Conserve all sorts of Fruits.

Take Cherries, Apricocks a Groleiller, Plums, Peaches, or green Almonds, and cut them in small pieces, and boil your Sugar a soufle, and when it is boil'd put in your Fruits, and so finish your Conserve like the rest.

Or thus:

Take Lemon-pill, Pistaches, Apricocks or Cherries and cut them, as is above-said, into little pieces and dust or sprinkle them over with fine Sugar in powder, and dry them afterward by a gentle Fire, then take Sugar and boil it a la plume, a little strong, without taking it from the Fire, put in your Fruit and let it boil, and when you begin to perceive the plume or feather of your Sugar, then take it from the Fire, and make it whiten, and when a little Ice begins to appear and form itself, then take out your Fruit with a Spoon.
For the Officers of the Mouth. 187

A Conserve of Pistaches.

Break and blanch the Pistaches, put them into fair water a little, then strain the water from them, dry them in a cloath, and beat them in a Morter, and boil your Sugar a soude, and put in your Pistaches into your Sugar then dress your Conserve like the others.

Or thus.

Beat your Pistaches in a Morter, and boil your Sugar a la plume, and when it is boyled make it whiten, this done, put in your Pistaches, stir them together, then take them out upon Papers as the former.

Conserve of Pomegranates.

Take the Seeds of your Pomegranates, and squeeze them in a Napkin to take away the Juice, and put it into a Dish, and put a little Sugar in powder to it, and set it upon a little Fire.
Fire to 1 d., till the Sugar be melted; then boyl Sugar a soufle, and when it is boyl'd take it from the Fire, and put in your Juyce of Pomegranates, sir it together, and so dress your Conserve like the other.

Conserve of Violets.

Take the Flowers of Violets, well pick'd from their ends, or buttons, beat them well in a Morter, and strain them through a cloath, and save the Juyce, then boyl Sugar a soufle, take it from the Fire, and put in your Juyce of Violets into your Sugar, and mingle them very well together, and in taking of this out put in a little Juyce of Lemon.

Conserve of Cherries.

Take good fair Cherries, and stone them, make them boyl a little in a little water, then put them into a Cullender to run, then cut them in little pieces and boyl Sugar a soufle, then take it from the Fire and put in your Cherries
Cherries, stir them together, and do with this as the other.

A Conserve to cut in form of Slices of a Gammon of Bacon.

Take the best Sugar you can get, and divide into two Skillets, and an equal part into each, and boil your Sugar in each to the height, or a la souffe, put in the Juyce or Rasplings of Lemons into both, and a little finabre or Sanders into one alone, and stir it well together with your Sugar till it hath taken colour, then make as it were a Bed with your white Conserve upon a Paper, about the bigness of a hand, and upon that the like of red, and upon the red another white, and so continue till you have made your bed about three or four fingers thick, but let the red be last, then cut it out with a Knife, when it is all cold, and it will be in the form of Slices of Gammon of Bacon, then turn it upon Paper, and remember each time you lay on your red, to put a little red powder to give Take beaten Pistaches, on the one part, powder of Provence Roses for the second part, a little moistened with the Juice of Lemon, and Almonds beaten to Paste on the other part, put these three things in three Vessels by themselves, and boil about a pound and half of Sugar to the height of Conserve, and being boil'd divide them into three parts, and add to each part its proper ingredient mingle them well together, and let two of the three upon hot Ashes, in the Vessel they were boil'd in, then take a Sheet of white Paper and fold him double, raising him on the four sides about the height of two fingers, and fastening the four corners with Pins, this done, put in your Sugar with the Roses, into this Mould of Paper, being half cold, then do the same with your Almonds, which stood upon the hot Ashes, and so likewise with your Pistaches, mingling each thing.
thing very well in its Sugar, and pouring upon the other, half cold, and so let it stand till it be in a condition to cut, then slice it out with a Knife, first pulling down the brims of your Paper, before you cut it, then slice it out at what thickness you please.

To make Carmelet.

Boyl your Sugar to that height, call'd breaking or cafe, being boyl'd take it from the Fire, and perfume it with a little Amber, and so put it out in little rounds, upon a Plate or Dish.

Another fashion.

Melt your Sugar with a little water, and boyl it till it be a little higher than for a Preserve, and put in a little Syrup Capilaire, and then put it all into cold water.
Take Oranges to preserve, and raise the rind very neatly, in little thin chips, put your Oranges into an earthen Pan, and your chips into another, then take fair water and make it boil in a Copper-pan, and split your Orenge a little at the Blossom-end, and put it a boiling, about half a quarter of an hour, then take it out and put it into fair water again, then take a little Spoon that is made for that purpose, and draw out all the Meat of the inside at the split of your Orenge, and being clean, put it into fair water again, and have more water aboyling, and put in your Oranges again, and let them boil, as at the first, about half a quarter of an hour, take it out into cold water again, do this four times one after another successively, and then have the best Sugar boyled a litle, and then put your Oranges into the
For the Officers of the Mouth. 193
the Sugar after they are well drained and run the water out, and let them boyl a quarter of an hour in their Sugar, and take them from the Fire, let them stand till they be cold, and set them over the Fire again, and let them boyl till the Sugar be boyl'd a soffe, this done, take them off from the Fire, and let them stand and rest; and when this is done, take out your Orenges with a Fork, and let the Sugar run from them that is in them, and then place them very handsomly upon clean Straw, and they will be very handsom and compleat.

Tailladins of Orenges, or Rocks of the Slices of Orenge-Pills.

Take your Orenges and pill them like the former, cleave them in quarters, and take out the Juyce, and cut away the white till the Rind be left very thin, then cut the Rind into narrow slices, like lard to lard with-all, put them into water, and then boyl them in water, and then in Sugar, like the former; and so likewise accomaccommodate them on the same fashion, only take them out with two Forks and lay them like little Rocks, upon Straw that is whole and round,
at full length.

I do not prescribe you in this place the quantity of Sugar that you are to use for your Orenge{s}, in this first Receipt, nor yet for your Lemons in this following Receipt, because you must have so much as will make them swim entirely in their Sugar, as they boyl, but what is over and above, when your Orenge{s} or Lemons are taken out, will serve for other things, so that there is no loss in it at all.

For the Chips of your Orenge{s}.

Boyl them in four different waters,
and put them as often in cold water, but let them be upon the Fire, each time you boyl them, a quarter of an hour at a time, then take them out, and accommodate them as you did your last slices of Orenge-Pills.
For the Officers of the Mouth

For your Lemons.

Peel them and put them in water, like your Oranges, cut them as you please, put them into water, make other water boyl, and put in your Lemons, let them boyl till they be soft, and being thus boyl'd, take them out, and put them into fair water, then into your Sugar, to preserve, as you did your Oranges, and being boyl'd take them out, and lay them upon Straw likewise.

Lemon Chips.

Boy1 and preserve your Chips of Lemons, like them of your Oranges, and the Chips of Oranges and Lemons, will serve for a Praline, and the Sugar that is left after these things are preserved, will serve for other Preserves, March-pane, the Pralines, and green Wall-nuts.
Gorges de Anges, or Angles throughout.

Take Roman Lettice, that are run up of a great height, pick off the leaves, and peel the stalks, and put the stalks into water, and have other water a-boyling, and then put your Lettice into the boyling water, let them boyl till you may prick them with a Pin, and as easily take out the Pin again, and nothing of the Lettice retains to the Pin; being thus boyl'd, take them out and put them into cold water, then take them out of the cold water, and let them run all the water away from them, boyl your Sugar and put them into it, and let them boyl till your Sugar be boyl'd a la perle, your Sugar and Lettice being boyl'd a la perle, put it into an Earthen-Pan, and let them lye steeping thus eight days, then put them into your preserving-Pan, and boyl them again, till your Sugar returns in the boyling again a la perle, after this put them into a Pot with their Syrup, and when they are cold cover them up, and set them them into a dry place, and when you have an occasion to use them take them out, let them run, then lay them upon your Wyer-Lettise, or such like, and let them to dry in your Stove, as is aforesaid, upon a Lettise of Wyer, or leaf of Tin, or the Ardoise.

To each pound of Lettices you must have a pound of Sugar, and so you may preserve the Stalks of any tender Hearbs in like manner.

To preserve green Apricocks.

Take green Apricocks when they be small and tender, peel them and put them into hot water, but let them not boil, let them lye there till they begin to be green, then take them out and put them into cold water, then boil your Sugar a little, and let your Apricocks run a little the water from them, then put them into the Sugar, and let them boil till your Syrup be boil'd a la perle, after this put them into an earthen Pan and let them stand eight days, and at the end of eight days put them into your preserving...
ving Pan again, and make them boil again till your Syrup be returned a la perle again, then put them once more into an earthen Pan, and let them stand till they are cold, then take them out of their Syrup and lay them upon your Ardoise, and dry them in your Stove, but turn them often till they be dry, and when they are dry, put them into Boxes upon Paper, but so as that they may not touch one another.

And for your dry Apricocks set them a running from their Syrup, and turn them in oreillier, or in round, sprinkle Sugar in powder over them, and let them to dry in your Stove.

Or thus.

Take Apricocks, as before, and set them a running, and boil Sugar for a Preferve, put in your Apricocks and boil your Syrup till it be a little stronger, then take them from the Fire, and take them out and Ice them and lay them upon Straw, and if they be be not dry, sprinkle Sugar in powder upon them, and dry them before the Fire.
For the Officers of the Mouth. 199

Green Almonds,

Are done the same way, only they must be cleansed in hot water or Ashes.

Green Goosberries

Are done also like the Apricocks, only they cannot be pared, therefore you must take out the Seeds that is in them, and take notice that you must put in your Sugar pound for pound, that is to say, to a pound of Fruit a pound of Sugar.

Cherries dryed aoreilles or flat.

Take good fair Cherries and take out the Stones, and put them to boyl in a little water, that they may put out their Juice, then take them out and let them run whilst you boyl your Sugar a la perle, put in your Cherries
Cherries and make them boyl till their Syrup is also boyl’d a la perle, this done, put them into an earthen Pan and let them stand eight days, after this you must put them again into your Preserving Pan, and boyl them a la perle again, this done, let them cool, then lay them upon your Ardoise or Oreille, and set them to dry in your Stove, but be sure to keep them turning every day twice if need require, till they are dry, put them in Boxes upon Papers, that is to say, first a Paper then a layer of Cherries, and then a Paper, and so again till all your Cherries be put into the Box, but forget not to change your Papers at the first when they are put into Boxes, at the least every fifteen days, and if you will keep them long, you must change them as often as you see the Paper’s wet with the Syrup that comes from them, and so you must change all dried Sweet Meats, if you will keep them well, and sometimes put them into your Stoves, when there is an occasion for it.
Apricocks a Oreilles flat and cleft.

Take good fair Apricocks to preserve, and pare them very neatly, take out the Stones, and put them a little into fair water, then heat water till it be ready to boil, and put in your Apricocks, and let them lye in it, but let not your water boil, till your Apricocks swim above water, and as they come above water, take them out of the cold water, and let them run the water from them, and when they are well drein’d, put them into a flat bottom’d earthen Pan, then boil your Sugar to a small perle, and put it softly over your Apricocks, and on the morrow take the Syrup from your Fruit without touching the Fruit, and put it into the Skellet or Pan, and boil it again a la perle, and pour it over your Fruit again, do this every day for eight days together, and at the end of eight days, the last time of your boyling, put your Apricocks also into your Pan, with your Syrup, but as it may hap.. pen that the Syrrup may be too much boyl'd, you may put in a little more water, and make it boyl a little till your Syrrup is again boyl'd a la perle, being boyl'd thus, let it stand till it be cold, then take the Apricocks out, and lay them to dry, like as you did the Cherries.

Likewise your whole Apricocks with their Skins on, and the Stones in, or in quarters, may be thus prepared as the former was.

The Imperial Plums without Skins.

Take good Imperial Plums, and pare them neatly, and as you peel them put them a little into fair water, then make other water hot, till it be ready to boyl, and put in your Plums after you have dressed them well from their cold water, cover them and let them stand upon the Fire, but so as that they may not boyl till they begin to be green, then take them out and put them into cold water, then take them out and let them run a little, and so preserve them as
as you did your Cherries, and dry them.

The Imperial Plum with the Skin on

Is done also as that is without Skins, and so is all other sorts of Plums, as Perdrigon, and Plums of the Green Islands.

Peaches Corbeil.

Take good fair Peaches, and pare them, and let them soften and green like the Imperial Plums, and preserve them on the same fashion as the other, except at the last boiling you put in a little more Sugar and water in your Syrup, and so boil it a little more, and finish your Preserve in the same fashion as you did your Cherries a Oreilles.

And Pavis or Maile Peach.

Take this Fruit, and pare them, as you did the Peaches, put them into cold water, and make other water boyl, and put in your Paves and let them boyl a little, till they are a little soft, then take them out and put them into cold water a little, take them out and let them drein, then boyl Sugar a lisse, and put in your Fruit into the Sugar, and then pour both into an earthen Pan, and let them stand till they are cold, then put them into the preserving-Pan again, and make them boyl about half a quarter of an hour, do this three or four times, but in the last boyling boyl your Syrrup a la perle, and so finish your Preserve as you did the Cherries a Oreilles in the same fathion.

Pears de Roufelet.

Take Pears of Roufelet, that are ripe, and let them boyl in a good deal of water, and with a good Fire, till they are tender, then take them off the Fire, and put them into cold water, and then take them out of that water and peel them handsomly, and put them into cold water again, and
For the Officers of the Mouth. 205

and put your Pears a dreining, and boil your Sugar a lisse, and put in your Pears, and then let them boil till your Syrup come to a la perle, then put them altogether into an earthen Pan, and let them stand to be cold, and when they are cold put your Syrup into your preserving Pan, and boil it again a la perle, and pour it again over your Pears, do this four or five days together, then put in your Pears and Syrup both into your preserving Pan, but if it chance that your Syrup be too much boiled and is in the condition still of Syrup, only you may put in a little more Water, as you shall see occasion to unboil it as it were, and so boil it again about half a quarter of an hour, till such time as it is boil'd a la perle, then put in your Pears and all into an earthen Pan again, and let them cool, and when they are cold, take them out and let them run all their Syrup from them, then lay them upon your ardoifes, and set them to dry in your Stove, and so keep them turning and changing every day once or twice a day till they be dry, then put them in into Boxes upon Papers, as you do others to dry: And thus you may do all Pears that are to be preserved and dried, as the Muffade Pear and Blanck Pear, or any others which are to be done whole, as is already said.

Pears in quarters.

Take and split Pears in the middle, and boil them in Water, till they are a little soft, put them into cold Water, then peel and.core them into cold Water, then finish your preserve as you did the whole Pears.

Apples in quarters.

Take good fair Pipins and pare them, split them in the middle or in quarters, take out the Coar, and let them boil in fair Water, till they be a little soft, then put them into a little cold Water, let them run a little, and so proceed to finish your Preserve in the same manner as you did your Pears de Rousselet; and so you may do your Quinces in quarters likewise, as you did your Pipins.
Vergeus Grapes.

Take Vergeus Grapes, and take away the Seeds very neatly, and let them green in hot Water, as you did the Imperial Plumb, then preserve and dry them as you did the Cherries, a oreilles.

Or thus.

Let your Grapes be well drained from moisture, then have Sugar boil’d into a preserving heighth, and then put in your Grapes, and let them boil till your Syrup be at the same heighth as it was when you put in your Grapes, and the top or feather of your preserve be good and strong.

Rose-Buds dryed.

Take Rose-Buds and prick them five or six times with the point of a Knife, then make them boil ten or twelve walmes in Water, then take Sugar and just melt it, and so put in your Rose-Buds,
Buds, and let them boil eight or ten walmes about, and then set them to dry, after you have accommodated them as you did your Oranges.

Green Walnuts.

Take green Walnuts peal them neatly to the white, and so let them steep in fair Water six days together, but change them every day twice, after this boil them in fair Water, and when they are boil’d, put one Clove, one little stick of Cinnamon, and a slice of green Citeron into each Walnut, this being done, take Sugar and boil it, and put in your Walnuts into your Sugar, and let them take ten or twelve boils about, and then take them out, lay them to run, and so set them to dry.

To Candy all sorts of Fruits and Flowers.

Take your Orange-Flowers, before they are full blown, and put them into a flat bottom’d earthen Pan, that the Flowers be not too close pressed together, ther, then boil your best Sugar a la perle gross, or almost to a soufle, then throw your Sugar over your Flowers in the Pan, so that they may be all wetted with the Sugar, and let them stand and steep forty eight hours in your Stove to candy, in which time they will be very well candied, then take them out and lay them to dry, upon Straw that is very clean.

To candy Violet Flowers.

Take Violets before they are too much blown, with their stalks, and prepare them as you did your Orange Flowers, and so you may prepare and candy all sorts of Flowers that are to be used candied.

To Candy whole Oranges.

Take the best preserved Oranges that are newly set a drying, and see they be clear and transparent, and not too much charged with Sugar, then boil Sugar a la perle gross, or almost a soufle, and put it into a flat bottom'd earthen Pan,
Pan, and then put in your Oranges, but so as they do not touch one the other; wherefore they ought to be tied by the Tail with a little Thread, or else fastened with a Pin neatly, so that they touch not the bottom, nor one another, then set them in your Stove and finish them as you did your Orange-Flower.

Apricocks and Peaches either to candy or dry. Or any other sort of Fruit is to be done the same way that your Oranges are; only using your own discretion in the Work.

All sorts of Liquid Preserves.

And first,

To preserve green Apricocks.

Take green Apricocks that are very tender, and peel them neatly, and as you do them put them into fair Water, then make other Water hot, and put in your Apricocks; and let them stand upon the Fire till they begin to Green,
Green, then take them from the Fire, and let them stand till they begin to be cold in this Water, and when they are cold put them again into cold Water, then take them out and let them run, then boil Sugar allis and put in your Apricocks into your Sugar and make them boil a little, then take them from the Fire and let them cool, then put them to the Fire again and make them boil, till the Syruppe be boil'd al aperle, then put them into Galy or Cheina Pots, and cover them up very well when they are cold.

Ripe Apricoocks in Liquid.

Take and peel or pare what quantity of ripe Apricocks you please, as neatly as you can, then make your Water boil, and put in your Apricocks, and let them have one boil, and so take them out and put them into cold Water, and take them out again and let them drain, then boil your Sugar as you do for a Preserve, and so put in your Apricocks, and give them a boil or two, and so let them into your Stove, Stove, and let them stand till the morrow Morning, keeping a little Fire always under them.

Or thus.

Take good Apricocks that do but begin to be ripe, and pare them very neatly, and take out the stone, put them into cold Water, then heat Water ready to boil and put in your Apricocks, and let them stand (but not boil) till they begin to swim upon the Water, then take them out and put them into cold Water, take them out of that Water and let them drain, then boil Sugar a la perle, and put in your Apricocks into the Sugar, make them boil a pace, and scum them very well, then take them from the Fire, and let them stand and cool, then let them over the Fire again, and scum them very well, and make them boil till your Syrup be boil'd a la perle gross, then take them from the Fire and put them into Pots.

Apricocks with the Rinds on are done the same way, only they are not to
For the Officers of the Mouth. 213
to be pared, nor the stones taken out.

Green Almonds are done the same way also, only they must be scoured in hot Water and Sand, or else in hot Water alone.

And Green Gooseberries are done the same way also, but they are not to be scoured, but the Seeds must be taken out.

To do Cherries in Liquid without Stones.

Take good preserving Cherries that are ripe, take away their Stalks and Stones, and boil Sugar asouflee, and put your Cherries into it, and make them boil a good pace over a good Fire, and scum them very carefully, this done take them from the Fire, and let them stand and cool, then set them over a good Fire again, and make them boil a-pace, then take them off again and scum them if it be needful, and so put them into Pots and cover them up when they are cold.

To
To preserve Rasberries in Liquid.

Take good Rasburies that are not too ripe but very whole, take away their Stalks, and put them into a flat bottom'd earthen Pan, boil Sugar a soufle, and pour it over your Rasberries, and let them stand to be cold, and when they are cold pour them softly into your preserving Pan, and let them boil till their Syrup be boil'd a la perle, scum them very well in the boiling, this done put them up in Pots, and when they are cold cover them up, and keep them for your use.

Red Gooseberries in Liquid or Syrup.

Take good red Gooseberries, and pick them very well from the Blossoms and Stalks, then boil Sugar a soufle, and put your Gooseberries into it, and make them boil and scum them, then take them from the Fire and so let them cool, and when they are cold let them over the Fire again, make them boil and scum them as before, and so let let them boil till their Syrup be boil'd almost to a Gelley, which you may know by putting in a Spoon into the Syrup, and if it come out red they are enough, then take them from the Fire and scum them again if need require, and put them up into Pots, and cover them up when they are cold.

Walnuts white in Syrup.

Take good fair Walnuts when they are green and peel them to the white, insomuch that there may no green be seen, & put them into cold Water, then into other Water, and make them boil a great pace till they be tender, which you are to try thus; take a Pin or larding prick and stob into them, and if they fall from it of themselves, and do not hold to it at all, then they are enough, then take them off the Fire, and put them into cold Water again, then take them out and press them a little in the middle, and put into each a Clove, or Cinamon in little long Sticks, or green Citern or both if you please, then boil Sugar to a lisse, and put in in your Walnuts and make them boil very well, and then stand from the fire about half an hour, then set them over the Fire again, and make them boil a great pace, till their Syrup be boil'd a la perle, then take them from the Fire and put them up in Pots as you do other Preserves, and when they are cold cover them up and keep them for your use.

If you would have any dry, take of these and let the Sugar run from them upon your ardoise, and set them to dry in your Stove as you do other dryed Preserves.

Mulberries in Syrup.

Take good Mulberries that are a little green, pick away their Tails, and preserve them like your Cherries in Syrup.

Your Imperial Plumbs in Syrup.

Take Imperial Plumbs when they begin to be ripe, pare them and put them into fair Water, then heat other Wa-
For the Officers of the Mouth.

...ter just ready to boil, and put your Plums into it: let it stand over a little fire, till the Plumbs begin to be green. This done. Take them from the fire, and let them stand and cool in their water; and when they are cold, take them out, and put them into cold water again: then boil Sugar a fonsle, and put in your Plumbs, the water being well dreined from them; make them boil a great pace, and scum them. This done, take them from the fire, and let them cool: then set them over the fire again, and make them boil again till their Syrrup is boyled a perle: then take them from the fire, and put them into Pots, and cover them up when they are cold.

All sorts of Plumbs may be done thus, except your Damask Plumbs; which must be scalded in boyling water till they begin to be a little tender; and then you proceed to finish your Preserve as you did the other Plumbs before.
Pears preserved in Syrup.

Take the Rouxlelet Pears, fine and ripe, and boil them with a great fire, in a great deal of water, till they begin to be tender; then take them out, and put them into cold water: then peel them, and put them into other cold water: then boil Sugar a lisse, and put your Pears into it, and make them boil, and scum them: then take them from the fire again, let them stand to be cold; and when they are cold set them over the fire again, and let them boil till their Syrup is boil'd a perle gros: then take them from the fire, and put them into pots, and cover them up when they are cold, and keep them for your use.

Muscat Pears in Syrup.

These Pears, and all other Pears, that are to be preserved whole, may be done as the former were. And so likewise your Pears in quarters, only you should quarter them before you boil them to preserve.
Peaches de Corbeil.

Take Peaches not full ripe, pare them, and take out the stones, put them into cold water a little, then boil other water, and put in your fruit, and make it boil upon a soft fire till they begin to be a little green, then take them from the fire, and let them cool, then put them into cold water, then boil Sugar to a perle, and put your fruit into it after the water is well drain'd from them; make them boil, and scum them well: then take them from the fire, and let them cool, and when they are cold set them over the fire again, and make them boil till their Syrup is boiled to a perle. This done, put them up, and cover them when they are cold.

Verjuice Grapes in Syrup.

Take good Grapes that are fit for preserving, when they begin to be ripe, peel or clean them, take out the seeds, warm water almost ready to boil, boyl, put in your Grapes, and let them stand upon a soft fire till they begin to be green; then take them from the fire, and let them cool in their water: and being cold, take them out of the water, and put them into Sugar a little boyled, and make them boyl seven or eight times, and take them from the fire.

To preserve Muscadine Grapes.

Take Muscadine Grapes a little greenish, clear their skins, and take out the seeds, and boyl Sugar to a perle, and put in the Grapes, cover them up well, and let them boyl well a little, and then let them cool; and when they are cold let them on the fire again, and let them boyl till their syrrup is boyled to a la perle, and then put them up, and cover them up when they are cold.

And you may do the same with them without taking away their skins.
Quinces preserved in Liquor.

Take good ripe Quinces, and cut them either in halves or quarters, pare and coar them, and put them into cold water, make other water boil, and put in your Quinces, and make them boil till they be soft: this done, take them from the fire, and put them into cold water, then boil Sugar a little, put in your Quinces, and let them boil upon a soft fire, and cover them up close. If you would have them look red, take them sometimes from the fire, and let them stand a little, and then set them on again: do this from time to time till their syrrup be boyled almost to a jelly, then put them into pots, and cover them up when they are cold.

Take these Remarks upon your Preserves, as well wet as dry.

All sorts of fruits that you have a mind to preserve, either wet or dry, as well the one as the other, ought to be
be a little green, and gathered when they begin to be ripe, but not full ripe; except it be Gooseberries, Cherries, Pears and Quinces: and those ought to be full ripe, and preserved with a quick fire very carefully; only your Quinces, which need no quicker fire than your green fruits that ought to be preserved green.

Green fruit ought to be boiled in water with a little fire, and you may put a little Vinegar into your water to make them green the better; but when they are in their Sugar you must make haste with a quick fire.

To each pound of Fruit you ought to have a pound of Sugar, except it be to your Cherries; to which half a pound, or three quarters at the most, will suffice: but to your Quinces a pound and a quarter will be required, and yet not too much.

All sorts of Preserves ought to be kept in a very temperate place, that is to say, not too dry nor too moist, if you will preserve them well.
Jellies of all sorts of Fruits.

Take any sort of fruit you please, and cut it into pieces, and boil it in water, either more or less, according as your fruits are in hardnefs or softness; and when they are boiled, strain them through a clean strong Napkin, and get as much decoction from them as you can, and put this decoction into a Skellet or Preserving-Pan, with almost a quart of water and a pound of sugar. Let all this boil well together till your Jelly be made; which you may know by taking a little of it into a Spoon, and pour it out: and if it falls in pieces, and not runs nor ropes, then it is made: or if you put it upon a Plate, and it doth not run, then it is enough. And when it is thus boiled, take it from the fire, and put it out.

And you are to take notice by the way, that all sorts of red and green Jellies are to be boiled upon a soft fire, and close covered up in the boiling, but the white must be boiled uncovered upon a quick fire; and with-all, more Sugar to Quinces than to any fruit else whatsoever.

Jelly of Goosberries.

Take Goos-berries, and press or bruise them, and strain it out through a clean strong Napkin, and measure the Juice, and to each pint take three quarters of a pound of Sugar: make this boil well together. You shall know when it is boiled enough by putting a little of it upon a Plate, and if it will come clean from the Plate, and not stick to it when it is cold,
then it is enough.

The Jelly of Raf-berries is made in the same manner.

Fellies of Verjuice.

Take Verjuice, and make them just boyl up in fair water, and strain them through a course Cloth, then boyl Apples, and mingle their Decoction with the Verjuice, and use it like the rest.
The Jelly of Cherries are made in the same manner as that of Verjuice is.

Gelly of Apples:

Make a Decoction of Apples, and strain it through a Napkin, and to a French pint, that is almost a quart, of this Decoction, put in about three quarters of a pound of Sugar, &c.

Gelly of Quinces:

Make likewise a Decoction of Quinces, and let it redden a little, then strain it through a Napkin, then put Sugar into it like the others.

Cognacces and Marmalade of Quinces:

Take what fruit you please, cut it into quarters, and boil it; and when it is boiled let the water run or drain well from it, then strain it through a Colender or a Hair-strainer, then boil a pound of Sugar a soule; and L. 5 being being boyled, put into it a pound of your Marmalad, first taking it from the fire, and let it stand till it be cold; and when it is cold dress or fashion it upon a Plate, and mark it as you do other Pastes.

This may serve to make a Tart either iced or covered.

Cotignacs of Orleans, or Marmalad.

Take fifteen pound weight of Quinces, and boyl them with three pounds of Sugar, and almost two quarts of water; and when they are well boyled, strain them by little and little through a Napkin, forcing all through that possibly you can: then take this De- coction, and put it into your Preserving-pan with four pound of Sugar, and make it boyl. And to know when it is enough, you may try it upon a Plate, and if it rises or heaves, make haste and take it away from the fire, and dispose it into Boxes.
To make this Cognac thick.

Melt a pound of Sugar with a little water, and put in a pound of Marmalad of Quinces, stir this all together, put in a little Cinamond, and make it boil like your Jelly, but be sure to keep it stirring for fear of burning to the bottom, and when it is boiled put it up into Boxes, and keep it for your use.

But if you would have it very red, put a little Cocheville into it in a Linen Cloth, and let it boil in it; or else you may put in a little deep Red Wine.

Or thus.

If you would not have it so thick, put almost a quart of the Decoction of Quinces, and a pound and half of Sugar, and but half a pound of Marmalad; and make all this boil together like the former.

Almonds.
Almonds a la Praline.

Take a pound of the best large Almonds, pick them very well, and cleanse them from their dust, boil a pound of Sugar a la perle, and put your Almonds into it, and let them boil till the Sugar be boiled to a soufle, stirring them sometimes with a Spatula: and when they are boiled to this height, take them from the fire, and stir them with your Spatula till they are dry; then put them into a Dish, and pick out all the little pieces of Sugar, and put the Almonds into the Pan or Skillet again, and let them over the fire again, and keep them there till they begin to put forth a little kind of Syrup which is usually called Oyl, then put in by little and little the rest of your Sugar which is in your Dish in amongst your Almonds, and keep them stirring in the Pan with your Spatula till they be cold, &c.
Another Praline of Violets.

Take Violet flowers well picked from the buds, take about four ounces of these flowers, and boil Sugar a fousle, and take it from the fire, and mingle half a pound of Almonds for a praline with your flowers, and put them into your Sugar; stir them well together, then take them out, and lay them upon clean Straw, and the Flowers will stick to the Almonds, and look very neat and handsome.

The same with Roses.

Only pick your Roses, and mince them a little, and use them as you did the flowers of Violets; and so you may use any other flowers as you please.

Praline of Oranges.

Take about half a pound of Orange-chips, which have been boiled in water, as is before said, and preserved served in three quarters of a pound of Sugar boil'd a soule; then finish your Chips as you did the Violets.

And you may do Lemons after the same manner.

Fried Almonds a la Languedoc.

Take Almonds and blanch them into fair water, then take them out of the water, and let the water run from them, then put them into a Bason, or any thing else, and good store of Sugar with them, then put Oyl into a Frying-pan, and make it as hot as to fry withal, and put your Almonds into it, and let them fry till they seem to be as it were a little candied over them, take them out with a Scummer, and lay them upon Papers with a Spoon as you do your Preserves.

Neffles de Dauphine, or Medlars in Fricasey.

Take Medlars that are fit to eat, and cut off the blossom and their tails, then then melt some Butter, and fricase your Medlars in a Frying-pan; and when this is done, take them off from the fire, and put to them some Orange-flowers, and good store of Sugar in Powder.

Butters, Creams and Milks.

Blanch about forty sweet Almonds in warm Water, and put them into cold water, then into a clean Mortar, and beat them a little; then put to them about half a pound of excellent good Sweet Butter, a quantity of Sugar in Powder, but the whitest you can get, and a little Orange-flower-water; beat all this very well together, and pass it through a Syringe or Squirt with an Iron Pin, forcing it out at the same hole, and then dress it up upon a Plate, and so serve it at discretion.

The Butter of Pistaches is made in the same manner, only you may colour it either red or green.
Butter Leaved and Friezed.

Take a strong clean Napkin, and tie the two corners together, and fasten it to an Iron Hook, and then tie the other two corners together, but so that one may put in a Stick between the Napkin and the Knot, then put into the Napkin a pound or half a pound of the best Butter you can get; set an Earthen Pan under it to receive the Butter that you shall press or strain out of it by stirring and turning of the Napkin, but your Pan ought to be wet first; then gather up the Butter and dry it upon a Plate, and serve it.

To make Cock-Cream.

Take about a pint or more of good sweet Cream, and put it into an Earthen Pan, and take a small handful of white Twigs in form of a Whisk, tie them up together, and clip off the ends, and whip your Cream with it, put in good store of fine Sugar in powder, der, and a pinch of Gumdragont (that is to say, as much as you can take up between your finger and thumb,) whip this very well together till it becomes thick like Butter, then lay it in pieces upon your Plates, and you may raise it as high as you please, and it will lie in this state two days together without putting any Sugar over it.

Cream of Sedan.

Take about a pint or more of sweet Cream, and put it into an Earthen Pan, put some sweet Milk to it, and half a pound of Sugar broken in pieces, then whip it with your Whisk about half an hour together, and then let it stand and rest an hour at least, and it will be thick and firm five or six fingers deep: this done, dress it upon a Plate with a Spoon, without putting any Sugar over it.

Cream de St. Gervais de Blois:

Take about a pint of sweet Cream, and with a Whisk whip it five or six strokes, strokes, and put in some Sugar in Powder, and whip it again as much, and then put in a pinch of Gum-dragon, and whip it again as much as before; that is, five or six strokes; and then put it into a Dish, or on a Plate, and Sugar over it.

Cream de Bourdeaus.

Take your Cream-Cheese that is not salted, and grate it in an Earthen Pan or Dish, pour upon it softly a Pitcher of fair water, holding it up a pretty height, and keep stirring it with your Pestle or Rouling-pin as you pour in the water; let it stand and settle a while, and then take up your Cheese from the top of the water, and serve it upon a Plate; you may if you please pass it through your Syringe or Squirt. And by Cream-Cheese I understand to be, that which we say here fresh Cheese or Cheese curds.
White Cream.

Boil in a skellet about a quart of Milk, and put into it a good piece of Sugar, then take the White of two Eggs, whip them well with a little Orange-flower-water, and put it into your Milk, and keep it stirring till it be a little thick: this done, let it stand and cool, and when it is cool strain it through a close Colender, and press that which stays behind very well out, and you shall see it will be a very delicate Dish of Cream.

Cream made of Almond Milk.

Blanch and beat a pound of Sweet Almonds as you do for Muffins, and in the beating of them sprinkle them with new Milk; and when they are beaten very well put them into a quart of new Milk, and stir them very well together, and put them into a Skellet, and make them almost ready to boil, and strain this through a Cloth, pressing it very hard through, then then take that which is strained out, and put it into a Skellet with a good piece of Sugar; make this boyl till it is pretty thick, then put in a few Orange-flowers into it, stir it together, and put it upon a Plate, and serve it cold.

Cream to make Tarts withal made of Almond-Milk.

Make your Cream the same that the other was; but when it begins to boyl, put in the Yolks of six Eggs well beaten, with a piece of fresh Butter, and so let it boyl till it is as thick as Pap, keep it always stirring in the boyling; then let it stand till it be cold; and when it is cold, dish it, or else put it into Crust, and bake it a little, and garnish it if you can with green Ciftern.

Cream of Pistaches.

Take about a quart of Milk, and make it boyl till it begins to be a little thick, put into it a good piece of Sugar, gar, stir it always till it begins to thicken, then take a quarter of a pound of Pistaches well blanched and very well beaten, and put this into your Milk, and keep it stirring: this done, Dish up your Cream.

Boyled Cream.

Boyl about a quart of Milk, with a good piece of Sugar, then put in the Yolks of six Eggs well beaten, and a little piece of Butter; and when your Cream begins to be thick you may take away a part of it upon a Plate, and boyl the rest a little more; and it will serve to make Tarts.

Another manner to make it.

Take good sweet Cream and sweet Almonds well beaten, put all this into a Skellet together, and stir them well, and make this boyl upon a soft fire till you see your Cream begin to thicken, then put in the Yolks of two Eggs well beaten, with a little fine Sugar in Powder, and stir them about five or six White Cream.

Take about a quart of new Milk, and put it into an Earthen Pan with a quarter of a pound of Sugar and a pint of sweet Cream; whip this well together with a little Whisk made of pilled Twigs, and as you whip it, in some measure take off the Scum; and when your Milk and Cream are well whip'd together, dish it up in a Dish in the form of a Pyramid.

English Cream.

Take sweet Cream, and boil it in the thing you do intend to serve it in, and put into it the bigness of a Corn of Wheat of Renet, first beat and mingled with Milk; stir this well together, and it will be finished.

Plissons of Poitou, or Clouted Cream.

Take a good Earthen Pan full of Milk, as it is milked from the Cow, and
and strain it into another Pan, and put about a quart of Cream newly scummed from the Milk into it; stir them very well, and put them into a cool place, and so let them stand a good half day; after this set your Pan upon a small Charcoal fire, but so as not to boil, let it stand about half an hour, and then set it into a cold place again, and six hours afterward set it upon a gentle fire again, and let it stand half an hour, then set it into a cool place for six hours more, and then over the fire again for half an hour more, and then set it again into a cold place to cool, and it will be a Plisson, or a Curd, of about three fingers thick and very delicate, then take it up with a Plate, and sprinkle Sugar over it, but take heed you break not the Plisson or Curd in stirring of your Pan.

The common Plisson.

Take a great Earthen Pan of sweet Milk, and set it over the fire made of Charcoal, and let it heat, but not boil!; let it continue thus for the space of three hours, then take it from the fire, and let it stand till it be cold; then take up the top, or that which is upon the Milk, which is the Plisson, or in the nature of that which we call Clouted Cream. Serve this with Sugar over it in Powder.

To make this Plisson with Butter.

Take about three quarts of Milk, and put it into a Skellet with a pound or three quarters of a pound of Butter, make it boil, and keep it stirring together the space of half an hour: this done, let it stand till it is cold, then take it up with a Plate, and sprinkle Sugar over it.

Caillebots of Bretagne.

Take a Silver Basin full of good Milk, make it warm, and put into it a little Renet, or else the Chardon, to make it turn, and when it is turn'd cut the Curds or Caillebots with a Knife, and set your Basin upon the Embers to heat again, till your Curds begin gin to harden, then take them away in the basin with their whey, and put them into a dish or pot with fresh milk, and so let them stand till they are cold,
and when they are cold serve them.

To make the Grovests of Britaign, or Oat-meal milk.

Boil about a quart of Milk in a Skillet, and when it is boil'd take it from the fire and put into it two small handfuls of Oat-meal, stir it together and let them cool together, and when it is cold strain it through a cloath, and wring it very well out, then take the Milk thus strain'd and put it into a Skillet, with a good piece of Sugar, make it boil and keep it always stirring till it be as thick as pap, this done take it from the fire, and serve it away hot with Sugar over it.
To make Ricottes of Langres, or wild Curds.

Take a large Kettle or Pan of whey, that is very sweet, set it over a charcoal fire, but so that it may be very hot but not boil, then take a Sallow or Willow stick about the thickness of an Egg and cleave it in three at the end, so that it will make a Fork of three points at the end, with this Fork keep always stirring in your pan, in the middle and about the sides, and as you stir there will come a Curd into the Fork, so as it comes in, so as to fill and hold to the Fork, empty it into a little basket or pot made with holes in the bottom and sides that they may run and drain the Whey from them, this done, put into your pan half a glass of good milk, and stir them as before, and in often repeating the work you may draw out of one pan of Whey 24 of these Curds, which when they are thus drawn and drain’d in a pot or basket, as is aforesaid, you may serve them with Sugar and they will
will be very delicate and good to serve.

To make a Cheese de Maison.

Take about two quarts of good Milk, and as much Cream, put them together with a little Renet, and so let this stand till it is, as we say, come, then have a little kind of a flat basket made with Oysers pretty deep, cover this with a clean linnen cloath, so that the cloath may reach the bottom all over, then put your Curds into this basket and cloath with a ladle, and let it stand and drain 24 hours, and at the end of that time turn out your Curd upon a plate, take away the cloath, and cut your Curds into quarters and put some Orang-flowwer-water and good store of Sugar in powder over it, and so serve it.

Refreshing Syrops.

Syrop of Violets.

Take four Ounces of Violet-flowers
ers very well pickt from their ends and filth, beat them in a Mortar, and boil a pound of Sugar, a souflé, and put your flowers to beaten into it, and then strain it all through a clean linen cloath, and put the Syrops into a bottle and stop it up close when it is through cold.

Or Thus.

Boil your Sugar and beat your Violets as is aforesaid, then lay a Napkin over a dish or pan, put the Violets into the Napkin and pour the Sugar to them, stir them about, strain and press them very well out, and so keep the Syrop for your use.

Syrop of Cherries.

Take Cherries and take out the stones, squeeze them a little and make them boil without water, and so soon as they begin to boil up, strain them and wring out all the juice very well, then take about a quart of this juice, and put it to a pound of Sugar boil'd a souflé
For the Officers of the Month. 245

a souflé, and make it boil till it comes to a gros perle, and then keep it for your use.

Or thus.

Take Cherries and squeeze out the juice and strain it, set it over the fire and let it just boil, and put in your Sugar in proportion of a pound to a quart of juice so drawn, let it boil together till it be a Syrup, then keep it for your use.

Syrup of Mulberries.

Take Mulberries being yet red, squeeze them and make them boil, and strain out the juice, and so proceed to finish your Syrup like that of your Cherries.

Syrup of Apples or Pippins.

Take Pippins, pare and cut them in slices, either round or long, then take Sugar in powder, and then take little strait sticks and lay them pretty close oververthwart the bottom of a dish or earthen pan, then make as it were a bed of Apples thus cut into slices and another of Sugar; repeat this till you think you have enough, then take your pan or dish, thus done, with the Apples, and set it into a cool place, and let it stand thus a whole night for your Syrup to run, and you will find this to be a very excellent Syrup in the Morning.

Or thus.

Take and boil your Pippins thus cut in slices in a little fair water, and when they are well boil’d, strain them out and wring out the juice, and put it into a Skillet, and to about a quart of this put a pound of Sugar, and so let it boil together till your Syrup be boil’d to a perle; then put it into bottles, and when it is through cold, stop it up very close and keep it for your use.
Syrup of Apricocks.

Take Apricocks very ripe, pare them and clean them in the middle, take out the stones and lay them upon sticks as you did the Apples, a layer of Fruit and a layer of Sugar in powder, repeating it till you have enough, set it by into a cool place a whole night, and the next morning heat a little fair Water hot and put your Fruit into the water, and so strain the liquor from the Fruit through a linnen cloath, but do not squeez nor break the Fruit in the straining, but let the water run gently through your strainer; this done, take the juice thus strained, and the juice that came from your Fruit, and put both into a Skillet and make them boil together till your Syrup be boil'd to a perle, then take it from the fire, put it into bottles, and when it is through cold, stop it up close and keep it for your use.
Syrup of Verjuice.

Take Verjuice Grapes, before they be ripe, and beat them in a Mortar, then strain them out and put the juice into a bottle or some other Vessel, and set it in the sun or before a fire, do not stop the bottle till the juice be clear as water; this done, pour off the top very softly that you stir not the bottom, then boil a pound of Sugar, a soufle, and put in 4 ounces of this juice of Verjuice into it, when you have taken it from the fire put it in a bottle or what else you please, and when it is through cold, stop it up, and keep it for your use.

Syrup of Quinces.

Take Quinces very ripe and wipe of the moss with a cloath, and grate or scrape them to the core, and strain or press out the juice through a cloath and put it into a bottle unstop, and set it in the sun or before the fire till it be clear, then pour of the top softly
For the Officers of the Month. 249

ly without disturbing of the bottom, then boil a pound of Sugar, a soude, and put 4 ounces of this juice into your Sugar and stir them together and put it into a bottle, but if it be made too raw by putting in of the juice you must make it boil to a perle, which is the true and only way of boiling all Syrups to keep: but if it chance that your 4 ounces of juice be not enough for your Sugar, you may put in more, and so proceed to finish your work, and when it is through cold, stop it up close and keep it for your use.

Syrup of Grenades.

Take the Seeds and Meat of a pound Grenade and strain and press out the juice, put it into a bottle or other vessel, let it stand and settle, and when it is settled use it as you did the juice of your Quinces.
Syrup of Lemons.

Take 4 ounces of the juice of Lemons and put it into a pound of Sugar boil'd a soufle, and finish your work like that of your Quinces.

To make white Fennel.

Take the branches of Fennel make them very clean and lay them a drying, and when they are dry take the white of an Egg and a little Orange-flower-water, beat this well together and dip your Fennel into it, and let it steep a little, then sprinkle fine Sugar in powder over it, and lay it to dry before the fire upon a sheet of paper.

To make red Fennel.

Take the juice of Grenades, with the white of an Egg, beat them very well together, then put in your Fennel as before, put Sugar in powder over it and dry it in the Sun.
For the Officers of the Mouth. 251

To make your Fennel blew.

Take your Tourne-sol, or stone-blew, and grate it into fair water, put to it a little powder of Iris and the white of an Egg, beat this well together and wet your Fennel in it, and put Sugar over it, and dry the Fennel as you do the former.

To whiten the flowers of Roses or Violets.

Take the white of an Egg and a little Orange-flower-water, beat them together and put in your flowers to wet, and take them out again, and taking of them out, give them a little press, and so open the leaves and put Sugar over them, and dry them before a fire; and thus you may whiten any flowers or fruits, as Cherries, red Gooseberries, Raspberries, and Strawberries, and you may dry them either at the fire or else in the sun, which you like best.
To preserve the Stem of Artichokes.

Take the stalk or stem of Artichokes and peel them very clean, and take away all the strings very carefully, put them into cold water, then take some water boil and put in your stalks or bottoms and let them boil till they be very well boil'd, then take them out and let the water run from them, then put them into Sugar, and make them boil five or six turns in the Sugar, and so let them rest and cool, this done take them out and let them run a little the Sugar from them.

The Ponsif or Sitroule.

Take a good Ponsif and cut him out into slices, and put him into cold water with a handful of white Salt, let him lie and soak thus five or six hours, then make him boil in fair water till he is very well boil'd, then take him out and let him run, then take Sugar and make it boil and put in the slices of your Ponsif into it and let it
For the Officers of the Mouth.

it boil till it be ready, then take it from the fire.

To make Cakes of Cherries, Apricocks, Pistaches and Almonds, &c.

Take Cherries or Apricocks in what quantity you please, pare and stone your Fruit, and beat it in a Mortar with Sugar in powder till it is firm enough to work, then make it into Cakes and bake them before you ice them, then ice them both at top and bottom.

But your Pistaches and Almonds they are to be done much easier, and are easier to make Cakes of than the other things are; for example, take a quarter of a pound of Sugar in powder, a pennyworth of Gumdraggon, and a drop of perfumed water, beat all this very well together and make your paste, and roul it out to the thickness of two shillings or thereabouts and bake it in an Oven.

To make the Abaîles, steep your Gum in Orange-flower-water, beat your Almonds or Pistaches in a Mortar with a little piece of the Gum, mingle it well with Sugar in powder, then make and fashion your paste according to your own fancy and pleasure.

You may also of the same paste make another sort that is clear, mingling a little musk with your paste, and taking a great care that you keep it very clean at the top, and you may cut them into long or round, or any other fashion what you please.

And as for the baking of them you must be very circumspect and careful, and bake them either in an Oven or Pati-pan, with a fire above and another under, but less above than under.

To make Cakes with the paste of Lemons.

Take fine Sugar in powder, and the white of an Egg with a little of the Rasplings of the meat or inside of your Lemon, beat all this in a Mortar well together, and if it chance that you have too much white of Egg, then put put in more Sugar finely done like flower, till you make that in the Mortar stiff like paste that is to be handled, then work it up and make your Cakes as you would have them to the thickness of half a finger thick, or less if you please, bake them upon papers in the Oven, or else in a pati-pan with fire under and above, but very moderate, and take heed lest they grow too high coloured, for so soon as they begin to be yellow take them out, for they are enough.
For the Officers of the Month. 255

To make a Tart à la Combalet.

Take the yolks of three Eggs without any mixture of white, with half a pound of your Citron, with Orange-flower-water and musk, beat your Citron, mingle all these together and dry it in the beating, with sometimes putting in a handful of Sugar in powder, then put all these into a Skillet and give it three or four turns upon the fire, then form it into a Tart and put it into a pati-pan with Sugar over and under it, shut up your pan and let let it bake with fire above and under it, and when it is half baked take it out and set it into an Oven to dry.

Abbaisses iced.

Take of all sorts of dried Fruits and beat them in a Mortar with a little Orange-flower-water, and fill up your Abbaisses or hollowness with this Fruit which will form a certain thickness capable of being iced and proper for that purpose, then ice it over and let it stand a little with the icing upon it, then bake it all in a pati-pan till the icing rise and show it self; and to do this the easier, put fire over your pati-pan but put none underneath, but not too hot.

Macaron.

Take a pound of Almonds blanch them into fair water, take them out and let the water run from them, then beat them in a Mortar and molten them sometimes with the whites of these Eggs instead of Quarg the ven-water, put in a quarter of a pound of Sugar in powder, beat all well togeth­er and make your paste, then you may cut and form it out upon paper in form of Macarons, so bake it, but beware of giving them too much fire or baking them too hot, when they are baked take them out and keep them in a place that is warm and dry.

To counterfeit Strawberries.

Take the paste of Mappleain, and roul it in your hands in form of a Strawberry, then wet it in the juice of Barberries or red Gooseberries, turn them about in this juice pretty hard, then take them out and put them into a dish and dry them before a fire, then wet them again for three or four times together in the same juice and they will seem like perfect Strawberries.

To make Muscadine square or round.

Take fine Sugar in powder and a little Gum-dragon steep’d in Orange-flower flower-water, and a little Musk, beat all this in a Mortar and work it up in form of a Muscadine, and dry it at a distance before a fire or else in the sun.

Marons or large Chesnuts, à la Limosine.

Roast your Chestnuts the ordinary way, and when they are rosted peel them, and give them a squeeze between your hands to make them a little flat, lay them handsomely upon a plate as you intend to serve them, then take water and Sugar and the juice of a Lemon, or some Orange-flower-water, boil this to a Syrup and pour it boiling hot over your Chestnuts, and you may serve them either hot or cold at your own pleasure.

But if you will make your Chestnuts white, then take the white of an Egg and a little Orange-flower-water, beat this well together and put in your Marons into it and make them all wet with this, then put them into a dish with fine Sugar in powder, roul them together till till they are all covered over with Sugar, then set them to dry before a fire.
For the Officers of the Mouth.

Italian Waters.

Fesemain Water.

Take 2 handfuls of Feseme flowers and put them into a flagon or earthen pot, put to them about a quart of fair Water and a quarter of a pound of Sugar, let this stand and steep about half an hour, then take your water and flowers and pour them out of one Vessel into another, till such time as the water hath taken the scent and taste of the flowers, then set it into a cool place a cooling and you will find it a most excellent scented water.

Orange-flower-water.

Take one handful of Orange-flowers, and put them to about a quart of water and a quarter of a pound of Sugar, and do with this as you did with your Feseme.

Musk
Musk Rose-water.

Take two handfuls of your Musk Rose-leaves, put them into about a quart of fair water and a quarter of a pound of Sugar, and finish this as you did your Jeseme water.

To make water of Rasberries.

Take Rasberries that are very ripe and strain them through a cloath, and take out all the juice and put it into a Glass, or such like, uncovered, and set it in the Sun, or by a fire, or in a House till it be clear; this done, pour it softly, into another vessel, but so as not to trouble the bottom; take a quantity of it and put it into a pan or pot, with about a quart of water and a quarter of a pound of Sugar, shake it well together and pour it out of one vessel into another, strain it through a clean cloath and set it a cooling, and you will find it to be a very excellent water.
For the Officers of the Mouth.

The Strawberry, Cherries, and Red Gooseberry Waters, are all made in the same manner as the above-said is.

Apricot water.

Pare and stone about a dozen of ripe Apricocks, then boil about a quart of fair water, and when it boils take it from the fire and put your Apricocks into it and let it stand, and about half an hour after put in a quarter of a pound of Sugar, and when your Sugar is melted strain it through a clean cloath and let it stand and cool, and when it is cold you will find this to be a very excellent Water.

Cinnamon water.

Make about a quart of water boil, and take it from the fire and break into it about a quarter of an ounce of Cinnamon, with a quarter of a pound of Sugar, and let it stand till it be cool, then strain it out through a clean cloath and so set it to cool, and drink it when you please.
Coriander water.

Take a handful of Coriander-seeds, break them and put them into about a quart of water, and so let it stand, put in a quarter of a pound of Sugar, and when your Sugar is melted and the water well taken the taste of the seeds, then strain it out through a cloath as you did the former and drink it at your pleasure: You may do the same with Anniseeds.

Lemon water.

Take a Lemon and cut his rine into chips, and put the chips into about a quart of water with a quarter of a pound of Sugar, then pour your water out of one vessel into another till the water hath well taken the taste of the Lemon, then strain it out as you did the former.

This is to be done with Oranges.
To make Delicious Drinks.

And first to make Hypocras with Red Wine.

Put into an Earthen pot that is very clean, or a pan, about a quart of very good Claret-Wine, three quarters of a pound of fine Sugar in pieces, a little Cinamon, two corns of long Pepper a little bruised, twelve Cloves, two blades of large Mace, a little Ginger slice'd, a good Pippin pared and sliced, cover up your pot or pan and let it stand about half an hour, then pass it through a bag made for that use, either of Cloath, Serge or Flannel, made like a Jelly bag large at the Mouth, and the other end only a point, put into your bag twelve sweet Almonds broken but not blanched, or else wash the point of your bag in Milk: then stir your Hypocras together and put it into your bag and strain it often till it be very clear; this done, put it into a Bottle and stop it up if you will keep it, but if
if you would make it any better, you may take a grain of Musk, and two of Ambergrease, beat this with a little Sugar in a Bell-mettle Mortar, put it into a little Cotton or Flax, and put it into the point of your bag and strain your Hypocras over it two or three times.

Hypocras of White-wine.

Take about three quarts of the best White-wine, a pound and half of Sugar, an ounce of Cinnamon, two or three leaves of Sweet Marjoram, two grains of whole Pepper, let all this pass through your bag, with a grain of Musk, two or three slices of Lemon, when it hath stood and infused altogether the space of three or four hours. That of Claret may be made the same way.

To make Rosfolis.

Take about a quart of the Spirit of wine or good Brandy, put it into a Bottle with twelve Cloves, three grains or or corns of long Pepper, with a little green Anniseeds, a little Coriander-seeds beaten, let all this stand and steep together about two hours, then strain it out through a linnen cloath, then boil some good Sugar a soufle, take it from the fire and put in your Spirits into the Sugar and stir them well together with a spoon, and pass them through your bag as you did your Hypocras, putting into the point of your bag a dozen of sweet Almonds broken but not blanched, but if you will make it richer, take 4 grains of Musk, and 6 of Ambergrease, and put them at the point of your bag; and so continue your work like the Hypocras.

To make Populo.

Take about a quart of very clear White-wine, put into it a good Pippin pared and sliced, a little Anniseeds and Coriander-seeds bruised, let this stand and steep about 2 hours, then boil about 2 pounds of Sugar a soufle, then take it from the fire and put put into it about half a pint of the the Spirit of Wine, stir this well together, and let it stand and cool, and when it is cold put in your White-wine, and pass it all through your bags as you did your Rosolís, then put it into Bottles and stop it up very well.

To make Sorbec of Alexandria.

Take a good large piece of Veal, that is to say, a half Fillet, or a slice cut round the Leg, beat it well upon a block with a Rolling-pin, take away the Fat, put this into a clean Earthen pot, with about 3 quarts of water, and let it stew till it is reduced to a pint and half or a pint, then take 2 pound of Sugar and put it into a Skillet, and make it boil with the juice that came from the Veal, after it is well scummed and all the fat taken from it, and is strained through a clean cloath, boil all this together and scum it, then boil it to a perle gros, and put it into Bottles, and when it is cold stop it up very close for your use.
To make a sharp Syrrup.

Take a dozen of good Lemons cleave them in the middle, take out the seeds, and pick out all the meat and juice into an Earthen pot, and make a good fire of Charcoal, and put your pot upon it, and have a pound of Sugar boil'd a souflé, and put it into the pot to the juice and meat of your Lemons, and let it boil till it is boil-ed a perle, then take it from the fire to cool, then put it into a glass-bottle, and stop it up close for your use when it is through cold.

To make Lemonade.

Take 6 Lemons, cut them and press out the juice into an Earthen pan, and join to it the juice of 3 Oranges, the peel of half a Lemon and of a whole Orange, put to this about a quart of water, and half a pound of Sugar, pour it out of one vessel into another till the Sugar be melted, then strain it through a clean cloath and let it stand and cool.
Orangeade.

Take 6 good Oranges, and 2 Lemons, and finish your Orangeade as you did your Lemonade.

To burn Wine.

Take about a quart of good Burgundy Wine, and put it into a Silver Tankard, or what other vessel you please, with a pound of Sugar, two blades of large Mace, one corn of long Pepper, twelve Cloves, a sprig of Rosemary, and two Bay-leaves; set your vessel upon a good Charcoal fire, make your wine boil, and light it with a paper, and let it burn till it goes out of it self; drink this as hot as you can, the hotter the better.

Wine for the Gods.

Take 2 great Lemons, peel them and cut them in slices, with 2 Pippins pared and sliced like your Lemons, put all this into a dish, with three quarters
For the Officers of the Mouth.
of a pound of Sugar in powder, a pint of Burgundy wine, 6 Cloves, a little Orange-flower-water, cover this up and let it steep 2 or 3 hours, then pass it through a bag as you do Hypocras; and if you will, you may Musk it as you do your Hypocras, and it will be most excellent.

To make all sorts of Dragees, or Sugar plumbs.

You are to take notice that when you will make these Dragees, you must have two boilings of Sugar, that is of two different sorts, the one is called a perle, and the other lisfe; that is, the one rough and the other smooth, for from this it comes that we say Almonds, or such-like things as those,
perle or lisfe, that is, rough or smooth.

Wherefore if you would have any thing either rough or smooth, you must boil your Sugar accordingly, either perle, or lisfe.

And you are to take notice again, that if you will make any sort of these Dragees, you must have a large pre-
A School of Instrucions

serving-pan of Copper, with two handles, and flat at the bottom; or else one of Silver, which must be separate from the ground with two Cords, about the height of your middle, under which you must have a moderate fire, either in a Chafing-dish, or in an Earthen pan; and to make your rough things, you must have another vessel of Copper made like a Tunnel, and the neck of this Tunnel must be very small, and the Tunnel must be hung up right over your pan, exactly in the middle, and into this Tunnel you must put your Sugar boil’d a perle, when you would make any thing perle or rough.

Almonds perle, or rough.

Take sweet Almonds very whole, and well cleaned from their dust, put them into your pan and dry them a little over the fire, put your Sugar boil’d a perle into your Tunnel, and be very careful to stir your pan, and turn your Almonds in the pan that they may all take their Sugar equally alike, and you may may sometimes stir them with your hand and separate them if any do hold and cling together.
For the Officers of the Mouth. 271

You may sometimes stop your Syrup a little to let your Almonds dry, between whiles you may cover them as thick or as thin of Sugar as you please, in doing always the same at your own discretion.

Almonds lisfe or smooth.

Make your Almonds very clean, and put them adrying in your pan, then take Sugar boyled a lisfe with a spoon, about a quarter of a pint at a time, and pour it to your Almonds, which you must keep stirring and turning often with your hand, let your Almonds rest sometimes to dry, you may cover them as much or as little as you please with Sugar, doing always the same at your own discretion.

Anniseeds of Verdun:

Take good sweet Anniseeds, cleanse them carefully from their dust and stalks, stalks, this done, put them to dry in your pan a little, and then proceed to finish your work as you did your Almonds a liſfe, but not cover them too much with Sugar.

Coriander perle.

Take new Coriander seeds, pick and cleanse them very well from their dust, this done, put them into your pan, and make your Dragee in the same fashion as you did the Almonds a perle.

Fennel in Dragee.

Take good green Fennel seeds that are sweet, and make these like the former Aniseseeds of Verdun.

Sugared Peafe, or great Verdun.

Take Aniseseeds that are very sweet, and make your Dragees in the same fashion as you made the other Aniseseeds of Verdun, only in the Sugar-ing of them you must make them as big as great Peafe.
Pistaches smooth, or lisfe.

Take Pistaches broken and pick'd, and put them into your pan, and put your Sugar boil'd a lisse into the Funnel at the same time, and do with your Pistaches as you did with your Almonds lisse, and you may make them a perle, as you made your Almonds perley'd; but you must not dry your Pistaches in your pan as you do your Almonds, but on the contrary, you must let your Sugar run at the same time when you put your Pistaches into your preserving pan.

To do Cinnamon, a la Milan.

Take good new Cinnamon and cut it out into little long pieces like Lard for Larding, put them into your pan, and Sugar boil'd a perle into the Funnel, and so finish your work as you did your Almonds a perle.
Orangeade perley'd.

Take good Oranges to preserve, pare off the rine very thin, then cut each Orange in four, and take away all the inside, and cut the rest into little slices, like Lard for Larding, boil this in in water, and preserve this to dry, as is said in the Treatise of your dry preserves, then take these from the straw, but so as the pieces do not stick together, and put them into your pan, and finish your work as you did your Almond a perce, or rough.

Million seeds done in Sugar lisse.

At the time of the year when Millions are in season, save the seeds of the beet, and keep them in a dry place, and when you would make the Dragee with them, let them be very well dried in your pan, and then have Sugar boil'd a lisse, and finish your work as you did your Almonds a lisse.
Cucumber seeds done in Sugar lisfe.

At the time of Cucumbers, save their seeds in a dry place, and when you would use them take off the skins, and put the Kernels into your pan, and finish your work with these seeds, as you did the Million-seeds.

Citrouil seeds done in Sugar.

Make your Dragees with these seeds as you did those of the Cucumbers, these three last may be made a perle as well as a lisfe, but they will not be so good.

Apricocks done in Sugar a lisfe.

Take Apricocks preserved, dry or in paste, beat it in a Mortar with a little Orange-flower-water, and make this paste into little balls like Pease, and give them a little press with your finger, and make them flat like a Lintel, and let them dry a little, and then proceed to make your Dragees as you did your Almonds lisfe.
The meat of Lemons done in Dragee.

Take the meat of Lemons as it is dried and use it as you did the paste of Apricocks.

You may perfume your pastes in the beating them in the Mortar, and you may also perfume any of your Dragees, by putting Musk and Amber prepared into your pan, at the last cast of Sugar that you give them.

And you may take farther notice, that you may make Dragees of all sorts of dry conserves, and the paste of Fruits of all sorts.

To make white Salt of bay Salt.

Take a littest of bay Salt and put it into an Earthen pan, with almost two quarts of water, let it stand till your Salt be dissolved, stirring it from time to time till it is all melted, then let it stand and settle till it be a little clear, then pour it out softly into another pan, and then let it settle again, and throw away the bottom and
For the Officers of the Mouth. 277

filth that was in your first pan, and when it is settled pour it softly into another pan, then strain it through a cloth and let it stand and settle again, and then pour it out again into another pan, do this always till your water is clear, and when it is clear, put it into a preserving pan or Skillet, and make it boil with a quick fire till your water be changed into Salt; when this is done, stir it often, for fear it should not boil at the bottom: If you put this thing in practice, you will have good white Salt that is very clear and fine, and of one littorn of bay Salt you may put two of white.

A Littorn contains of English measure about a pint, or better, but this is unnecessary in England.
Here follow some few Necessary Advices to the Reader, concerning all that is already said.

After all these fashions of Preserving, and all other things depending thereon, both of Preserving and Conserving, I do not question but there are many that will be very ready to complain, and say, that what is here delivered is not so clear and plain as to be understood by all, notwithstanding they have not their own Spirits so intelligible as to know how to form their complaint, or what to complain upon; Yet notwithstanding, to satisfy the Fantaftick and Critical humours of many, I have judged it but necessary to joyn to the whole work some general Light and
and knowledge of these things (although they are common enough to many) to help and instruct those that will put these things in use and practice that are here laid down and experimented; but without practice, I dare avouch, none shall ever attain to the perfection of what is here to be learn'd.

Wherefore Reader, I give you this advice, to the end that you may make your own profit and take away all occasion of anger and complaints, that you put all this into practice which is here laid down in Theory.

And first, when I speak of the several boilings of Sugar, for where as I say sometimes you should boil your Sugar a lisfe gros, which is great, and sometimes a lisfe minu, which is less, or not so high, and sometimes a perle gros, and by and by a perle minu, these terms may seem strange and ridiculous, or be counted High Dutch to those that never saw nor tryed the Experiment of what is here said; therefore to give you the full Explanation of the words, I think it not too too hard to conceive, that by the \textit{gros}, or \textit{minu}, is meant least or most boil'd, either in \textit{lisse} or \textit{perle}, insomuch that \textit{lisse} \textit{gros} is meant most, and \textit{minu} least boil'd of either \textit{lisse} or \textit{perle}, which is in \textit{English}, to the best of my small judgment, but rough and smooth, for \textit{lisse} is smooth, and \textit{perle} is rough; and as for \textit{gros} and \textit{minu}, the \textit{gros} is highest, and \textit{minu} is not so high, or not so much boil'd; and as concerning the tearms of the boilings to their several heights, an \textit{English} Confectioner may inform you better; as it is out of my Element to do it, therefore I proceed to say,

That when I speak of Sugar boil'd to a Jelly, I say, or at leastwise mean, that which is boil'd with the decoction or juice of Fruit; but as concerning your Jelly, to give you a little light as to the knowledge of it, and that you may know when it is enough, take of this decoction or juice as I have already laid mingled with Sugar, take it, I say, with a Spoon, and if it falls down by pieces, and not run like Syrup, be assured that your Je-ly is perfectly boil'd and very well made.

And when you put up your delicious Drinks, be sure that your Bottles be very clean and well stop't.

And for your Italian Waters, keep them in as cool a place as you can, but yet let me advise you, not to make more of them than you have a present occasion for.

Put not your Syrups in a place that is too dry, for fear of their Candying.

Concerning the Whisk I spoke of in the Treatise about Milk and Cream, the Whisk ought to be made of fine small twigs of Birch, or such-like wood, neatly peel'd, and tied up in quantity a little bigger than your Thumb, and the small ends must be cut off a little, for fear of breaking in your Cream, and so you come to be made ashamed; but for want of Birch take other wood.

As concerning Sallets, there are some Sallets which I have not described their seasonings, therefore it is now come into my mind to tell you, that that you should serve them with Vinegar and Sugar, or Oyl and Vinegar if you please.

And to make your Pralines more agreeable, you may perfume them with Musk and Amber well prepared.

As your Mailepains ought also to be perfumed, and for the most part iced atop.

To colour your Preserves, you ought to serve your self with that which you have prepared, but if in case you have ordinary Fruit likewise for to do, you may take, as for example, instead of Pistaches you may take the leaves that are young and tender of a Pear-tree, and instead of the Pomegrenade or Barbery, which they call Epine-vinette, take Cochenal or Sinabre, which is Red-Sanders, and you are to remember, that you may perfume any Preserves with Musk and Amber prepared.

The Fruits and Flowers that you make white must be kept in a dry place, if you will keep them for your credit and honour.

You may give your Fruits what colour your pleasure, with what you have prepared to your knowledge, if you will be conformable to what I have already said.

The straw whereon you lay Oranges and Lemons to dry must be perfectly clean, yet notwithstanding you may lay them on Lettuce or Rushes.

And if you will take my advice, you should garnish your compost of Lemon-peel preserved with Pistaches, the grains of Grenade or Cherries preserved, oreille, or any such thing as these.

And if you will be advised by me, when you make your Preserves in Syrup, take as much Sugar as Fruit, except Cherries and Quinces, but to a pound of Quinces you must take a pound and quarter of Sugar, but to a pound of Cherries three quarterns of Sugar is enough.

Do not complain of the quantity of Sugar that you use about your Oranges and Lemons, for you cannot well put in too much, for they should be all covered over and swim in the Sugar:

But if you shall apprehend this to be an unnecessary charge; then know withal, that what Sugar is over and above, when your work is done, it will serve for many uses, for you may use it with credit and profit too in your Praline, in your Compost of Pears, or in the Preserving of green Walnuts.

For your dryed Preserves you must observe the same rules as to the others, that is to each pound of Fruit, a pound of Sugar; and I would advice you to put your dried Preserves in Boxes of Wood, but always between two Papers, when you have taken them out of your Stove, and be sure to keep them in a dry place, and keep their Papers changing from time to time, till the Syrup hath done running, and the Paper continues dry; the Syrup thus drawn away, may be employed for the making of your liqued Preserves and Pastes of Fruit; but if in case at any time you chance to use this Syrup, you must remember to take but one half Syrup, and the other half Sugar.

You must keep your Pastes of Fruit in Boxes and Papers, the self same man-manner as you did the dryed Preserves and change their Papers.
To make your Paste, you should have the wait of your Marmalade in Sugar in powder, but for good husbandry sake, it will not be very inconvenient if you put but half or three quarters of a pound of Sugar to a pound of Marmalade.
All Candies ought to be kept in a dry place.
After your Paste of Genway, half a pound of Sugar is sufficient for a pound of Marmalade.
Your white Salt must be kept in a dry place, as reason will tell you.
Be very careful that your Preserving-pan or Skillet be always very clear and clean, and always made of red Copper, and made for that purpose, and that your Spoon and Scummer be of the same mettle, or else of Silver, as it is very requisite it should be so.
The Oven in which you bake your Maffepons ought to be either of Copper or Iron, such as you carry into the Army, but for want of such, that of a Pastryman, or Baker may serve, if you
you have none of your own for want of others.

To prepare your Musk and Amber, as you ought, you must beat it in a Mortar made of Bell-mettle, the Pestle of the same, put to it in the beating a little Sugar in powder, when it is well beaten together, put it into a Paper, and keep it till you have occasion to use it, either for your Drink or Preserves.

When you would prepare your green for colouring of either your Preserves or Paste, take the young leaves of a Pear-tree, beat them in a Mortar, strain out the juice into a dish, and set it upon the fire, and when it begins to boil put it into a strainer or sloath, and take the scum that stays upon the Cloath or Strainer, and keep it for your use when you would colour any thing green, either Paste or Preserve.

When you would colour any thing red, have in a readiness an ounce of Cochineal, half an ounce of Alum, and half an ounce of Mineral Chriftal, all very well beaten together in a Bell-mettle tie Mortar, and when it is well beaten, keep it in a Paper till you have occasion to use it, then take it and moisten it with either Verjuice or Spirit of Wine, then strain it through a cloath and take the juice for your use, either for Paste or Preserve.

For your colouring Yellow, take a certain whitely Flower which you gather in Summer, and take out a certain yellow Seed which is in the Flower, and dry it, beat it to powder and it will serve you when you have an occasion for it, if carefully kept in a dry place, for your use.

And now behold, Courteous Reader these Advices, which I have not only thought convenient but necessary also for your contentment, that you may with cheerfulness put that into practice which is written in this Book for your Instruction, or else I could wish you a more ample and compleat solid experience, that I might have the happiness to see you put it into practice publickly, with good success.

Although the Weights of France and England are much alike, yet the Measures Measures are not, therefore to avoid all Cavils and Censures that may be made upon me, by the reading of some Receipts in French, where it is said a pint only, and I say in English about a quart, it is because the Paris pint is an English quart, within a very little.

There are also words that I have written in French, as not knowing the meaning of them in English; As for example, a Ballofines is a fruit that grows in France, but not in England, as being neither Gorde nor Cucumber, and yet it is as it were between both, and yet it is no Pumkin as some may think.
Le Cuisiner Royal:

OR,

The Royal French Master Cook.

Being a Familiar Instruction how to make all manner of Ragues, and to season and dress all sorts of Meats fitting for Feasts, Banquets, and Collations of all sorts, &c.

As divers Potages for flesh days.

A Potage with a farced Hen.

Take a piece of Veal, and Beef Suet, hash this very well together with Parsley, the smaller the better, season it with Spice and Salt at discretion, then take three or four Eggs,
Eggs, and make an Amlet of them, and hash or mince this very small, and mingle it with the rest, and work this together with the Yolks of four Eggs, and then farce your Hen with it between the Skin and Flesh, and boyl her in good Broth; and if you have any forced Meat left, you may make Andouls of it, to garnish your Dish with that and Calves Sweet-breads; or if you find any Lettuce you may farce them also; they are good for to garnish a Potage or any thing else: the Andouls is only the forc’t Meat, tyed up in a call of Veal, in the form of a long small Pudding, and for to use it, you must after it is boyled cut it out in slices, either round or long, and so garnish with it: the Amlet is only Eggs broken and beaten together, and fryed in a frying Pan with a piece of Sweet Butter.

A Potage of Green Geese.

Take your Green-geese and boyl them the usual way, and when they are boyled take them up and fry them whole whole in a Frying-pan, to colour them, either with the Fat of Bacon or Hoggs-larde, called now a-dayes \textit{Manege de Pork}; then take Ginger, long Pepper, and Cloves, beat all this together, and season them with this Spice; a little Parsley and Sage, and put them into a little of the same Broth that they were boiled in, and sprinkle a little grated Cheese over them, and let them have a little Stew, and then dish them up with Sipets under them.

\textbf{Lumber'd Potage.}

Take and boil what sort of Flesh you please, and when it is boiled take out the Flesh, and put the Broth into another Pot, but beware of Bones and setlings; but to prevent them you may strain your Broth through a Cullender, then take the Yolks of Eggs beaten very well with a little Verjuice and White Powder, this done, pour the Eggs into your Broth, and keep it always stirring with a Ladle or Spoon, and after this make make all boyl together, and then dish up your Potage.

What this White Powder is you must inform your self else-where; for I have enquired of a French Master Cook who told me plainly he could not inform me.

A Potage of Almonds.

Take the best Almonds you can get, blanch and beat them in a Mortar, moisten them sometimes with White-wine and Verjuice; then take Crums of Bread and put to it, and strain it, put into it a little Ginger, but do not let it be too thin, put it into a Skillet, and set it upon the Fire, keeping it always stirring; and when it hath boyled about a quarter of an hour, put in good store of Wine into your Compound, and Salt at your own discretion; then take a Hen, or a piece of Veal, and put it into a Dish, and serve it away very hot.
For the Officers of the Mouth. 293

A Potage of Sheeps Feet or Trotters.

Take good Sheeps Feet, the best you can find, scald them very well, and wash them so that they may be very white, split them in the middle, and put them into an Earthen Pot, with some good Broth that is made of good fat Beef, put to it some Verjuice and White-wine, season it with Pepper, Ginger, whole Cloves, and a little Saffron, with a little Rosemary hasht very small, set all this a stewing together till they swim above their strong Broth.

A Potage made with the Brawn of a Capon.

Take a Capon and boil him, then take Almonds and beat them very well with the Brawn of another boil'd Capon, and strain this with some Broth that your Capon was boil'd in, with a little Verjuice and White-wine, a little white Powder, and sweet Herbs minced very small, and when

when your Capon is boyled put in all the Composition that you have strained out with a few Gooseberries, and a little Salt, keeping it always stirring.

A Green Potage.

Take either Capon, Pullet, or Veal, and set it a boyling in some good Broth, made of either Beef, or Mutton, a piece of Bacon minced small, then take some green Wheat and other green Herbs, such as are in season, with Parsley, beat all this in a Mortar like Greensauce; this done strain it into a Dish with some Crums of Bread, and Yolkes of Eggs, either boyl'd or raw, strain it with a little Broth, or Verjuice, and when the Meat that you have chosen is boyled, either whole or in pieces, put your Composition into your Pot, with some white powder and sweet Herbs minced small, some Gooseberys and Salt at discretion, keep it always stirring; and take notice that a Capon is handsomer than any of the other Meats, and he is handsomer
For the Officers of the Mouth. 295

Some to be served whole than in pieces, but this is left to your own discretion.

A Red Potage.

Take a Capon, Pullet, or a piece of Veal, and make it boil as you did the former, either whole or in pieces, then take Rice-flower and Almonds beaten with white Powder, strain all this through a Strainer, and add to it a little Rose-water, then put that which you have strained out into your Pot, keeping it always stirring; then take Sarchauviotte, or Cherbet and put it a steeping in White-wine, Verjuice, or Broth, till the thing you put it to steep in be become red, then put it into your Broth with a little Salt and Sugar, keep it stirring, and take heed that you do not make your Potage too thin, and garnish it with Sweet-meats and great Sugar-Plums; and, as in the former, so in this, it is most honourable to serve your Fowl or meat whole.
A Violet coloured Potage.

Take the same sort of Meat or Fowl as was specified in the two last; and to give it a Violet colour, take the same things as you did to the Green and the Red, only instead of Cherbet, take your Stone-blew of Violet colour, and make your Potage rather inclining to thick than thin; you may give the same colour to your Rice, observing the same Circumstance or anything else, only scraping a little of your Stone-blew into that which you intend to colour, using your own discretion to make it look pale or lively.

To dress the Belly of Veal or Goat like Apples.

Take the Belly or Chaldron of Veal or Kid, and boil it in Broth, wherein was Beef boyled, or mutton, a piece of Bacon, a handful of sweet Herbs, and when it is boyled take it up, and lay it a-running; then mince mince it all together as small as you can, adding some Spice to it, some white Powder, and a little Saffron and Salt, and make it up in the nature of farcing, with the Yolks of Eggs: after this take the Caul of Veal or Kid, and put it into a little luke-warm Water to soften it; or for want of these you may take that of Mutton, if it be not too fat; the leaner the better; then lay upon each piece of Caul of this forced meat, the bigness of a great Apple, and tye it very flack with a Thread for fear of breaking it in the boylinge, and then boyl it together, but upon a little soft Fire, season it with Salt at your own discretion, and when it is boyled enough take it up, cut away the Threads, and when you would serve it away, dish it upon your Potage: You may make Sallages of this forced meat also, and broyl them upon a Grid-Iron, and serve them with a little Ducks-powder or Mustard.
For the Officers of the Mouth. 297

O 5 A Po-
A Pottage of the Belly of Veal, or Calves-Chaldron.

Take the Belly and the Feet of Veal, or Kid, make them boil, with a piece of Bacon and a little Salt; and when they are boil'd take them out, and let them lie a running; then cut the Chaldron in pieces, and cleave the Feet in two: This done, put them a boylings in some good Broth made of Beef or Mutton; then take the Yolks of Eggs, either boil'd or raw, and a little Bread, and lay it soaking in a little of your Broth; then strain it through a Strainer, with a little white Powder, some Spice, Saffron, a little White-wine, and a little Verjuice: After this, make it boil, with a few sweet Herbs minced small, and a little Salt, and a few Goose-Berries; but be sure to stir it well together in the mingling of all these things, that it be not too thick when you serve it away.
A Potage of a Knuckle of Veal farced.

Take a Knuckle of Veal cut very fair, near to the Loyn; raise up the Skin handsomely and cut out the Flesh, take away the Sinews from it and mince the Flesh with Beef-Suet; turn the Skin of your Veal over the Handle, or bony end, and lay it a-soaking, then finish your farced Meat, put into it a little Lard, the Yolks of Eggs, sweet Herbs; and when it is well minced and seasoned with Spice and Salt, fill up the Skin of your Veal which you turned over the Handle, fasten it in, and put it a-boyling in some good Broth, and put to it some good Herbs according to the Season of the year, or else some white Endive, and when it is well boyled slice some Bread and put it a-soaking in the Dish you intend to serve your Potage in; garnish it with your Veal, and if you will you may whiten your Broth with the Yolks of Eggs, and a little Verjuice.
A Potage made with a Breast of Veal farced.

Take a Breast of Veal and open it at the thin end, and fill it with a good Farcing made of a little Meat-Suet, or Marrow of Beef, Crumbs of Bread, Eggs, and all sorts of good Herbs minced very well together and seasoned; then put it into the Pot with good Broth, a few Capers, Endive, or other good Herbs minced small, and when it is boil’d slice Bread and steep it in some of your Broth and lay your Breast of Veal upon it; garnish the Dish with some of your farcing, and serve it away.

A Potage made of a Calves Head, boned and farced.

Take a good fat Calves Head that is very fresh, and scald it, raise the Skin a little, and put it a-boyling; and when it is boil’d take out the Bones, the Brains, and the Eyes, which you must afterwards put into their places places again; then take the Flesh and hash it with Beef-Suet, or rather Marrow, and the Yolks of Eggs raw, to bind your Farcing and season it well, and farce your Calves Head; and when you have so done, put the Brains and the Eyes into their places again, and few up the Head, and put it into cold Water to wash it; then put it into the Pot with some good Broth, and make it boil very well; and to make Garnish for it, take Calves Feet and half boil them in Water, then cleave them in the middle and toss them up in a Ragone with Butter and Bacon, and put them into your Pot with a few Capers and so let them boil, then steep Bread in slices, and put your Calves Head upon it, and garnish your Head with the Feet that were boil'd with it, but forget not the Capers; but you must take notice that there is other Garniture, for they say a Dish is well garnished when it is full, or the Meat in it.

A Pot-
A Potage with hashed Mutton.

Take a Joynt of Mutton and hash it with either Suet or Marrow of Beef, season it and set it a stewing in a Pot, then set Bread a soaking in a Dish full of strong Broth; then put your Hash upon it, and garnish it with square slices of Bread cut in form of great Lard, and fryed in Butter till it be brown and crisp like Toasts, and stick this into your Hash for a Garniture, with Cocks-Combs and Palats sliced square or long.

A Potage of Tortoises sliced square-long.

Take your Tortoises and cut off their Heads and Feet, and boyl them in fair Water, and when they are almost boyl’d put to them some White-Wine, some sweet Herbs, and a piece of Bacon; and when they are quite boyl’d take them up, and take away their Shells, and take out the Gall, cut them in pieces, and give them a brown in the Frying-Pan with good But-
Butter, then lay them upon your Bread a-steeping in good strong Broth, and well seasoned: garnish the Dish with green Sparrowgras and Lemon over it.

To make a Potage a la Jacobin.

Take either Capons, or Patridges, and rost them; take out the Bones, and mince the Brawn very small; take the bones and break them, and put them a boyling in a little good broth, with a bundle, or faggot of sweet Herbs, in an Earthen Pot, then strain out your broth into your Dish upon your Bread steeping; then lay upon your Bread a layer of Flesh, or grated Cheese, which you please; and then put over this some Broth of Almonds, and make it boil well then, and so fill up your Dish by little and little till it be quite full; then garnish the Dish with the ends of the Pinions of the Wings, and the ends of the Bones, sticking them endways into your Potage; then take the Yolks of three Eggs and beat them them very well with a little Almond or other Broth, and pour them over your Potage, and so serve it away.

_A Beatile Potage, of all sorts, as Cocks-Combes, Stones, &c._

Take the Beatilles and scald them very well, then give them a turn in the Frying-pan, like a Fricassey of Chickens; then put them into a Pot with some good Broth, and let them stew very well; then take a Manchet and steep it, and when it is well steeped lay your Meat upon it, with good store of Gravy over it, and Cocks-Stones and Combs, and such like, &c.

_A Potage of Chickens and Colly-flowers._

Take your Chickens handsomely truss’d and fit, put them into your Pot with good strong Broth, and make them boyl with a faggot of sweet Herbs, season them with Salt, Cloves, Pepper, and a little Nutmeg,
For the Officers of the Mouth. 305
or else a few Rasplings of the Crust of Bread; then steep your Bread and put on your Chickens, and garnish your Dish with Colly-flowers, and put good store of Gravy over them.

To make a Potage of Capons or other Flesh.

Take a Capon, and a Rump of Mutton, or a piece of Beef, or any other Meat what you please, make it boil well, and season it very well; then cut pieces of Bread out square, about the bigness almost of your finger, and as long, frie them crisp and hard in a Frying-pan with Butter, or Lard, and when they are fryed put them into your Broth, with your Meat; then put in an Onion, stuck with Cloves and a little Thyme, and let all boil together; steep your Bread, and when your Meat is enough then lay your Capon or other Meat upon your Bread, and put the Broth over it, and lay the slices of Bread that was fryed about your Meat in the Dish.
A Potage of Mouillettes, or Felsares, or such like.

Truss them, and take out the Gizzards, and sprinkle them with Flower, and frie them in a Frying-pan with Butter or Lard; then put them into a Pot with good strong Broth, and a faggot of sweet Herbs, steep your Bread, and dish up your Meat, and garnish it with palats of Beef and Champignons.

A Potage of Teale and Turneps.

Take your Teale and rost them; and when they are rosted put them into strong Broth; then take your Turneps and scald them in fair Water, then sprinkle them with flower, and frye them in a Frying-pan till they be crisp and brown, then put them a-boyling with your Teal, and let them boil together; and when you would dish up your Broth, first steep your Bread, and then strain away the Broth from your Turneps, dish dish your Veal, and garnish your dish with some of the Turneps and Grenad-seeds.

_A Potage with young Pidgeons._

Take your young Pidgeons when they are scalded and seethe them, put them into a Pot with good strong Broth, put to them a faggot of sweet Herbs, a piece of Bacon, and when you dish them, put them upon Bread steep'd in strong Broth, and garnish them with Sparagrasstossed up in a Fricase of Green Pease, or Green Lettuce.

_A Potage called a Cretonne, of new Pease or Beans._

Take a Pullet, or what Flesh you please, and put it a-boyling in good Broth, cut it into pieces, and as soon as it boyles put in a piece of Bacon that is fat, and slice it a little, and when it is half boyled put in your Pease or Beans shealed, with a little white Powder, make it all boyl togeth ther over a Charcoal Fire, and when you dish it up garnish it with some Goose-Berries, and the like.

A Potage Cretonne.

Take as is aforesaid either a Fowl or other Meat, cut it in pieces, and put it a-boiling in good Broth, and as much Milk as Broth; put to it some fat Bacon minced small, and so let it stew, and when it is half ready put in some Pease, white Powder, sweet Herbs, and Salt, and so let it stew till it is quite ready; but if you put in Milk you need no white Powder.

Milk returned.

Take the same sort of Meat, and make it boil together after the same manner as the former, but instead of Milk take Broth and the Yolkes of Eggs beaten together, with white Powder, Verjuice, and sweet Herbs, with Gooseberries, and when your Meat is ready, and you would serve it, it, mingle it all together, and make it boyl; some will frye Pease or Beans, a thing which is not altogether un-proper for it, for it makes your Potage more delicious: and if that you would not have the goodness of it to be questioned, you must do it so that you carry it all before you, or else not to meddle with it at all.

A Potage made of Courges or Punken:

Take your Coquelourds, or Punken, and par-boyl them, and stamp them in a Mortar, and then frye them in a Pan with either Butter or Lard to make your Broth; put the Yolks of Eggs into Verjuice, beat them together, and put them into your Frying-pan, as you do Cream to frye; after this take some fine Cheese, scrape and make it melt, and put it likewise into your Frying-pan, and mingle all this well together, and stir it well about; put to it a little Ginger, a little Saffron, and a good deal of Sugar, and if that you would have good Gelly with Spices, you must put some
A School of Instructions

some Sugar and Surfevil or Chervil.

A Potage made of Tripes.

Take Tripes that are very clean and white, and well boyled, cut them in pieces, and put them a-boyling in good Broth, season them with Spices beaten, a little white Powder, Saffron, Salt, and green Goose-berries, then steep your Bread, and put your Tripes upon it; you may do the like with Neats-feet, Trotters, or any such like things as these are.

Chaudenau, or a hot water.

Take some good fresh Broth, with Yolks of Eggs, a little Verjuice, and a little white Powder, and pass it all through a Strainer, and season it with a little Salt.

Another Potage.

Take a Loyn, or a Neck, or a Breast of Mutton, take off the skin, and cut it into pieces, and put it a-boyling boylimg into good Broth made of Beef, or Mutton, a piece of midling Bacon, and when it is boyled, take the Yolks of two or three Eggs and pass them through a Strainer with a little Verjuice and white Powder, put all together into your Pot, and keep it always stiring; and when you are almost ready to serve it, put into it some green Goose-berrys, Salt, and a few sweet Herbs minced very small.

To make Rice Potage.

Take Rice, pick and wash it very clean and white, then set it a drying, then put it a boyling in a little good Broth, after you have dryed it a little first; let it boyl a long time upon a soft Fire, season it with a little beaten Saffron, and boyl it so that it may be very savory; and upon Festing days boyl it with Milk of Almonds, or Cows Milk, which you please.
Another sort of Rice.

Accommodate your Rice as is aforesaid, and put it a-boiling in good Broth made of a Capon, or other Meat, with some white Powder and Salt, and when it is boyled, dish your Capon and put your Rice over him, the one half of it yellow, if you please, and so cover but half of your Capon, and the other half white, and garnish it with large Sugar plums or Dragees, but be sure in all cases do not make it too thick, for that is not so seemly.

Haricote of Mutton.

Take a Shoulder of Mutton, or as much as contains the bloody end of it, with the Neck and Breast, and cut it into small pieces, and fry it in a Frying-pan with Hogs Lard and Onions minced small, this done, put it a-boyling in a Pot with good Broth made of Beef, with Parsley, Hysop, and Sage.
For the Officers of the Mouth.

To make a Bisk of Flesh a la reyn.

Take the Brawns of two roasted Partridges, and mince them very small, and put your hash into a Dish with a little good broth then take half a pound of Almonds, blanch them and beat them in a Mortar, put to them the Yolks of six Eggs, and the Crums of a white Loaf, or Manchester, and beat all this together, after you have beaten your Almonds well first; this done, put to it three or four Ladles of good broth, and strain all through a coarse linnen Cloth, press out as much as you can of it into a Dish, and set it over a Fire of Charcole, and keep it stirring till it be thick; then take besides all this, the upper Crust of a fine Loaf, and dry it before the Fire, and put it a steeping in another Dish with some strong broth likewise; then after this put in all your hash and Almond broth into this last Dish, at several times; garnish it with the Beattiles, that is to say, Cocks-combs, and Stones.
A School of Instruktions

314

Stones, &c. squeeze over it the juice of two Lemons, and let it stand and stew half an hour, sprinkle over it some Pistaches and so serve it.

To make good Brovets, or Soups of Meat.

Brovet of a Capon.

Take a Capon well boyled in Water or Wine, cut him in pieces, and fry him in Hogs Lard and the Livers with him, burn or broyl them a little, and put them into your broth, then season it with long Pepper, Ginger, Cinamon and Cloves, and such like things as these, moisten these Spices with a little Vinegar, and put it to the rest that you had set a boyling; then slice bread into a Dish, and when your Meat is boyled enough, put it all into your Dish over your bread, that is to say, put your Brovet over your bread.

Brovet Eveille.

Take Verjuice, Grapes, and a Fowl, which you should cut into pieces, pieces, and boyl it in broth made of Flesh with a little fat bacon, some Parsley and Saffron, strained through a Strainer, with a little Verjuice, and Wine, and Salt; take bread and fry it in a Frying-pan, and the Livers of the Fowl broyled upon a Gridiron, Cinnamon, Ginger, and other small Spices, put all this into a Pot and let it boyl all together about half an hour, and then dish it up to serve away.

Brovet Rape.

Take a piece of Veal, and cut it into slices with a Fowl which you must cleave in the middle, put them together to boyl in an Earthen Pot, with a little good broth and bacon or Hogs fat, let it boyl about the space of an hour, then take the Crumbs of a white Loaf, and half a dozen Livers of Fowls parboyled, strain them with a little broth made of Flesh, a little Ginger, and a little Verjuice, and make all this boyl together, and when you dish it up, garnish it with scalded Grapes or Gooseberries.

A Brovet of a Hogs Haslet, or Liver.

Take a piece of Hogs Liver, and cut it into small pieces, and make it boil in meat broth, and when it is boyled take it up and fry it in Hogs Lard, and put into it by little and little some pudding-broth, or some other broth, then toste or dry bread over the Fire, and put it into Vinegar, with a little Ginger and Cloves; strain out your Vinegar, and make all boyl together, and so serve it away.

A Brovet of Cinnamon.

Take what sort of Flesh you will, but a Fowl is the best, cut it into Quarters, and make it boyl either in Wine or Water, and being boyled as you would have it, fry it with Hogs Lard; this done, take dry Almonds blanched, good store of Cinnamon, Ginger, and Cloves, let all this
For the Officers of the Mouth. 317

this be well beaten together, and mingled with broth, then strain it out, and pour what you strain out over the Meat or Fowl, and make it boil again together when it is thus seafoned, and be sure it be well knit together, and so dish it to serve it away.

A Broquet Georget.

Take either a Fowl or other Flesh, cut your Fowl in Quarters, and boil it in Milk, then take Onions and mince them small, and boil them in another Pot, or else fry them in a Pan, then take bread and toaste it well against the Fire, then beat your bread and Onions together with a little good broth of Meat, a little Wine, Verjuice, Vinegar, Parsley, Ginger, and other small Spices, but so mingled that it may run, then mingle this with your Fowl or Meat and let it boil, and take notice that this broquet ought to be brown and well knit together, or as we say well incorporated.

A Bro-
A Brovet Rousset.

This sort of Brovet is made something near the former, only in this you must have neither Saffron nor Vinegar, but much more Cinamon, and more Onions, which you must cut into slices as you do Lemons round.

A White Brovet.

Take a Fowl and cut it into Quarters, and a piece of Veal, which you may cut also into a great many pieces, make this boil with Milk, Water and Wine; this done, take Almonds and Ginger, beat them also together with the clearest of your broth, and strain it, and if it be too clear put in some Rice that is very well boyled, and good store of Sugar, put all this into the Pot to your Veal and Fowl, make it boyl a little; and dish it up, and when it is dish'd up, strow over it some Coriander-seeds done in Sugar, and the Seeds of a Paper, called
For the Officers of the Mouth. 319 called, Papre the Gravette, and about the brims of your Dish some Sugar-plums, or Almonds, called Dragees, strowed and pricked into your Brovet.

Brovet of England.

Take Chestnuts and roast them, and peel them, and as many Yolks of hard Eggs, Hogs Liver, Ginger, Cinamon, Cloves, long Pepper, Garlengal, and Saffron, beat all this very well together, and strain it with warm Water, and make it boil well together, and so serve it.

Brovet of Savoye.

Take a Capon, or what other Fowl you please, and put them a boiling with their Livers, and a piece of lean Bacon, and when the Livers are half boyled take them up, and take the Crumbs of a white Loaf, and steep them in some of your Broth, and beat the Liver and Bread together; add to it some Ginger, Cinnamon, Saffron, and
To boyl Partridges with green Colwards.

Take green Colwards and parboyl them in fair Water, this done, put them a boyling with your Partridge and a piece of Bacon in good Beef Broth indifferently fat, and if you have any Salt-beef boyl that also in another Pot, and when it is boyled enough cut it owt into片es about the thickness of your two fingers, and dish it with your Partridges, and your green Colwards, being also boyled, give them a squeeze with the back of a Ladle, and range them handomely with your Beef and Partridges, but take care that your Broth be not too clear.

Loaf Cabbage, or Lattuce Cabbage.

Take the Apples or Loaf of Cabbage, cut them as small as you can, and put them a boyling in a Pot with some
For the Officers of the Mouth.

some good Broth, a little piece of Bacon enterlarded, put in also a little common Spice and Salt, you may serve this with roast Partridges, or Hares in Quarters.

Give of Hares, or how to dress a Hare.

Take a Hare, with fresh Pork or Veal, and cut your Hare, and Pork or Veal, into good handsom pieces, of about three fingers thickness, put it into an Earthen Pot, or Pipkin, with Onions fryed in Hogs Lard; then take a little Broth of Flesh and put to your Hare and Pork, to the half covering of it, and set it a stewing on the Embers, then take Bread scorcht against the Fire, and the Livers of six Fowls also a little broyled, and put them steeping in a little broth of Flesh, then add to it Cinamon, Ginger, long Pepper, Nutmeg, Cloves, and Salt, of each a little, beat all this well together, and strain it with a little Vinegar, and Claret-wine, and put that which you have strained out into into the Pot with your Hare and Pork or Veal, and let them stew together till they are enough, then withdraw them, and so dish them up at your pleasure.
A School of Instructions

All Spices ought to be first beaten before you season any thing, notwithstanding it is here said beat altogether, which cannot be meant of whole Spices, because dry and liquid things beat not well together.

How to dress Capons, Partridges, Hares, Mutton, Veal, with all sorts of Meats, as well boiled as roasted, &c.

A Capon with Pease.

Take a good piece of Beef wherein is the Marrow, and put it a boiling with a Capon and a piece of Bacon, and a little Salt, and when your Capon is almost boiled take it out of the Pot, and bruise some Pease, and put them a boiling in the broth where the Capon was boiled, boil all this well together, and take out all the bones of your beef and put in your Ca-
Capon again to boyl with the Pease, and when all is boyled enough, take up your Pease and strain them through a Strainer; and put them a boyling in another Pot by themselves; this done, dish up your Capon, and put your strained Pease over him, and so serve him away.

Boiled Capons.

Take as many Capons as you please, and put them a-boyling with a piece of Beef, that hath a Marrow bone in it, and a piece of Bacon, make all this boyl together, and put to it Verjuice, White-wine, Saffron, Sage, Hyslop, and Parsley, then take the Crumbs of white Bread, and steep them in some of the Capon-broth, then take the Yolks of twelve Eggs and put to your bread, and strain it all through a Strainer with a little Ginger, and when your Capons are boyled, take them out, and let your Pot keep boyling still, and when you are almost ready to serve it, put into your Pot that which you have strained out.
out, keeping it always stirring with your Ladle; take your Pot from the Fire, and keep it stirring; this done, dish your Capons, one or more in a Dish, and put this Broth, or Broth, over them.

Capons with Herbs.

Capons are to be dress'd in divers fashions; for in Winter, they are to be dress'd one way, and in Summer another; but the truth is, that both in Summer and Winter you must kill your Capons into cold Water, but with this difference, that in Winter you put your Capons thus killed six days in the Frost to freeze; but in Summer you put them only two days in some place where the Sun may not come at them, although it were but under a Bed; this done, in either Season, put your Capons a-boiling in fair Water, with a piece of Bacon; and in Winter put to them Sage, Parsley, and Hysop, Verjuice, a little Ginger and Saffron; but in the Summer put nothing to them but a piece of Bacon, and a little Saffron.
For the Officers of the Mouth. 325

Capons Pelerine.

Take a good fat Capon, and truss him handsomely, and half roll him upon a Broach; and when he is half rolled, take a piece of Cauf and heat it well, and bind it about him, so that it may clasp as it were about your Capon, and then let your Capon roll till he be ready; then take a little Broth made of flesh, with a little Ginger, Parsley, and Verjuce; beat this and press out the Juice, and make it boil all together; and this is the true Sauce for this sort of Meat.

Capons au Moust, or a tender Capon with sweet Sauce.

Roft your Capons upon a Broach, and when they are enough take them off, and rake the Thighs and the Wings, but so as that they may hold fast to the body, notwithstanding that they are railed; then take some ripe Grapes, the blackest and ripest you can find, press out the Wine with your your Hands into an Earthen Pot, and set the Pot upon the Embers, and put into it some Bread that is scorched before a Fire; then take the Livers of your Capons also roasted, and some fryed Bread, and beat these together with your Moult, strain it, and put it into your Pot, with some Ginger and Cinnamon, with some Claret Wine, if you have not enough of your Moult; (that is to say the Juice of the Grapes so pressed between your Hands;) set this a-boiling, let it boyl well, and put into it good store of Sugar; put your Capons into a Dish and your Sauce over them, and garnish them with dried Toasts of Bread.

Capons Germe.

Capons Germe, or Fesants, that have been two or three days dead, (that is as I suppose of so long lying dead,) may be ported or broached, that is, either rost or boyl'd; if they be rost, eat them with Verjuice and their own Fat; but if Capon a la Canelle, or with Cinnamon.

Take Cinnamon, Dates, and Beef-Marrow, with Currants, put all this into a Pot with some good Broth, whilst your Capons roast, and when your Capon is roasted, put it into the Pot, and let it consommer or stew a-while.

Capons au Brovet, on the high-Dutch manner.

Take Capons and roast them; then take Almonds and frye them in a Pan as you do your Chestnuts, then beat them in a Mortar with a little Claret, Verjuice, and a little good Vinegar, and some tosted Bread steeped in good Broth, put all this into a Pot, with a little Nutmeg, Ginger, Cloves, and Sugar, but be sure that this be well seasoned and savoury, and when your Capons are ready, dish them up, and put this Sauce or Brovet over them.

Sauce
Sauce for roasted Capons, Pullets, or any Fowls.

Put Verjuice upon the Fire in a Sauce-pan, and put to it the Yolks of hard Eggs, and the Livers broiled upon a Grid-Iron, beat all this together, and strain it through a Strainer with your Verjuice, good Broth, and white Powder, make it boil with a few good Herbs and Sugar, and when your Capons or other Fowl are roasted, dish them, and garnish your Dish with Toasts, and put your Sauce over them.

Roast Capons.

Take either Capon, or Hen, and roll them, then take Almonds, not blanched but washed, and beat in a Mortar, with either good Broth or Verjuice, and strain them with the Crumbs of white Bread, and for Spice take either Ginger or Cinnamon, which pleases you best, and make it boil in a Pot with a good deal of Sugar, gar, and when your Capon is ready serve it with this Sauce under it, and do not forget to garnish it with good store of Sweet-meats or Sugar-plumbs.
For the Officers of the Mouth. 329

Orthus.

If you will serve your Capons al Or-renge Vermillion, take Vermillion, or Claret-wine, good Broth, made of Beef that is fat, and for Spice take Cinnamon, and a little other small Spices, good store of Sugar, then peel your Oranges, and cut them out in slices, and boil all this together with a little Rosemary, and when your Capon is ready, dish it up, and put your Sauce under it, and more Sugar about it.

A larded Capon.

Pull and truss your Capon, then lard it, put it upon the Broach, and when it is almost roasted, take Flower, the Yolks of Eggs, Rose-water, and Sugar, beat all this together with a little little Salt, then do off the Lard, and moisten your Capon all over with this three or four times together, till it be covered over with the Batter, then let it lye at a pretty distance from the Fire and rost, but be careful that it doth not burn, and when it is rosted base it over with Hares Blood, or else rub it over with Lard.

Partridges Mettenes.

Take Partridges and roast them, then take Cream, and Grapes, with Bread scorched against the Fire, and beat all this together, but first steep your Bread in Broth or Claret-wine, then strain all this through a Strainer with Spice, Cinnamon, and a little Mustard; set all a-boiling with a pretty deal of Sugar, but take heed that it doth not burn too, and when you would serve away your Partridge, put them into a Dish, and your Sauce under them, and garnish your Dish with Sweet-meats and Sugar-plumbs.
For the Officers of the Mouth. And so you may serve either Capons, or Pullets, or Chickens, as you think fit.

Partridges a lean benifte, or Holy Water.

Take Partridges and rost them, and when they are rostted, cut them into little pieces, and put them into a Dish with a little fair Water and Salt, and make them boyl a little, and so serve them away.

Or thus.

Take Partridges and drye-pull them, cut off their Heads and Claws, and put them into boyling Water, and put to them some Venison, if you have it, or a little Bacon, or else rost them, if you have none of these, and eat them with Water and Salt as before, or else you may make a Sauce with Rose-water and Wine, the Juice of Apples and Orenjes, but there must be three times as much Rose-water as Wine.
Partridges a la tomatelette.

Take a Partridge and roast it, then put it into a Pot, this done take white Bread and scorch or toast it very brown, but not burn it, and put it a-steeeping in good Claret-wine, and when it is well steep'd strain it through a Strainer with some good Broth, and a few Onions fryed in Lard, with a little Cinamon, Cloves, and Nutmegs, and other small Spices, and a little Sugar, and put into it a handful of Currants, and make that which you have strained out boil all together, and when it is time to serve your Partridges, put your Sauces into a Dish, and lay your Partridges upon it, and so serve it.

Capilotade of Partridges.

Take what quantity of Partridges you please, and mince them after they are rosted, and lay first a row of sliced Bread, and a row or layer of hashed Partridges, and another of Bread,
For the Officers of the Month.

Bread, and another of Partridge, do thus till your Dish be full; this done, take good Broth wherein was boyl’d five or six good hunchins of Beef, put this Broth over your Meat into the Dish, and let it stew a little together upon a Fire; some will put into it a little fat Cheefe.

Roast Mutton.

Take, as for Example, a Shoulder of Mutton, put it upon a Broach, and roast it till its Fat begins to fall, and when it is rosted you may lard it with Parsley or Garlick, and if you will have any Sauce, take either Verrjuice, or Vinegar, and a little Salt.

Or thus.

You may serve roast Mutton with Capers, or you may stuff it with forc’d Meat, but in such a Case you should have no Sauces.
Wild Fowl rost or gibier.

These you should pull in Water, and make no Sauce to them, nor any thing else, but only a few Lards drawn into the Wings and Thighs.

To rost meat to seem bloody.

When your Meat is rost, let it be what it will, a little before you serve it away, take a little Hares Blood which hath been dryed and beat to Powder, and sprinkle it over your Meat, and let it have a turn or two at the Fire, and you shall see, that when you would cut it, it will seem to be bloody.

To rost fresh Pork.

Broach your piece of Pork, and make it rost, and as it rosts bait it with Hogs Lard, melted with some Feathers, that it may not drye, nor burn; you may also lard it if you will; and you may do the like by
For the Officers of the Mouth.

by a fucking Pig, because the Skin will quickly burn.

To rost Veal.

Take a piece of Veal, and set it upon the Broach without washing of it, and, when it is fit for larding, take it from the Broach again and lard it, then Broach it, and rost it, and eat it a la Cameline, but some will parboyl it before they lard and rost it.

Lamb or Kid.

Parboyl, or set it in boyling Water, larde it, and then rost it, and so eat it a la Cameline.

Pourcelet farced, or sucking Pigg farced.

After you have scalded it in hot Water, and taken out the Entrails, then take twenty hard Eggs boyl’d, Chestnuts peel’d, and some old Cheese, and the flesh of a boyl’d Leg of Pork, mince all this together very small,
small, and beat it in a Mortar with Saffron, and a pretty deal of Ginger, in Powder mixt with your Meat, which if it be too hard you must moisten it with the Yolks of Eggs; then open your Pigg in the sides, but make not your openings too big, nor too little, but that you may put your farcing into it, and when you have farced it, take a Needle and Thread and sew it up again, and put it upon a Broach, and rost it as we said but now; but take notice, that in Winteryou may eat them a la poivred, coloured yellow, and in Summer a la Cameline.

Wild Boar rost: Take a piece of a Wild Boar that is proper to rost, and set it in boil- ing hot Water, then take it out, and button or stick it with Cloves, and then put it to rost, and baste it with a Sauce made with Spice, that is to say Ginger, Cloves, Cinamon, Nutmegs, and long Pepper steeped in Verjuice, Vinegar and Wine thickened a little with a little Bread, and when your your piece of wild Boar is rosted, put it into a Dish, and put the rest of your Sauce to it. This we usually call, Queve, or, The Tail of the wild Boar.
For the Officers of the Mouth. 337.

Connies.

Take and parboyl or set your Connies, then lard them, and put them upon a Broach, and when they are rosted eat them a la cameline; and now to know whether your Conies be fat or not, open the nape of the Neck, near the Shoulders, and there you may know if they are fat or not; and to know if they are tender, you should break one of their hinder legs.

Rost Wood-Cocks.

Rost your Wood-Cocks without opening of them, and if they be fat you need not lard them, and in the rosting of them put some Tofts of Bread into a Dish, or something else, and set it under them as they rost, so that what falls from them may fall upon upon your Toft, put to it some Gooseberries, Verjuice, a little Water, some Sage-leaves whole, white Powder, season all this with Salt, and when your Wood-Cocks are rosted put them into a Dish, and put your Sauce to them, and garnish your Dish with the Tofts thus steeped in your Sauce.

To dress Larks.

Take Larks when they are pulled and picked clean, and frye them in a Pan with Hogs Lard; then put them a-boiling in good Broth, with a little Verjuice, Vinegar, and a little Clare-twine; then take some Tofts of Bread, dryed by the Fire, and steeped in your Broth, strain this through a Strainer, and put it to your Larks with a little Cinamon, and some small spices, Cloves whole, and Nut-megs in Powder, a little Sugar and Salt, and when your Larks are ready, put them into a Dish, and your Sauce to them, so serve them away.
Lardeaux of Venison.

Take a piece of Venison and cut it out into slices about the breadth of your four Fingers, and draw into each slice of Venison three or four pieces of Lard, and put it a-boyling in some Broth made of Beef; then take Wine and Vinegar sufficient to serve, and put to it, with Cinamon, and Nutmeg, with other small Spice and Salt at discretion; make all this boyl with your Venison, in the manner of your court bouillon, or high seasoned Broth.

Or if you will, take with your Beef-broth a little Verjuice, Ginger, and a little green Fennel: Or if in case you have not Venison, you may take a piece of Beef and dress it in the same fashion as you would do the Venison.

Counterfeit Venison in a Potage.

Take a Neck or Breast of Mutton, and set or scorch it upon a Grid.
Grid-Iron, then cut it out into indif-ferent big pieces, and put it a boyling in good Beef-Broth, with Wine-Vinegar and Verjuice, Onions cut in slices, some Lard minced pretty small, then take a Manchet and drye it by a Fire, and strain it with a little Broth, Clareat wine, and small spice, make all this boyl together, and last of all put in some Turneps; which, when they are boyl’d, you must take care to see that they are very sweet and good, and also well seasoned.

Venison either of Buck or wild Boar.

Take a piece of either of these,
and cut it out like to Collops, in slices, and put it into boyling Water, and take it quickly out again, and wash it well in co’d Water, and put it a boyling in good Broth in a Pot, with a little Clareat wine and Vinegar, and let it boyl about a quarter of an hour, then take a Manchet that hath been dryed by a Fire, and steep it in tinct of your Broth of the Venilon, and strain it through a Strainer
with
For the Officers of the Mouth.

with Ginger, Cinnamon and Cloves, and long Pepper, of each a little; then put all that you have thus strained into the Pot with your Venison, make all this boil together; and when it is ready, dish it up and serve it away.

Bouffac of Hares or Conies.

Set your Hare upon the Broach or Grid-Iron, cut it out in Quarters or Joynts, and frye it in Hogs lard; then take Bread dryed and almost burnt, and steep it in good Beef Broth and Wine, then strain it through a Strainer with Ginger, Cloves, and Linseed, and a little Verjuice; so that your Composition must be black, and not too thick nor binding; your Spice also must be first beaten before it be put to your Bread to be strained. Your Conies are drest in the same manner, only they must be set in boyling Water, and then larded and rosted.
Wild Goat in clear Boussac, and not binding.

First put it into a condition to be dressed, and then put it into boiling Water, and take it out again quickly, and because it is lean of itself lard it with great Lard, and put it a boylng with lean Beef, Wine, and Spice course beaten; and when it is ready, serve it with some of its own Broth under it.

Wild Boar.

Boyl it with Water, Wine, Pepper, and a little Salt; and when it is ready eat it with Mustard.

Estoudeaux, killed two days.

When they are singed and roasted eat them ad must, which you may make at all Seasons of the year with Wine and Verjuice, and a good deal of Sugar, called sweet Sauce.
To Pheasant your Estoudeaux.

Cut their Throats, and let them bleed to death in a Pail full of Water, and when they are dead take them out, and put them into more Water, but into that which is colder than the first, and this will make them as Pheasant-like, or mortified, as if they had been killed two or three days before; and if you please to try this in Venison, you will find that it is not bad nor unseasonable.

A Peacock dress'd with his Feathers on.

Take a Peacock and put off his Skin, Feathers and all, but be very careful that you do not break the Skin, then set him in boyling hot Water, and when he is well set, lard him, and stick a few Cloves into him, and so rost him; but be sure to wrap up his Feet whilst he is a rosting; and being rosted, bath him with Vinegar, and drudge him over with the common Powder and Salt;
or, as we say, grated Bread, or Flower; this done, draw him and set him by to cool, and when he is cold put him upon a Wooden Trencher, with a small Broach hanging down in such a manner that it should support him by the Stomach; then cover him over again with his Skin, and bind the Neck and Tail with a small Wire, and it will seem as if it were alive; then take the Trencher that is at the end of your Broach, and make it as it were a Wheel, and make it turn, and your Bird will move, and so he will seem as if he were not dead, but alive, and this is very easie to be done; and more also if you please, for you may make him put Fire out of his Beak, &c.

To make Peacocks or Capons look like Porcupine.

Take a Peacock, Capon, or other Fowl, and bard them, that is, cover them over with a Sheet of Lard, and so make them rost; and for your Sauce take Rose-water and Vinegar,
For the Officers of the Mouth. 345

with small Spice, Cinnamon and Cloves, and set this under your Meat in the Dripping-pan; when your Fowl is rost, take Cinnamon in long small pieces, covered over with Sugar, and stick it into your Fowl all one way; that it may seem like the points of your Porcupines pens; then make your Sauce boyl, and put it into your dish, and lay your Fowls upon it, but let not your Sauce touch the Cinnamon that is stuck into the Fowl.

Vinaigrette, or, Pickle that is sharp.

Take a piece of Pork, called, a haste mince, or, Hogs Haflet, very well scalded, and well washed, half rost it, and then cut it in pieces, and put it into an Earthen Pot, with Hogs Lard and Onions cut in slices; set your Pot upon a Charcoal Fire, and shake your Pot pretty often, for fear your Meat should stick to; and when it is enough, and seems to be fri'd as it were, then put to it some good Broth made of Beef, and make.
make it boyl; then take Ginger, Cinnamon and Saffron, Bread dryed by the Fire, with Wine and Vinegar, mingle all this together, and so make it boyl well altogether.

_A Pig boiled._

Take a sucking Pig that is not too fat, and when it is scalded, quarter and cut it in pieces about the thickness of two Fingers, and put it a-boyling with white Powder, Salt and Sage; and when it is boiled, take it out of the Broth, and lay three of these pieces in a Dish, and let them cool, and when they are cold put some of your Broth, Sauce and Sage to your Pig, as shall be said by and by, when he is to be served with a Sauce with it; it serves for an Intermes, or to fill up the Table.

If you would keep your Pig any time, then take as much of the Broth as you have occasion for, Sauce, and make it boil with some small Spice and white Powder, and when it is boiled, let it cool, and when it is cool put put it into something that you can stop carefully up, and so you may keep it seven or eight days; and when you have occasion you may serve it in the manner of Gelly.

A Hochedot of Pigeon.

Take Pigeons and put them into a Pot with good Broth, some Bacon, Ginger, Nutmeg, and a little Saffron, to give them a colour; make all this boil a good pace, and when your Pigeons are enough put in some Verjuice, Grapes, a little Vinegar, and try if they be not too much or too little seasoned.

Hochedot of course Chickens, or the like.

These are to be done like the former, only you cut these into Quarters, and draw a piece of Lard into each Quarter.
Sheeps Feet for an Afternoon drinking.

Take Sheeps Feet very well boyled, cut them in pieces, and serve them with cold Pigeons, a little Parsley minced, and Vinegar, this will serve for a Collation or Drinking in an Afternoon.

A Carbonnado for Supper.

Make Cutlets of Pork that is well rosted or boyled, and broyl it a little upon a Grid-Iron, then take Onions and mince them small, and let them a stewing with a little Verjuice; and when they are stewed put to them a little Mustard and white Powder; this done, put your Cutlets into a Dish, and your Sauce to them, and some dryed Tofts under them.
To make Haistereaue of Veal, or Oleues of Veal.

Cut out your Haistereaue of a Leg or Gigat of Veal as thin as possibily you can, and beat them with the back of a Knife; then take fat Bacon, or Lard, and Beef Suet, and sweet Herbs, mince them very well together, and season them with some small Spice, white Powder and Salt, serve them whole, made up round like an Orenge, or Balls of Venilon, or in black Broth, but always with Oren-ges or green Verjuice.

A Frigacy.

Cut Livers and Onions in slices, and sprinkle some Salt over them, and fry them in Hogs Lard: serve it away hot, with a little white Powder over it.

To make a Calimafree of Mutton.

Take a Leg or Gigat of Mutton that that is ready dressed, and hash the one part as small as you can, and put it into a Dish with Onions minced small, and the other part of your Mutton cut into bigger pieces, and break the Bones also into pieces, and set it a stewing together with a little Verjuice, Pepper, and white Powder, and season it with Salt, and so let it stew.

Larded Milk.

Take four or five Quarts of Milk, and set it a boiling in a Pan or Skillet, and when it boils put in some Lard, cut like as it were for larding, and boil it in your Milk; then take a hundred of Eggs, beat them well, and strain them through a Strainer, and put them into your Milk boiling with a little Spice and Saffron, and when this is boiled stirring, put in some Salt and a Glass of Verjuice, stir it together, and take it from the Fire, and let it stand all night, and in the morning you will find it firm and hard, so that you may cut it out in pieces, which is very easy to be done; after this this stick in it a few Cloves, and fry it in Hogs Lard that is very clear; then put it into several Dishes, two or three pieces in a Dish.
For the Officers of the Mouth.

Blanc mange of a Capon, &c.

Take the Bran of a Capon, either boyled or rost, and mince it very small, then beat it in a Mortar with Almonds, and Pignons, or Pine-seeds, strain all this through a Strainer, with Cynamon and Rose-water; this done, frye it in good fresh Butter, put to it a little Sugar, and a little Salt, but do not make it too thin in the straining of it.

Bride aux veaux, or Paste of Veal.

Make a kind of Paste with Flower, Yolks of Eggs, fresh Butter and Sugar, Rose-water and Salt at discretion, with a little white Cheese; then butter a sheet of white Paper, and rowl it out, and lay on your Paste to the thickness of 2 fingers; bake it in an Oven, and when it is ready take it out, and take off the top of it at the thickness of half a finger, and put to it some melted Butter, the juice of Oranges and Sugar, and so serve it away. To
To dress certain kind of Fowls, a la Soufe Robert.

Dress as if it were a Capon in Paste, and when it is half ready take the Yolks of Eggs, and Verjuice, with a little Broth and white Powder, and put it to your Capon, and then make an end of dressing him in the condition that he now is in, and if you please you may add a few green Cooie-berries, &c.

Sauce for a Capon.

Take Bread and scorch or toast it, and then take the Livers of Capons or Pullets if you please, one or other, and broy them upon the Coals, and put them a-steepping in Wine with your Bread, and when they are steept strain them through a Strainer, with a little small Spice, Cinamon, red Vine Vinegar, and Verjuice, put it in a Dish, and set it into your Dripping-pan under your Capons whilst they rost, and when they are are rosted set your Sauce a-boyling upon the Coals, and season it with Salt.

To dress divers sorts of Fowls, as Pheasants, Storks, Herons, Bustards, Vultures, and Cormorants, and many more.

You should dry-pull all these, or at least-wise for the most part of them, as namely the Stork and the Heron, but leave the Heads and the Tails on those which it shall be necessary for to leave them on, and the Heads and Feet of others; but for the Pheasants we usually take off the Tail when he is a-pulling, and put it on again when the Pheasant is rosted.

Plovers.

Dry-pull them, set them upon the Fire, leave their Feet on, and so roast them after they are set.
Avidecoqs, or Videcoqs, or Stone-Plovers.

Pull and rost them like the former, and eat them with Salt only, but by the way you may be pleased to take notice, that there are some Fowls which have their Guts thick, and nothing of Dung in them, by reason they feed but upon Gravel and Sand, as Larks and Plovers, who has only a Passage to the Vent, and no more; these the Cooks do seldom open or draw out their Guts; nor yet of Wood-Cocks and Snipes, &c.

A Swan.

They usually pull the Swan as they do Chickens, then scald and set him, and so put him upon the Broach, arconnize him in four places, or Scure him, rost him with his Feet, and beak on, without taking away the Feathers from the Head, but wrap it up in Paper while it doth rost, and when it is rosted eat him with with a poiverad yellow; you may also indore him, for which cause you may cleave the Head and Neck down to the VVing or Shoulder, as they say, and the Wind-Pipe that comes a-long the Body; or you may fleas him, and when he is rosted put on his skin again, and arconnize or sceure him up again, &c.

Or colour him with the Yolks of Eggs, wild Boar or Buck boyled with Turneps, first soak, and then boyl your Venison be it either wild Boar or Buck in fair Water, and then put it into some good Broth, and therfore let it boyl till it be ready, then cut it into pieces and garnish it with your Tur- neps that were boyled in the Broth also; for you must take notice, that Turneps do not boyl well in Wine, nor any other Liquor that is snower.

River Fowls...

You ought not to lard neither Ducks, nor Geese, nor Swans, nor Storks, Pheasants, Bitterns, Peacocks, or Pea-hens, but stick them with...
with Cloves, and baste them with a bunch of slices of Bacon (tyed to a stick) and dip into Vinegar, wherein is Salt, Spice, and Powder, and you may take notice by the by, that those that are high seasoned are for the most part to be eaten cold, for if you will eat them dry be sure to stick Cloves in them, as is above-said, and baste them likewise, and serve them with Salt only.

Lamperies made of Flesh.

Take a Calves head and a Capon and make them both boil together, and when they are boiled, take the flesh of the one as well as of the other and hash it together in form of hash, season it with beaten Cinnamon, Pepper, Cloves and Sugar, with Salt at discretion; then wrap up your Calves head when he is boned in this Composition, and fashion the Tongue at length like a Lamperey, or an Eel, put it upon a Plate, or the like, and bake it in an Oven, and for your Sauce take
For the Officers of the Mouth. 357

Take Bread toasted and steeped in Wine, a little Vinegar, and a little Cinnamon, and good store of Sugar, and a little Mustard, strain all this together, and put it a-boiling; and when you serve it away, put your Sauce over your Lampreyes, and Sugar them soundly.

For a Gammon of Bacon.

First steep your Gammon in Water, and when it is well soked, put it a boiling with Sage, and a good quantity of other good Herbs; and when it is boiled raise the skin, and stick it with Bays and Rosemary, and let it stand to be cold, and then serve it with Mustard. And so likewise you may do with a Haunch of Venison, or any other Salt-meats, and serve it in like manner.

To make a Entermose of a Swan.

Take a Swan and make him in a condition to roast, and put him upon a broach, and whilst he is a roasting...
ing make a kind of a clear Batter as was shewed you in another place, drip over your Swan with this Paste or Batter, but so that he may rost under the Skin, and yet be covered over as it were with a Crust of paste, and be sure that there be nothing broke, neither Wing nor Thigh, but all is to be whole and covered with this paste; and to do well, his Head and Neck should be set as if he were swimming in the Waters, which is not so hard to be done as some may persuade themselves it is; and for the obtaining of your desired effect, you need but fix a long stick through the head which shall take the Wings, and so set the head and neck as if your Swan were swimming, and the neck will be steddy and stand firm; then put another Scure under the two Wings, making them to stand in a swimming posture also, and another cross the two Thights to keep them up, and another through the Feet, and so hold them towards the Thights, and last of all three Scures at each foot to hold them tite to their posture.
For the Officers of the Month.

Ancture of swimming, and when he is well rostred and well covered or in dored with your past, take him from the Broach, and draw out all the Scures, except that in the Neck; then make a kind of a Bed of paste of a bout the thickness of your Thumb and half, or more, make it stiff over a Fire, but not boyl, colour it green, and comb it out and it will look like a Meddow full of Gras; then take your Swan and gild him over with Gold or Silver, within two fingers breath of the Neck, or at the least gild his Beak and his Feet; then have a kind of a loose flying Cloak, of a kind of a Vermillion dye within, and painted with Arms or Figures without, what you shall think fit, either for Arms or Figures, then set your Swan upon this Bed, and cover some part of him with this Cloak or Heralds Coat, stick about him eight small Banners upon little sticks of a bout two foot and half long, and let your Banners be painted with Arms also, as the Cloak is about your Swan, with what Arms you shall judge most convenient or agreeable to the persons that shall be seated at the Table.

To make a Chaudeau, or a hot water, on the Flemish fashion.

Set Water a-boyling upon the Fire, and prepare as many Porrengers as there are people to eat, and for each Porrenger the Yolks of two Eggs, and twice as much white Wine as you have Water a-boyling, then beat the Yolks of Eggs with the Wine, and put in a little Salt at discretion, and pour your Wine and Eggs into the Water over the Fire, and make it boyl, keeping it stirring, some will put Butter into it, although it be not needful nor necessary, and when it boils slice Bread into each Porrenger, and pour your Chaudeau over your Bread in the Porrenger.

A Soupe Vermelle, or a Vermillion colour.

Take good Vermillion, or Claret wine,
Wine, some Vinegar, and Cinamon, strain all this, and make it boil with some good Beef Marrow, then take Partridges, and Pigeons, or Chickens boil'd, and put them in a Dish, with a little Rosemary minced very small, and then put your Broth, or Broth, so strained, over your Fowls, and a good quantity of Sugar over it; and when you serve it away, put for a Garniture whole Cloves about the Brims of the Dish.

Mutton au Jaunet, or a little yellowish.

Take a piece of Mutton and boil it in Water mixed with Wine-Vinegar and Verjuice, add to it a little Ginger beaten, a little Powder of Saffron, put all this into your Pot, and let it boil together.

To make Boulogne Saffages.

Take the flesh of Beef and of Pork that is lean, as much of the one as the other; or, as for Example, a pound of each, take out all the skins, and and chop or mince the flesh altogether very small with a pound of good new larding Lard, and for the seasoning of all this, take five drams of beaten Pepper, two drams of whole Pepper, one dram or thereabouts of Salt beaten very small, work all this together, and put it into your Beef Guts that be very clean and well scoured, fill them very well, and tye them up about half a foot in length, and some distance the one from the other, then put them into Salt, and let them lye the space of two days, and then hang them up a dying in your Chimney.

Sausages made with the Brain of a Capon.

Boil a Capon with a little Beef suet, and a piece of fat Bacon, this done, mince it all together with some white Powder, sweet Margerum and Milk, and half a dozen Yolks of Eggs, work all this well together, and fill it into Hogs Guts that are clean scoured and scraped; but if you please, instead of Margerum you may put an Onion minced very small, and forget not.
For the Officers of the Mouth.

not to put in some Salt into your stuff before you fill it into the Guts; then give them a boil or two; but be sure that you do not fill them too full, for fear of breaking: and when you would eat them lay them upon a Gridiron, and take notice that this kind of Saffages are much better hot than cold.

Saffages made of Veal.

These are made like those of Pork, and you are only to take notice, that these are better at eight days end, than when they are fresh made, and that you should put in some Saffron, and steep them in Verjuice: And since we have spoken of Saffages made of Pork, you may take notice also, that to make Pork Saffages well, you should take the flesh of the Thigh or Leg that is good and sound, and very fresh.

Andouilles.

All the world knows that these are made of the small Guts of Hogs, which are minced very small and put into into the greater; but this is so common that it is not necessary to say any more, since we have said so much already about the Sallages.

Puddings.

And of these we make two sorts, the white and black; and as concerning the black they are made of the Hogs blood, and this is common enough: And for the white they are made much like the Sallages that were spoken of before, so there is no more to be said of either in this place, but every one is to use his own pleasure or invention.

Divers sorts of Sauces for Flesh-Days.

Sauce Royal.

Take Claret-Wine and Vinegar, a like quantity of each, whole Cinnamon, Cloves, and Sugar, set this a boiling altogether, and let it boil till it
For the Officers of the Mouth. 365
it be about half consumed: Serve this Sauce under Venison.

Venison Sauce.

Take a little Bread that is tosted, and Cameline, or Portage or good Broth made of Venison, small Spice and Cinamon; strain all this through a Strainer, and set it a boiling with Sugar, and twelve whole Cloves, a little Salt; but if you have neither Cameline nor Broth, then take Vinegar. This Sauce serves either for Buck, Doe, or Kid, or Wild-Bear, with any thing of Venison of the like nature.

Cold Sauce.

Take Chickens and boil them with their Livers and Gizzards, and a piece of Bacon to give them a relish; and when they are boiled take them out, and let them stand to be cold; this done, take white Bread and steep it in Vinegar and Verjuice, with some green Wheat, sweet Margerum, Parsley, fley, and Sage; then let all this be strained through a Strainer, put to it a little Ginger, and season it very well: put it into a Dish, and put to it some hard Eggs cut in the middle.

Hot Sauce.

Take white Bread and tost it by the fire, and put it a steeping in Vinegar and Verjuice, mingle with this Ginger and Cloves, but more Cloves than other Spice, with Seeds and Nutmegs; strain all this together, and put it into a Dish upon your Pine-Seeds.

Black Sauce.

Make this as you did the Sauce for Lampreys, only put to it a little Hogs Lard, and a little more beaten Cloves. This will serve for Venison or Wild-fowl, which is usually served in black Sauce.

Green Sauce.

Take green Wheat, Soril de la Salmon, Parsley in the Spring, a little white white Powder, strain all this together with a little Vinegar; and so serve your Sauce.

Sauce Madame.

Take the Yolks of Eggs, with Verjusce and a little Broth, strain this with a little white Powder and Cinamon; this done, make it boil with some Sugar and a little Cinamon: Serve this Sauce with Hens, Pullets, or Capons, that are to be served all hot.

Sauce Barbe Robert.

Take Onions, mince them very small, and fry them either in Hogs Lard or Butter, according as the day is either for Fish or Flesh; then take a little Verjuice, Vinegar, Mustard, small Spice, and Salt, boil all these together, and serve it with Roast Coney, or with Fish, either Sea or fresh River Fish; or you may dress Eggs with this Sauce, and find them very good.
Sauce d'Enfer, or Hell-sauce.

Boil Hogs feet in good Broth, and when they are boiled take them out and broil them upon the Gridiron; this done, cut your Hogs feet into good handsom pieces, and lay them in a Dish, and put green Sauce over them. Or if you will, after they are broiled, take Onions minced very small, put them into a Dish, and set them a stewing with some Verjuice; and when they are stewed put some Mustard to it, then take Sheeps feet cut in pieces into a Dish, but very hot, put in at the same instant some burning Charcoal a top of the Sheeps feet, and then put the Hogs feet upon the top of that, with their sharp Sauce with them: And serve this at the entry of the Table, or as an Entermess.

Fromentée de Venaison, or of Venison.

Take either a Kid or a Lamb, it matters not which, rost them, and mince mince them very small, then have Cream and Wheat boiled; and when the Broth is cold, put into it the Venison, with Eggs, white Powder, and sweet Marjerom: And when this is done, put it all into your Fromentée.

Fromentee of Goat or Kid.

Take a Goat or Kid and cut him in pieces, and boil him with good Herbs in good Broth, then have some Fromentee boil'd in Milk, as if you were making a Fromentee with white Powder, Cinnamon, and Sugar.

To make Gelly of meat, for Flesh days.

Take a good Capon and a good Beshy Hen, a Gigot or Leg of Veal, and two Calves feet clean scalded, wash all this meat in three or four waters, then put it in a Pot that is well tinned and very clear, with a little pinch of Salt, an Ounce of Harshorn rasped, either loose or tyed in a clean thin Linen-cloath; then put in a sufficient quantity of water, because

R s

this
this must not be filled up, make it boil, scum it very well, and as the fat rises take it off with a Silver-spoon or Laddle, and make it boil leisurely till the bones come out of the flesh; and when the Broth is enough, strain it through a clean Napkin, but do not press the flesh, but let it remain as if you did intend to eat it; after this put that Broth which you strained out into another Pot well tinned and varnished, and press the Cloath wherein the Harts-horn was boiled in amongst the rest, if you boiled any; take away all the fat as clean as you can, and cover over the Pot, and take notice too that the Pot wherein you put the Decoction need not be so big as that wherein the Broth was boiled, for the Decoction should not be above three Pints, and especially in Summer it must be stronger than in Winter, and also in Summer you must set it in a Cellar to cool, but in Winter any place may serve; but when you would serve it, be sure to take off, if any at all, the fat with a Silver-spoon, then put it altogether into a Chafer, or the like, like, upon a clear fire without smoke, and make it melt and be hot, and at the same time as it melts take three or four Spoonfuls of it into a Porenger, and put to it a very little Saffron, stir and dissolve it, and put it into the Pot to the rest of the Broth, and rince the Porenger with a little more of that which is clear, to take away all the colour of the Saffron; this done, put in about a dram of Cinnamon, or less, bruised in a Mortar, and half a pound of Sugar broken into pieces; after this take the Whites of three Eggs, and put them into a Dish, and beat them to froth with a white Whisk bound together like a Broom, at a pretty length put them into your Chafer, or what Vessel forever it is, and stir it about with your VWhisk, and set it over the fire again, and whilst the Gelly warms prepare the Whites of two Eggs with the Shells like the former, and put them into your Gelly Bag, and as soon as the Gelly begins to boil, and the foam begins to rise, then pour it carefully into your Gelly Bag, which you have made ready for that.
that purpose, hot as it is, but be sure to stir it till it boils; this done, let it run three or four times through the Bag, about a Dish full at a time, as it is run out put it into your Bag again, till it be very clear and not muddy, and as it was when you took it from the fire; and when it is all run through, and very clear, put it into several Dishes, and set it to cool, if it be Summer, in a very cool place covered over, that it may stiffen and cool the easier; but in Winter when you put the Gelly into the Bag you should have a Chafing-dish or two with a few Charcoals lighted by you, that the Gelly may run, and not cool too soon, and pass the better: This would not be altogether unnecessary in some cases in the Summer also, provided your fire be very moderate, and especially when you have drawn off about two parts of it, that you may keep the rest of it warm, and it will run the better: And you may make the same Observations in making the Gellies of Fish also.
Blanc-mange of Flesh and Almonds.

Take a Capon, or a good Hen well fleshed, and a good Calves-foot, prepare them as you did for the Gelly, and put them a boiling in a sufficient quantity of Water; make this boil, and scum it very well, and put to it some Salt, they say the weight of a Crown, but use your own discretion; when it is boiled as much as you would have it, strain it twice through a white Napkin, without pressing the Flesh, and that your Broth be not above a quart or two pounds; this done, retain about two Ounces of the brain of the Fowl without the skin, then set your Broth to settle, take off all the Fat, and let it stand in a cool place till it be a Gelly; then if there be any more Fat upon it, take it off and set it to melt upon a clear fire without smoke, in a Skellet or Saucepan, and being melted put it into a Dilh, then take the Crum of a half-penny White-loaf, wet it in very clear water, and when it is wet squeeze the water water out with your hand, and put it into a Marble Mortar, and mince the flesh that you saved of your Fowl, and put it to the Bread, and beat all this well together, and put it into your broth, and let it stand an hour to infuse in the Chimney-Corner; in which time blanch four Ounces of sweet Almonds, and beat them likewise in a Mortar, and at the hours end that the bread and flesh of your Fowl hath infused together, then put in also your beaten Almonds, with an Ounce of good Rose-water, into the Pot to the broth and bread, and let these four things infuse together another hour, at the end of which time strain all together through a clean Napkin, and put that into a Skillet which you have strained out, with four Ounces of good Sugar, and make all this boil together a little, and when it is boiled, put it into a Dish or two, and let it stand to cool and gelly, and serve it when you see occasion.

Blanc.
Blanc-mange of Almonds.

Take Almonds and blanch them, and beat them in a Mortar, and strain them through a Strainer with some crumbs of bread, hot water, and white Vine, and Verjuice, white Powder, and Sugar, so that it be all pretty thick, but not too thick, and well Sugared; this done, put it into an Earthen pot well glazed, and set it upon the fire, keeping it always stirring; and when it is almost boiled season it to your own Palate, be it for Capons or other Roast-meats, or with any sort of fried Fish, be it with what it will put to it good store of Sugar-Plums; or if you will have it a yellow Cream, put to it in the boiling a little Saffron, at your own discretion.

Almond Milk.

Take good Almonds and lay them a day and a night in fair water, in so much that you need not heat water to blanch them; then beat them in a Morta
Mortar with the Crumbs of a stale white Loaf steeped in boiling water, then strain it through a Strainer, and put it into a Pot to boil, and season it with Salt and Sugar at discretion.

Cream of Almonds.

Take Almonds and steep them a day and a night in water, that they may blanch without hot water, beat them in a Mortar, and put white-wine to them, then strain them through a fine Strainer; set this over a fire in a well-glazed Pot, and make them boil, keeping them always stirring with a Spoon, lest they should burn to; put to them a little Salt and Sugar at discretion.

Orgemonde, or French Barly.

Take French Barly and boil it in fair Water, till it breaks, then take Almonds and blanch them and beat them in a Mortar, and put to them some fair boiling Water, then strain both your Almonds and Barly together ther through a Strainer, and put that which you have strained out into a Pot, well glazed, and make it boil with a very clear Fire; put to it some Salt and Sugar, keeping it always stirring for fear of burning to; and give me leave to tell you by the by,
that this Barly is good to provoke sleep, therefore it is very good for sick people.

To make Pottage of Fish, proper for Fish and Fasting days, all the Year.

A Pottage of Eels.

Take Eels and flea them, cut them in pieces and fry them in Butter, till they be a little brown, then put your pieces of Eels into a Pot, then take toasted Bread and put it into the Liquor of strained Pease a soaking, and when it is soaked enough, strain it through a Strainer, with some Claret-Wine, Verjuice, and a little Vinegar, and put all this into your Pot to your Eels, and make it all boil to gether; add to it a little Nutmeg, and Cloves
A School of Instructions

Clove beaten, and other small Spice, and a little Saffron; this done, take Onions boil'd in the Pease-Water, and strained through a Strainer, put this into your Pot also, and taste if it be well season'd, and so dish it up when it is well boil'd.

Or thus.

Take an Eel and flea him, open his Belly, and cut him to pieces, put him into a Dish with some Butter, Verjuice, and Broth, and make all this boil over a Chaffing-Dish of Coals; season it with good Spice, and then take a Crust of Bread and put them into another Dish, and soak them in some of your Eel Broth, upon another Chaffing-dish, and when your Bread is well soaked, put your Eels over it when they are boil'd enough, with some Artichoke bottoms with them, as it were for a garnish.
A Pottage of Cray Fish.

Take Cray-Fish and make them boil in Water, Vinegar, and Salt, and when they are boil'd take of the Shells, only the Claws leave whole, put them into a Frying-pan, and give them a toss or two in brown Butter, and a little Parsley minc'd small, put to it a little Verjuice, and some Broth with a little Salt and Spice, then take the Shells of your Cray-Fish and beat them in a Mortar very small, with a Ladle of Broth, then strain them through a Cloath or Strainer, then steep the Crust of Bread in a Dish, and when that is well soaked, put your Cray-Fish in order upon it, and when you are ready to send away, then put that which you have strained over your Bread and Cray-Fish, that is to say, the Broth so strained, and serve it away.

A Bisk of Fish.

Take a good large marl Carp and bone bone him, hash the Flesh of him very small, put him into a Dish with Butter, season him with Salt and Spice, then take the Milt and Bones, and what else was taken from the Flesh and make it boil by itself with a little Butter, Time, Salt, and an Onion, and Cloves, then stove up your hashed Carp by itself, and in the mean time soak some Crust of White-bread with some of the Broth in which your Fish was boil'd in, then put your hash over the soaked Bread, and your boil'd Milt upon that; cut in pieces some Mushrooms, Yolks of hard Eggs, and Artichoke-bottoms, for a Garniture about it.

Pottage a la Reyne, or for the Queen.

Hash the Flesh of an Eel, and boil him in Butter, and half a glass of White-Wine, and when he is boil'd enough beat him in a Mortar with a quarter of blanched Almonds, then strain him through a Strainer with Fish Broth, or Natural Broth; put that which you have strained out into a
For the Officers of the Mouth.

a little Pot, season it with Salt a bundle of sweet Herbs, Cloves and a Mushrom, stir it about with a Rolling-Pin, and put into it some Lemon, then soak some Crusts of Bread and put this Pottage over your soaked Bread, and Garnish it with the Milts of Carps or the like Mushrooms and Granades, and put over it the juice of Lemons and some Pickle of Mushrooms, and serve it away hot.

Or thus,

Take either Carps or Tench and boil them in Water, and take Onions, Parsley, hard Eggs and the crumbs of a white Loaf, this done strain out your Broth and put it into a Pot, with as much Butter as you would put into another Pottage, then take Almonds and beat them and put them into the one half of your Broth, and make it boil a pretty while, then strain it out and put into it an Onion stuck with Cloves, and let it stand in this condition upon the hot Ashes or Embers: Then steep your Bread in your first Broth, but fill up your Dish with an other sort which you shall make with the Yolk of an Egg, a little Verjuice and Pickle of Mushroms but make it not too thick, this done serve away your Pottage, and garnish him with Granades and slices of Lemons.

Pottage a la Princesse.

Take the purce or Pease when they are strained that is clear, and boil the bones of Carps in it with the Yolks of Eggs, a fages of sweet hearts, season it well, then dry the crust of a Manchet, and soak it in some Broth; strain out a little of a halft Carp and Mushroms, and fill your Dish in some measure; and as the Bread soaks garnish your Dish with Mushroms, the Milt of Carps, and all sorts Herbs, sliced Lemons.

A Pottage of Soles boned and farced.

Take good fresh Soles and Fry them till they are almost enough to Eat; then open open or cleave them and take out the bones, then take Milts of Carps or the like: Oysters, Capers, Mushrooms and Trufelles; Fry all this in the Pan with Parsley and young Onions whole, then fearce your Soles with this, and lay them a soaking with a little Broth, some Butter, the juice of Lemons or Oranges or Eels Verjuice; then lay your Bread in a Dish a soaking with some Fish-Broth such as you have, or such as you please; lay your Soles upon it, and Garnish them with their own Broth Mushrooms the Trufelles and Milts, and about the sides of your Dish put sliced Lemons.

A Pottage de Eperlans.

Soak your Bread in the best of your Pottage Maigre, then take 6 little Loaves made on purpose, dry them very well, then open a place in them about the breadth of a Shilling, and take out all the Crum, so that there remains nothing but Crust: This done and they are emptied and dry, dip them in clarified Butter and let them them run, and when they have well drip’d the Butter away, put these also a soaking upon your Bread, and when you are ready to serve them away fill up the hollows of your Loaves with that which is necessary as lai-tances or Milts, Mushrooms, Asparagus, broken Arty-Choke bottoms, Capers and Trufelles: This done stop up the hole with the Crust you took out, then Garnish your Dish with Milts, Mushrooms, Granades and sliced Lemons and the like.

A Pottage of Herbs without Butter.

Take a good quantity of good Herbs when they are fresh gathered, wash and bruise them and put them a boiling into the fair Water, when it boils put to it a half Loaf split in the middle, season it so that it be a little fowerish, with a good deal of Soril, slice and steep your Bread and dish your Pottage, and put a few Capers to it if you please to make your Pottage sharp, take the one half of the Herbs when they are half boil’d and strain
For the Officers of the Mouth. 385

strain them out, and to make them green, beat your Sorril in Mortar.

Pottage a la neige, or Snow.

Take Milk and boil it, thicken it with the Yolks of Eggs, put some Sugar to it, and when you are ready to serve it, take the whites of the Eggs and fry them, and strew them into your Milk, and it will swim like Snow upon it.

A Pottage de Son, which is Bran.

Take Wheat-bran the largest you can find, and make it boil in Water, with a handful of Almonds, and a Fagot of sweet Herbs, season it well, and when 'tis boil'd strain it through a Strainer, and set it aboiling again, soak your Bread and fill your Dish with this Broth, and if you would have it white you may do it with Eggs beaten, with Verjuice, and then garnish your Dish and serve it.

S To
To Fearce a Carp.

Take a Carp, flæa off his Skin, take out his Bones and hash the Flesh very small, then make an amlet of three or four Eggs, and hash this with your Flesh of the Carp, season it with Spice and Salt, with Pignons or Pine Seeds, and a little Thyme minced small; work up your fearing with four or five Yolks of Eggs to bind it, put it again into the Skin of your Carp, which you must preserve whole; and then sow it up with a Needle and Thread, then boil him with Butter, Verjuice and Broth, and when he is ready Dish him up with Toftes under him, to the end that he may not stick to the Dish.

You may fearce a Pike after the same manner if you please; and besides all this you may put a few Pistaches in the Belly of either your Pike or Carp.

Gelly of Fish.

Take Pike, Carp, Trout, and Pearches Pearches that were taken in a River, and not in Ponds, or Ditches, for they are better and more Natural, and have a much better taste upon them; and cleave their Heads and wash them in 3 or 4 Waters, so that there may be no blood left in them, cut them in slices, and take three pound of this Fish, so make three pints, or three pound of Decoction, or Broth; put this Fish so cut into an Earthen Pot very well glazed, and put to it the one half Water, and the other half White-wine, so much in quantity, that the Liquor may surmount the Fish 4 Fingers in height; set your Pot upon a Charcoal-Fire, make him boil, and when he is scum’d, put in half a pound of Harts-horn rasped, a very little Salt, make all this boil very well together, till your Broth will be about the quantity of three pints, when it is strained and pressed out through a clean Napkin; this done, put it in a cool place, where it may Jelly, and when it is cold, take off the Fat with a Silver Spoon, then put it into a clean Skillet, and and set it to melt over the Fire, and when it is melted take out three or four Spoonfuls, with which you may mingle as much Saffron as is said before, for the like quantity of Flesh Jelly, and so put it to the rest of your Broth with some Cinnamon the wait of a Crown piece bruised, and half a pound of Sugar with the Shells of three Eggs beaten to powder, all this being mingled set it over the Fire, then beat the whites of two Eggs Shells and all to a Froth, then put them into your Jelly Bag, and put your Jelly to them very hot; when it begins to boil let it run through your Bag, and put it always in again, till it be very clear, and not muddy as it was at the first; this being done; cover it over and set it in a cool place, that it may take and become a firm Jelly, as is aforesaid in the Instructions for Flesh Jellies.
How to dress all sorts of Fish, both of Sea or River, Fresh or Salt.

Broûet of Eels.

Take Eels and flea them, or else scald them, and put them aboiling in pieces in fair Water, or Wine, then beat some Parsley and Bread that is Toasted very dry and blake, and moistened in your Broûet, and put to it some Ginger and Saffron, strain all this together, and when it is strain'd make it boil, and put to your Broth, or Broûet a little Cheese grated.

Broûet Sarrazinois, or their fashion.

Dress your Eels as you did in the former, cut them in pieces and salt them, then fry them in Oyl, then beat Ginger, Cinamon, Clove-Seeds of Garingal, Long Pepper and Saffron, wet it in Wine and Verruice; strain it, and put what you straine out into.
into your Brouet, make it boil, serve it hot.

Brouet of small Eels.

Take small Eels and scald them, and either truss them round or in pieces, and make them boil in fair Water, with good store of Parsley, and little thin slices of Cheese, and when they are boil'd put a sup into Dishes, and in each Dish put three or four of these rounds or pieces of these Eels, as you put them to boil; you may boil in this Brouet some Onions, and Spice, and Saffron, which is very good at all seasons.

Great Eels.

The great Eels are to be eaten either Boil'd, Roast, or in Paste, as you please your self; but if you will boil them, boil them with fair Water and Parsley, but if you will Roast them, eat them with a Sauce made with good Broth, Cheese, Salt, fine Powder, or Spice beat to fine Powder, as
as I suppose: And this is call'd eating them white, when they are hot; and because many will have them in Paste, this shall be spoken of when we come to the Pastry.

_Eels a la Sorique._

Take Eels and dress them, as is already said, and cut them in pieces and put them into a clean pot with some Onions, this done, take Bread and toast it very well, and steep it in the Puree of Pease, or Pease that are boil'd and strained, and this Puree, is the Liquor of the Pease so strained; put to it a little Vinegar, Cinnamon, Ginger, and other small Spice and Saffron, strain all this together and put it into your Pot to your Eels, with some Salt, and make it boil all together, and if you have any other Fish that is fryed in Oyl or Butter, you may put some into your Dish with your Eels, and so serve them.
Eels Bouluas.

Besides what is aforesaid, this is another word, not so well known to all; therefore take your Eels and flea them, and cut them in pretty long pieces, and make them boil with Vinegar, Verjuice, and Salt, this done take them out, and broil them upon a Grid-Iron, then take a little more Vinegar, Verjuice, and Butter, and make it boil together a little while, then pour it over your Eels.

You may take notice, that an Eel is a Fish that is much enquired after, and is good at all times and seasons.

An Aloze Empty.

Take an Aloze, and gut, gall, and wash him well, and salt him, scorch, or cut him on the sides, baste him well with Oyl, or Butter and Verjuice, with a bunch of Sage, and lay him to broil on a Grid-Iron, shake your Grid-Iron sometimes, that he may not stick to your Grid-Iron; when he is is broil'd put him into a Dish, and for his Sauce take Butter, Verjuice, some Herbs minc'd very small, Saffron, Goosberries, and Aigrets or Sorrel, make all this boil upon the Coals some time, and when it is well boil'd and season'd pour it over your Fisch.

For a Salt Aloze, if he be boil'd in Water,

He is to be eaten with Mustard,
but if he be boil'd in Wine, then eat him with Cibouls, or young Onions.
A fresh Aloze should be skin'd and boil'd in Water, and eaten a la Came-line, or pickled; if you will bake him in Paste you should scald him,
and when your Pye is almost ready,
then put in your Came-line, and make it that it be very clear. But if you would only bake him in an oven without Paste, then dress him without scalding of him, and when he is half baked with Parsly and Verjuice, then put in some Wine and Vinegar, and let him bake out the other half till he be bake'd enough.
This Aloze is a Sea-Fish that is long and thick upon the Back, with a Head and all almost like a Herring; he is full of small bones, but the flesh is sweet and pleasant enough, but for the most part eaten with tallow Sauce.

Bardelet, or Chub.

Boil him in the Summer, with three parts Water, and one part Wine, with a good quantity of Parsley and Sorrel; this Fish is pretty firm, but will take pretty good boiling.

Bart, or the same kind of Fish.

This is to be boil’d in Water, and eaten with a green Sauce.

Barbilons, or Barbill.

If they are rosted, that is to say broil’d, eat them with Verjuice, if boil’d, with a Sauce; in Winter you may fry them and eat them with Pepper, Vinegar, sharp Gret, or Jaune; they are good either way.
Braine, or Bream.

Boil him in Water and eat him with a green Sauce, if broil'd, eat him with Verjuice.

Barbue, or Dabes.

The Barbue is in a manner the same sort of Fish as your Turbot is, only the Barbue is a little les, but not much difference in the Fish, therefore the Barbue must be dress'd as the Turbot is done.

To dress Pikes, Carps, or other fresh-water Fish.

Take Pike, Carp, or any other sort of River Fish that you please, season it a little with Salt, and put it into Butter, or Oyl indifferently hot, and let it boil upon a soft Fire, and when it is ready, take it out and serve it with the juice of Oranges, or in Summer with Verjuice, Grapes, and for your Butter that is left, it will serve for your your Pottages, or else to fry any thing with, and so likewise your Oyl will serve to fry Fish with afterward, so that nothing need be lost.

A Pike Roasted, or Broiled.

Take a Pike and dress him down, and scorch, or cut him in the sides, sprinkle a little Salt on him, and lay him on a Grid-iron, and as he broils baste him with Butter, with the leaves of Sage, this done take Onions and fry them in fresh Butter, and when they are fryed put to them a little Verjuice, Vinegar, and Mustard, white Powder and Salt; make this boil together, and put it under your Pike.

A Pike boiled.

Take a Pike and dress him down, cut him into four quarters, and sprinkle him with Salt, and let him lye three or four hours, and then boil him in good White-wine, Verjuice and a little Vinegar, and Salt, and for his his Sauce take Butter and Mustard.

A Pike Stew'd.

Take a Pike dress him down, cut him into quarters, or in round pieces, and put him into a Pot or Pan with Verjuice, fresh Butter, Cloves, Nutmegs, and Ginger beaten, a little Rosemary, parly, Sage, and Salt with an Orange or two in slices according to the bigness of your Pike; make all this stowe together over a Fire, and when it is ready serue it away.

A Pike fryed.

Take a Pike and cleave him, cut him into four pieces and fry him in Butter, and when he is fryed enough, take him out, and put him in a Dish with some old Verjuice, and juice of Oranges or Lemons.

A Bream broil'd.

Take a Bream and Scale him, wash him, and scorcht and cut him on the
the sides, and lay him on the Grid-Iron upon a little Straw, that he may not stick to the Grid-Iron; keep him basting with Butter till he be ready, this done take fresh Butter and melt it in a Pan, put to it some Parsley minced very small, some Verjuice, Grapes, white Powder, and a little Saffron beaten and steeped in old Verjuice and Salt, make it all boil together, and pour it over your Bream.

A Carp with a green Sauce.

Scale and dress down your Carp, and boil him in Water, and eat him with a green Sauce, but if there be any left you may put it into a Galantine.

Carp Stewed.

Take Onions and mince them very small, and put them into a Pot either of Brass or Earth with Water, and when they are boil'd, put in the Heads of your Carps, and a little after the Tails, then the rest, and cover them up so carefully that the steam may not go go out; this done, take Ginger, Cinnamon, and Saffron beaten, and steep it in Wine and Verjuice, strain this out and put it to your Carpes, and cover them up again, and make them boil again a little, and then serve them.

Carps broiled.

Scale your Carps, and put them upon the Grid-Iron and broil them very well, then take Bread and toste it upon your Grid-Iron, steep it in Claret-Wine and Vinegar, strain it through a Strainer, but so, that that which comes through be not too thick nor too thin, make it boil over a fire with Cloves, season it with Nutmegas, Ginger, Sugar, Raisons and Salt.

Carps boiled.

As for your Carps you may boil them in what manner you please in Wine, Vinegar, Verjuice in your Water, with a little Sage, Hyslop, but when they are boil’d enough, you you should eat them with a green Sauce, or else with parsley and Vinegar.

Carpes aux Baignets, or Fritors.

Take Carpes Heads and make them boil in a good Fish Broth, and when they are boil'd, take them out and let them cool, then take Eggs and beat them with white Powder, Saffron and Salt, and put your Carpes Heads into the Eggs thus beaten, then fry them well in Butter, and they will swim like the vrais Baignets, or Fritors, and you may if you please put Sugar to them, and they will look so much the more like Fritors.

Roste Sturgeon.

First make it boil well, and when it is well boil'd take it out and clean it, and put it upon a broche, stick a few Cloves into it, and so roste it, and in rosting baste it with Butter and Vinegar melted together, and make your Sauce with the Fat that falls fall from it, and Vinegar, small Spice, Cinnamon, and Sugar, some Rosemary minced small, and if you will thicken it a little, put in some toasted Bread, and make all this boil together, and when your Sturgeon is ready put it off, and put your Sauce over it with Sugar, and so serve it away.

Sturgeon boil'd.

This sort of Fish is the most esteem'd of any Fish in the Sea, and therefore you may either eat it boil'd or roast, as you were told how to roast it before, so if you will eat it boil'd you must boil it in Wine, Verjuice, Salt, and Water, with Hyssop and Fennel, and when it is boil'd, let it cool, and when 'tis cold, eat it with Vinegar and Parsley.

Salt Salmon,

Must be boil'd in good store of Water, and when it is boil'd take it out and let it cool, and when it is cold take take Onions and Parsley, mince them small and strew over it, and then put Oyl and Vinegar to it, and so eat it.

Fresh Salmon boil'd.

If you have a whole one, you may cut out a chine and keep it to broil, cut the rest into pieces or mses, and boil it in Water, Wine, Vinegar, and Salt, and when it is boil'd you may eat it with a yellow Pepper or à la Cameline; or some will eat it with Wine and Onions, or it is very good with a little Powder of Spice with it in Paste.

Fresh Salmon Roast.

Take it and put 5 or 6 Cloves into it, then fry it in a Pan with good fresh Butter, and give it the same Sauce as you make for a Trout.

'Trouts boil'd,

Of which there are two sorts, the white and the red, the white are good in
in the Summer, and the red in the Winter; and it is generally held, that the best piece of a Trout is the tail, as the head is of a Carp, for the better distinguishing of which, take heed whether there be not two black veins in their Pallats, for those that have these veins are red, and those that have not are white; and if you will eat them boil’d, boil them in Water, and a good deal of Salt, and eat them a Cameline; they do usually serve them cut into pieces, of about 2 or 3 fingers breadth; but if any one will eat a Trout that is good, let him eat him on a fresh day; baked in a good Paste, covered with large slices of Lard and Spice, and Salt sprinkled over it.

Trout Roast.

Besides what I have already said of boil’d Trouts; I shall acquaint you now, that you may first boil them in Wine, Vinegar and Verjuice; and then fry them with Parsley, some will boil them, sticking in some Cloves into into them, and serve them with a sauce made of Wine, Cinnamon and Verjuice, and a little Salt at discretion.

Thon or Congre Eel.

The Thon is a certain round Fish, found in the Sea, which hath no other bones but only the Chine bone; but in stead of bones he has a very hard skin, and therefore is to be boil’d in Water only, and eaten with a yellow Pepper or Vinegar, coloured with the Yolk of an Egg.

A Turbet.

When you have scalded and accommodated him, boil him as you do Sturgeon, and eat him with a green Sauce and Vinegar, or else put with Sugar; but you may take notice, that the Turbet is much better for being kept 2 days after he is taken, he is also very good in Paste.
The Barbeau and Playce, or Dabes and Playce.

All these are to be dressed as you do the Sturgeon and Turbot, only these will not boil so long.

Weavers.

These may be dressed as you dress Mullets, neither are they bad boil’d.

The Vandoifes Dace,

Are to be boil’d and eaten with Verjuice and Soril.

The Seches Fried, or Poor-Jack dried.

You must first peel them, and make them very clean; then Perboil them, then boil them till they be tender, then take them out and dry them, and fry them in Butter, with Onions, and when they are fryed, put over them some white Powder, small Spice and the juice of Oranges.

Saugrenee
Saugrenee of Pease,

Take your gray Pease, and wash them very well; boil them without steeping them in warm Water; if you do not dress them for People that are troubled with the Gravel; boil them with Parsley or Fenel-Roots, (when you have taken out the pith or stick that is in the middle of them) with Butter or Oyl, Verjuice, small Spice, Salt and Saffron.

Beans.

Boil your Beans in Water, and when they are boil'd, let them stand to cool, then mince Onions very small, and fry them in Butter or Oyl, and put this upon your Beans, and put your Beans into a Pot; make them boil, keeping them still stirring, or at least very often; you may if you please put in a little Saffron, and serve them away with Herrings or Marsouvin: I understand the Beans to be French Beans that are dry, and the Herrings
Herrings to be red Herrings; or you may take white ones if you please.

Spinage.

Take Spinage and scald it, then mince it, then take Butter and melt it, and fry Onions that are minced small in it, and put to it some strain’d Pease; put all this into a Pot together, with a little Almond Milk, Salt, white Powder and some Verjuice; this is a very proper Dish in Lent, when it is thus seasoned and prepared.

Or, thus.

First make your Water boil with some Butter and Salt, then take Spinage with Lettuce, Parsley and Borage, and Soril; wash them well and squeeze out the Water, give this a chop or two, and put it into your Pot, with your Water and Butter, and let it take a boil or two.

Makerils
These ought to be drawn, the Guts out by the gills, then dry'd with a cloath, and not wash them at all; boil them and eat them a la cameline, or with fine Salt; but for the salted, boil them with Wine and young Onions; but if you do put them in Pate, season them with Salt and Spice.

Molle or Codfish.

Of these there are 2 sorts, both Fresh and Salt, as for the one you may keep as long as you please; that is to say, 10 years if you will, or 12, taking of him so soon as dead, and cleave him in the middle; cut away the head, and dry him either in the Air, the Sun or in the Chimney in the Smoke; and this is that which the French call fresh, because not Salted; but we more properly, Stockfish, because to eat it thus, you must first beat it with a Mallet or Beetle for an hour together; then soak it in warm Water twelve hours or or more, then make it boil in Water only, scum it and eat it with Butter and Mustard: The other sort which we usually call Salt-fish, every one eats it as he pleases; some with Butter only, some adds Parsley and some Mustard, every one as it pleaseth his fancy, and yet neither of these are new. But yet notwithstanding there is another sort of Fresh Cod, which is eaten as soon as it is taken out of the Sea; without being either Salted or dryed, and for this you ought to make a Sauce as you do for a Pike.

Merlus or Poor-Jack.

This sort of Fish ought to be cut in pieces and soaked a whole night in Water, then dried with a cloath and fryed in Oyl, and eaten with Mustard.

Soles.

These ought to be dress'd as you do Playce, but you may eat them either boil'd, broil'd or fry'd; and first to eat them boil'd, you must boil them them in Water, Salt and Parsley; when they are enough let them cool, and being cold eat them with a green sauce, but if you eat them hot, make your sauce with Butter and Water wherein Verjuice was boil'd, and a little Mustard: if you broil them lay first a little straw, a little wetted upon your Gridiron, so broil your Soles and eat them with a green sauce, but to eat them fryed is a thing so common, that we need not say any more of it in this place.

Moules or Mussels.

Make these boil very quick in a little Water and Wine without Salt, and eat them with Vinegar: But if you will make make a Pottage of them, you must boil them in Water without Wine, but with Butter, Verjuice and Parsley.

Mullets.

These must be broil'd, and a good Sauce made to them, of brown Butter
For the Officers of the Mouth.

ter, Parsley minced small, and Verjuice, a little Saffron, white Powder and Salt at your own discretion; make all this boil to geter, and pour it over your Fish.

Marsouin or Porpos.

Cut these in pieces, and put them upon the broche, and stick in some Cloves, and when it is ready make a sauce for it thus, take Vinegar, Verjuice and Wine, and 2 or 3 Toasts very brown, strain all this through a strainer with a little Nutmeg, small Spice and Salt at your discretion. Make all this so strained boil together, and pour it over your Marsouin or Porpos.

Carrelets or a small Fish like Playce.

These are to be dressed and eaten with the same as you do the Playce, and so are an other sort of Fish called Limandes to be dressed and eaten; the same fashion as you do Playce.
Pearch boil'd.

Boil your Pearch in Water and Salt, with Vinegar, Verjuice and Parsley; this done peel them, put them in a Dish and set them over a Chafing-Dish of coals with some good Butter, a little Nutmeg, and a little Verjuice; or you may eat them with Vinegar and Parsley, but if they are fryed eat them au grain, or with Verjuice Grapes scalded.

Raye or Sleet otherwise Thornback.

Open this Fish and keep the Liver, boil it in pieces in Water, Salt and Vinegar; and when it is boil'd, take it up and make it clean, and eat it aux aulx, and a la Cameline, that is Garlick.

But you may take notice by the by, that those are the most Natural that hath but one tail, and is much better than those which hath many.

And again, you may take notice, that there is another sort of Fish much much like unto the former call'd Cirose, but it hath not those prickles on the back, but hath more black spots and is much larger than the Thornback or Sleat, but otherwise the resemblance is all one.

Oysters opened.

Ought to be washed and boiled in Water, or Broth with Salt and an Onion, and when they are boil'd, take them out and wipe them dry with a Cloth, and fry them with good Butter, and put Butter and small Spice over them.

Oysters stewed.

Make them stew between two Dishes with Butter, Pepper, and Salt, or if you will you may parboil them, and mince them with an Onion or two, and to put them into a Pot with Butter, small Spice, Ginger, Cloves, Nutmeg, and Salt, and let them bake in an Oven like a Pye.
Oysters in the Shells.

I need not here to tell you that Oysters in the Shells are very good when they are fresh, because every body knows it, but it may be some does not know that when an Oyster is opened, some will put in Butter and Pepper to the Oyster, and set him upon the Coals to broil, and so eat them.

Oysters au Cive, or stewed brown.

Take Oysters and wash them and make them boil in Water and Salt, then take them and fry them with Onions, and when they are fryed take bread and taste it very dry, then strain it through a Strainer, with the thin of strained Pease, Claret-Wine, Vinegar and Verjuice, three drams Spice, and a little Saffron; when all this is strained together, put it to your Oysters and make them boil together and so serve it.
Lampreys,

Ought to be eaten with a warm Sauce, if they are boil'd in Water eat them with Mustard, if in Paste put in your warm Sauce, and put them into the Oven again to bake.

Lampreys boiled.

Take and bleed them and save their blood, then put them a boiling in Wine, Vinegar, and a little Water, and when they are boil'd a little tender, take them from the Fire, and lay them upon a Table-Cloath to cool, then take Bread burnt, or tosted very hard and brown, and straine it with some of your Eel-Broth, that they were boil'd in, through a Strainer, then boil the blood which you have savel, and as soon as it is boil'd put it into another Vessel, and keep it stiring till it be cold, then put to it some Ginger, Cinamon, Cloves, Nutmegs, and Long-pepper, all well beaten, mingle this together with the
the Broth where your Bread is steeped, then put all this into a Dish with your Lampree, or Lamper-Eels and their blood, make it all boil together, and so serve it away when you are ready.

Lamprees stewed.

Blood them as is above-said and then scald them, this done, put them into a Pot with the same Sauce as is aforesaid, cover up your Pot so close that no Air can get out, and whilst they are aboiling, take care to stir and turn them, and then do not fear, the Sauce will be all over them, provided that your Pot be close covered; let them boil thus till they be tender, and when they are in this condition put them whole into a Dish, and the Sauce over.

The Loches.

These should be boil'd in Water with some good Cheese, and eaten with Mustard; you may put them in-
Take a dozen of Eggs, break them, and take away the whites, and put the yolks into a Porridge, put to them a glass of Vinaigre, and a handful of Parsley. . .

To dye Eggs divers ways for Easter. Take Parly and Sage, with a little Cheefe, some Saffron and Bred, boil'd and boil'd in Water, and put into the Dyne, and put in a little more Cheese, and then Dyne it. To make a green Brochet of Eggs and Cheese.

For the Officers of the Month. 417

To make a green Brochet of Eggs and Cheese. You may fry them sprinkling them with a little Flower, to a Pottage, or a green eile, or

To dye Eggs divers ways for Easter Days, all the Year long.
ful of Sugar, and beat it all together, this done take one Earthen Pan, and put into it some good fresh Butter and Hony, set the Pan upon the Fire, and when that which is in it is very hot put into it your Eggs so beaten in the Porringer, keep them still stirring, till they are very thick, with a Spoon, or Ladle, and when they are thick serve them away in Dishes, or on Plates as you please.

Eggs Fearced.

Scald young Lettuce, Sorrel, Parsly, Charvel, and Serfuil, and one Champignon, or Mushrom, mince all this together with the Yolks of hard Eggs, put this into a Dish, and season it with Salt and Nutmeg, and a little bunch of sweet Herbs, put to it some good sweet Butter, but see that it be pretty clear, and when 'tis boil'd put to it a little natural Cream, and dish your Eggs upon the fearcing, that is to say the Whites of your hard Eggs, being but cleft in two, the Yolks are used for your fearcing, and the whites whelmed over your fearing, when you dish it up.

Eggs Marbled.

Take four Dishes or Porringers, and break in six Eggs into each Dish, beat them and add to the first the juice of Barberries, to the second the juice of Beech-leaves, to the third a little Saffron, and to the fourth nothing at all; but season them all four with Salt, Sugar, and Cinnamon, then put Butter into a paty-Pan, or Silver Dish, set it over the Fire, and when your Butter is melted and hot, put into your Butter, in the first place, some of the Eggs with the juice of Barberries, and when that is a little taken, put in a little of that with Saffron, then a little of that with the green, or juice of Beech-leaves, then of the natural, and then begin at the first again, and so continue putting of one and of the other by little and little, till all be put in, and when it is ready, that is to say baked enough, cut it out in slices and serve it away
wit
A School of Instrucions

with sweet Water, and Pomgranat-Seeds, and a little Sugar over it.

Eggs with Sugar.

Take a Porringer and set him upon the Embers, with a little Butter, and Sugar in him, then take Eggs and put away the whites, and when your Butter and Sugar is melted, put in the Yolks one by one, for fear of breaking them, and so soon as the Butter and Sugar begins to boil up, take them from the fire, for they are hard enough.

Lost Eggs, or Perdus.

Take the Yolks of raw Eggs, and steep them in a little Rose-Water, with some Crums of Bread, and a little fine Wheat Flower, beat this all together, but not strain it, and fry it in a Frying-pan, with some good Butter; but forget not to put in a little Salt in the baking of it, and some Sugar over it when it is baked.
Eggs sauced and fried.

Take Lettuce, Parsly, Chervile, Serfeuil, and Sorriol, mince it all together, and fry it in a Pan with good Butter, and six Eggs raw and beaten together; when this is fryed mince it together with the Yolks of hard Eggs, with four more that are raw; put to this some Pepper and Salt, then make a Paste with fine Flower, Yolks of Eggs, Pepper Salt, and White Wine, roll out your Paste, and then dispose your saucing into it in little rounds, cover it over and fry them in Butter, and serve them with fryed Parsley about them.

Eggs a la Florentine.

Take and fry in Butter, about a dozen and a half of the Yolks of Eggs one after another, and lay them upon a Plate, then take a good glass of Claret, some Sugar, Maroons beaten, some green Citron, Pistaches peel'd and cut, a little Salt, and a little Cinnamon; boil all this together a little and pour it it over your Eggs, and put to it a little juice of Lemons, and Seeds of Pomgranats for Garnish.

Give of Eggs potch’d in Oyl.

Take Eggs and fry them whole in Oyl, then take large Onions and cut them in slices, and fry them likewise in the same Oyl, like as you did the Eggs; then take Verjuice, Wine, and Vinegar, boil all this together, this done, take several Porringer, and put into each of them three or four Eggs, and pour your Sauce, or Bronet over them; but make it so that it may be a little clearish.

Eggs boil’d in Water.

Take and boil Eggs in Water till they be very hard, then peel them, cut them in the middle, and lay them in a Dish with fresh Butter, a little Verjuice, a little Saffron white powder and small Spice, and some few Herbs (if it be in Summer) and Salt; so when you would serve them away, let set them upon a Fire of Coals, and and cover them up, and make them boil, and so serve them hot; but in Winter put Mustard to them instead of Herbs.

Or thus.

When your Eggs are almost ready, take a hot Fire-shovel, and hold it over your Eggs to give them a colour; this you may do to that which hath the Yolks of Eggs only to colour it if need be.

Eggs with Rose-water.

Take a dozen and a half of the Yolks of Eggs, and put them to steep in Rose-water, two Makaroons, green Sitron grated, some Salt and Cinnamon beaten, make this bake in a Paty-Pan, with clarified Butter upon a soft Fire, and when it is ready glaze it over with Sugar, and Orange-flower-water, and put over it the juice of Lemons, and the juice of Pomgranats when you serve it away.
Potch'd Eggs with Anchovy Sauce.

First Potch your Eggs in Water, then melt your Anchovies in Butter, then strain it through a Strainer with some Flower browned in a searcing Pan, juice of Lemons, Capers, Salt, and Nutmegs, this done, pour it all over your Eggs.

Eggs in either a Pye or Pot.

Take what quantity of Eggs you please, and beat them with a little Salt, then take some young Onions and sweet Herbs, mince them very small, and fry them, and make an Omelette of them, with your Eggs and Herbs together, and when your Omelette is fryed lay it upon a Table, and mince it very small, then put it into a Pot, and put to it some Puree of Peese, strained indifferently clear; put to this some Butter, and make it boil upon a Charcoal-Fire, keeping it always like a Pye in a Pot; put some more sweet Herbs and Onions into the
For the Officers of the Mouth. 425

the Pot, white Powder, Saffron, some Spice in Powder steep’d in Vertejuice, the Yolks of hard Eggs, with a Clove or two stuck into them, and lower Gooseberries; but in the Winter put in a good deal of Vertejuice, and Onions fryed instead of sweet Herbs, and serve it hot.

To make Andouilles of Eggs.

Dispose your Eggs to make an O-melette, put to it the crumbs of white Bread grated, or crumbled, a good quantity of Sugar, Cinamon, and Ducks Powder, beat all this well together, then melt a piece of Butter in a Pan, and put your Eggs to it, and when they are a little knit, or taken, then set them upon the Coals, and sprinkle on some more Ducks Powder, and when your Omelet-tee is baked, roul him up like an Andouiille, and serve him away hot with Mustard.
Eggs and Bread, or with Bread.

Either grate or crumble the inside of a white Loaf, and put it into a dozen of Eggs broken, season it with Salt, and a little Sugar, beat all this together, and bake it in a Silver Dish or a fine Pan, with clarified Butter before the fire, with a dish behind it, and when it is bak'd, put to it some Sugar and Orange-flower-water, and hold a red hot Fire-shovel over it, to colour it a little more.

Eggs a l'Intrigue.

Break a dozen and a half of Eggs into a Dish, and beat them well together with almost two quarts of Cream, with Pepper, Salt, Siboules, and sweet Herbs minced very small together, then put some clarified Butter into a Paty-Pan, set it upon a soft Fire, and when your Butter is hot, put in about the third part of your Eggs thus beaten, and when they are about half ready, then make a Bed, or lay of Cheese
Cheese sliced, and Anchovies in pieces, then some potch’d Eggs that are done in Water, this done, put another part of your Eggs thus beaten over all this, and cover up your Paty-pan, till these Eggs be almost baked, then repeat the thing again, and make a Bed as before, and pour over it the rest of your beaten Eggs, with some little bits of Butter and grated Cheese, then give it a colour at the top, and so serve it away hot, with the juice of Lemons.

Eggs dress’d in the GERMAN and ROMAN manner.

Beat a dozen and a half of the Volks of Eggs in a Pan, with a few Orange-flowers beaten, or in powder, season them with Cinnamon and Salt, put a little clarified Butter in the Bottom of a Paty-pan, and when it is hot, put in about a fourth part of your Eggs thus beaten, make them bake over a soft Fire, this done, take them out and lay them upon a Plate, and do the rest in like like manner at three several times, in the same fashion, making your Cakes all of one largeness, the first being laid on a Plate, garnish him with green Citron cut in slices, Pistaches preserv'd, Apricocks in small pieces, with Sugar, sweet Water, and a Macaroni, and a little Cream, then lay on a second and Garnish him in like manner, then a third, and at last a fourth, and garnish him with the Seeds of a Pomgranat, and Cinamon of Florence, when you will serve it away.

An Omelette of Eggs served with Herbs.

Hash or mince some Sorrel, sweet Herbs, and Siboules, or young Onions, with half a dozen Yolks of hard Eggs, make this boil together in a Dish with some Butter, Pepper, Salt, and Nutmeg, after this make an Omelette after the ordinary way, and put your fearcings into it, then fold your Omelette squair-wise, and garnish it with the Liquor of Mushrooms, and juice juice of Lemons, white Pepper, and Sorril put into Butter and fryed and laid about the Dish.

Eggs and Cheese.

Beat a dozen of Eggs with half a pound of Milan Cheese grated, season it with Pepper, and bake it in a Paty-pan, with clarified Butter, over a soft Fire, and when it is baked serve it away without any thing about it.

Eggs put in Paste and fryed.

Make a Paste, or Batter, with Milk and Flower, seasoned with Pepper and Salt, then break your Eggs into an Iron Ladle, and fry them one by one, in a great deal of clarified Butter boiling over a quick Fire, and pour over each Egg about two small Spoon-full of this Paste or Batter, and so finish the frying of them, and when you would serve them, put over them a little juice of Lemon, and white Pepper.
Eggs on the Spanish Fashion.

Take a dozen and a half of Eggs, with some green Citron, three or four Makaroons, about two quarts of Cream, as it is scum'd from the Milk, season this with Salt, Sugar, and Cinnamon; let your Citron be cut small, and beat all these things together, and bake it in a Paty-pan with clarified Butter under it, cover up your Pan, and when this is baked cut it out into slices, and Ice, or glaze it over with Sugar and Orange-flower-water, and so serve it away handsomely dish'd.

English Eggs.

Break a dozen and a half of Eggs with a sort of Prunes called Brugnolles, green Citron cut in pieces, Corrants, and Makaroons beaten, and put into it about two quarts of Cream, mingle all this well together, season it with Salt, Cinnamon, and Sugar, this done put it into a Paty-pan with some clarified Butter, Butter, and let it bake upon a gentle Fire, and when your Eggs are enough glaze or ice them over with a little Sugar perfumed, and sweet Water, and so serve it away without any garnishing at all of any sort.

The whites of Eggs fryed.

Take the whites of Eggs, season them with Salt, Anniseeds, Cinnamon, and Sugar, bake this in a Paty-pan with clarified Butter; this done, when it is bak'd, cut it in long slices, and put it into a Batter made with white-Wine-flower, and Salt, and so fry it again in clarified Butter, and when it is so fryed, Garnish it with Sugar and sweet Water, and serve it at your discretion.

A Soupe doree, or gilded.

Take a two-peny Manchet, and cut him into long slices, and put the slices into a Bason with about a dozen of the Yolks of Eggs, some Milan Cheefe grated, Salt, and white Pepper, and when when they are well soak'd, fry them and make them fine and yellow, this done, dish them in the form of a Pyramid upon the rest of the Eggs and Cheese, then pass some Sorril leaves through the same frying, and with this Garnish your Soupe doree.

The Yolks of Eggs fryed.

These ought to be done as the whites were, yet notwithstanding you must put one part of the Yolks into your Batter, for to colour it which was not observed in the whites, and yet you must observe to serve it away in the same form as you did the whites.

Eggs a la Cream, or in Cream.

Fry or boil your Eggs in a Dish whole with Butter, and when they are enough separate them with a Knife, and put them upon a Plate, and put a little natural Cream over them, a little Salt, serve them hot and
For the Officers of the Month.

and garnish them with a little Seeds of a Pomgranat.

Eggs in manner of Tripes.

Cut your Eggs when they are hard either in quarters, or in round slices, fry them in a Frying-Pan with brown Butter, sweet Herbs, and Siboulettes, Pepper, Salt, and Nutmegs, then make a white Sauce for it, with the Yolks of raw Eggs, Vinegar, and a little milk, and when you are ready to serve them away; Garnish your Dish with fryed Bread and Parsly.

Eggs in thick Butter.

Cut some Siboulettes and sweet Herbs very small, and put them upon a Plate, or in a Dish with some sweet Butter, a little Vinegar, Salt, Nutmeg, and white Pepper, stir this together upon a little Fire to thicken it, and when it is thick put your Eggs into the Butter, and make them boil over a very soft Fire.
Eggs a la negligence.

Cut hard Eggs in the middle and give them a fry in a Frying-pan, with Butter only melted, some sweet Herbs, Siboulettes minced very small, some Salt, Pepper, Nutmegs, Capers, and Vinegar, and when they are enough, Garnish them as you did the other above-written.

Eggs a l'hypocras.

Cut the Yolks of hard Eggs in the middle, and dip them into a Batter that is indifferently clear, made with the Yolks of other raw Eggs, and Flower, with Salt, Cinnamon, and a little Wine, then fry them in clarified Butter, and make a Sauce with Claret-wine, Ginger, and Sugar, whole Cloves, and Cinnamon, make this boil till it be pretty thick, then dish up your Eggs in the form of a Pyramide, and Garnish your Dish with Florence Cinnamon, and the seeds of a Pomgranat.
Eggs in brown Butter.

Fry your Eggs one by one in brown Butter, and when they are fryed, then fry in the same Butter some sweet Herbs, and young Onions whole, with Salt, Nutmeg, three or four Anchovies, Capers, and slices of Lemon, Vinegar, and a little Broth, and when you are ready to serve it away, garnish your Dish with Sorrel leaves dip'd in Batter and fryed.

To make a Rocke of the Yolks of Eggs.

Make a Syrop of White-Wine and Sugar, put into it the Yolks of two dozen of Eggs, and make it boil till it comes away clean from the Pan, and when it is thus boil'd, put into it a little Orange-flower-water that is perfumed, and a little juice of Lemons, then strain it through a Hair-cloth, upon the same Plate that you intend to serve it upon; Garnish it with Pomgranat Seeds, and Lemon-Peel.
Peel preserved, or boiled in Sugar.

A Rocke of Eggs Red.

Take Eggs of Portugal, and beat them in a Mortar, with the Jelly of red Gooseberries, then pass them either through a Syrenge, or a Hair-cloth; serve them as dry as you can, and without Garnish.

A Rocke of green Eggs.

Take some young green Beech leaves, and beat them well, strain out the juice as thick as you can, boil it with Sugar to take away the crudity, or raw taste of it, and then mingle it with your Eggs, then strain them and serve them as you did the former or last Article.

Eggs of Portugal.

Melt your Sugar with Water of Orange flowers, and juice of Lemons, a little Salt, and the Yolks of Eggs in what quantity you please, make all this this boil softly over a gentle Fire, keeping it stirring with a Silver Spoon till it is enough, which is when it will come clear from the Pan, or Dish that it was done in, then let it stand till it be cold, and when it is through cold, dish it up in the form of a Pyramide, and Garnish it with green Citron, Cinnamon of Florence, Corinac of Orleans, and perfum'd Sugar, and serve it away.

Eggs of Milan.

Melt your Sugar with a little Water, and let it a little more than half boil, then take what number of Yolks of Eggs you please, and boil them one by one in this Sugar, till they are in some measure boil'd, then with a Silver Spoon take them out and lay them in a Dish as they be ready, or upon a Plate, and when you have enough boil'd, then put into the rest of your Sugar some peel'd Pistaches, Orange-flowers, and the juice of Lemons, make it boil, and pour it over your Eggs.

U 3 Other
Other Eggs.

Potch a dozen Eggs in a good deal of clarified Butter, season them with Pepper, Salt, Nutmeg, and Vinegar, and Garnish them with fryed Parsly.

Eggs potch'd in Sugar.

Put a pound of Sugar into a Dish or Pan, and put to it a glass of white Wine, and when your Syrop is above half made set it upon a soft Fire, and potch your Eggs one by one, and lay them in a dish, and when your Eggs be ready, in what number you please, put into your Sugar that remains some Piftaches peel'd, and the juice of a Lemon; let this boil, and this is Sauce and Garnish for your Eggs.

Eggs Mignon.

Take the Yolks of raw Eggs and boil them in Sugar and white Wine, and a stick of Sinnamon, till they will come clear from the Pan, then take them them up, and grate some green Citron over them, and lay your Eggs upon some Savoye Biskets very neatly, and put some red Goosberries, some Florence Cinamon, and sweet Water upon them and dish them up in the form of a Pyramid.

_Eggs and Verjuice._

Beat up a dozen and a half of Eggs, with some Verjuice Grapes, season them with Salt, and Nutmeg, fry them in a Pan or Dish, with some fresh Butter, and when they are ready garnish them with fryed Bread or fryed Batter.

_Eggs like threads._

Make a Syrop of Sugar only, and a glass of white Wine in a Silver Dish, or Basin, and when your Syrop is more than half boil'd and made, then beat the Yolks of two dozen of Eggs and strain them through a Scummer into your Sugar, and when the threads are well made and hard, then take them them up, and make them dry before a Fire, then musk them, and so serve them away.

Eggs threaded in a frying-pan.

Take the Yolks of twelve Eggs raw, and beat them in a dish with two Pots of Cream, a little Salt, and three Maccaroons; then take clarified Butter into a Pan and make it very hot, put your Eggs into a Tunnel, and so turn it into the Butter like threads through the small end of the Tunnel very handsomely, and so let them fry, and when you serve them away, put some Sugar and sweet Water over them.

Eggs with Milk.

Beat a dozen Yolks of Eggs with some Milk, and season it with Salt, Sugar, and Cinnamon, boil it in a Dish with a little brown Butter, and when it is enough, put more Sugar with sweet Water to it, and give it a little colour against the Fire with another dish behind it.
A Germaine made a la Francoise.

Make some deep holes as it were, or abbaisses, as they say, which hath been mentioned before, and fill them up with the Milt of Carpes in rangust a hash of Fish, Cray fish, Champignons, and Truffelles in rangust, and when they are all filled and furnished, then lay them one upon another and put to them a good Sauce made of Anchovies and Lemon, and serve it away hot.

This may be properly thought to be small deep Coffins made of Eggs and Flower like a Coffin for a Pye.

A red Germaine.

Take the Yolks of Eggs when they are raw, and beat them with the juice of Barberries, and then make little Coffins as before, and fill them with Pistaches, cut Cherries, and Oranges, and pass them through the Sugar, and when you have done, Garnish them with Pomgranat Seeds, juice of Lemons.
mons, and sweet Water, or else Ice them over; the passing these things through the Sugar, I understand to be in Sugar that boils like that for a preserve.

A red Nulle.

Beat your Eggs as before, with the juice of Barberries, Sugar, and sweet Water, one Makaroon, one Pot of Cream, with the juice of one Lemon, bake it in the same Plate that you intend to serve it upon, but see that it be not too dry; grate over it a little green Citron, and so serve it away.

To make the same green.

Take the juice of young Beech-leaves, with the Yolks of raw Eggs, two Pots of Cream, a quarter of a pound of Pistaches, beaten Sugar, and Salt with sweet Water, beat all this together and bake it, and when it is baked, Garnish it with Pomgranate-Seeds, and so serve it away.
For the Officers of the Mouth.

To make the same yellow:

Take the Yolks of Eggs, one Makaroon, one Pot of Cream, with Sugar, Orange-flower-water, a little Salt,
and green Citron grated, beat it together and bake it, and dispose of it as you did the former, and so serve them.

An Omelette fearced and cut:

Make a Fearce with Sorrel, Cham-pignons, Artichoke-bottoms, Parsley, Serfenill, or Charvil, Pepper, Salt, and Nutmeg, put to this a dozen of hard Yolks of Eggs, beat all this together, and put it into a Paty-pan with Butter, and bake it with a soft Fire, and when it is baked, cut it out into slices, and serve it with white-Pepper, the juice of Champignons, and the juice of Lemons.
An Omelette farseed with the Milts of Carps.

Cut the Milts of Carps in pieces, and stew them between two Dishes, with Champignons, Butter, Salt, Pepper, Nutmegs, and Capers, then make an Omelette with a dozen of Eggs, and put this into it trianglewise, and not pour it in at random, nor turned, and when you serve it away put the juice of Lemons over it.

To make an Omelette of Asparagus.

Take the green of Asparagus, cut as much off of them as is tender, about the bigness of Pease, and fry-casy them in a Frying-pan with brown Butter, sweet Herbs, young Onions, Pepper, Salt, and Nutmegs, then beat a dozen of Eggs, and mingle this with them and a Pot of Cream, then bake it in a Paty-pan with Butter, upon a soft Fire, and when you will serve it away squeeze some juice of Lemon over it.
An Omelette of Champignons.

Stove your Champignons between two Dishes, season them with Salt, Pepper, and Nutmeg, then make an Omelette with a dozen of Eggs, and when he is ready cover him over with your Champignons, and fold him up, triangle-wise, and serve him with the juice of Lemons over him.

An Omelette of Cream.

Beat a dozen of Eggs with three pots of Cream, season it with Salt, cut green Citron very small and mingle with it, then fry it with Butter but just melted in a Pan over a soft Fire, and when it is baked, put Sugar, and the juice of Lemons over it, and the seeds of a Pomgranat for Garnish.

An Omelette of Cheese.

When you beat your Eggs mingle with them some thin slices of Milan Cheese, Cheese, season it with Pepper, and Salt, bake your Omelette in a Paty-pan, with Butter over a soft Fire, serve it away very hot, with the juice of Lemons over it.

An Omelette of green Citron.

First boil your Citron in a Glass of White-wine, and when it is boil'd, pass it through a Strainer, and beat 2 Makaroons, and put them into a dozen Yolks of Eggs, with the Citron and Wine that you strained out, bake your Omelette in a Paty-pan over a Fire; when you serve it away, put over it some Orange-flower-Water, and perfumed Sugar.

An Omelette of Pista-ches.

Beat a quarter of a pound of Pista-ches, and a quarter of a pound of green Citron, then beat it with the Yolks of a dozen and a half of Eggs, two Pots of Cream; season this, and bake it in an oval Bason, with clarified Butter, over a soft Fire, and when when you serve it, put over it some Sugar, and juice of Lemons.

An Omelette of Orange-Flower-water.

Take Sugar, and Orange-flower-water, put this a boiling in a Dish, or Skillet, with a Pot or two of Cream, grate in some green Citron, then beat the Yolks of eight or ten Eggs with a little Salt put into it; keep it stirring like Eggs a Brout, serve it with Lozenges of Puffpaste about it.

An Omelette a la Celestine.

Break a dozen or twenty Eggs more or less, and season them with Salt, beat them together, and if you please add the crumbs of a White-loaf finely grated, some Parsley minced small, or Sugar in Powder, some bits of Butter, about as much as will fry the quantity of Eggs in a Pan, as you have broken, pretty fat, or else whilest you are a-beating of your Eggs thus seasoned, you may put a pound of good Oyl or Butter
Butter into a clean Frying-pan, and hold it over the Fire till it boils, then take it from the Fire, and pour it out and presently put in your Eggs without wiping of your Pan, and make them fry, stirring them only in the middle with a knife, or a flat stick at the end, so the end that your Eggs may take the easier, and when your Omelette is about half ready, turn him with a Plate, and make an end of frying of him, stirring often your Pan that he do not stick nor burn in the middle; when he is baked, dish him, and if you will, strew Sugar over him, or sprinkle some Rose-water, and a little Cinnamon over him for a Garnish; you may bake this sort of Omelette in a Paty-pan covered also very easily, if it have but a pretty deep brim.

An Omelette Cretonneuse.

Break and beat what quantity of Eggs you please, and season them with Salt, then take Butter and melt it in a Frying-pan, then cut the crumb of
of a white-loaf, in thin slices, and fry it a little first, then put in your Eggs and fry them, and when they are enough put your Omelette into a Dish, but so that the fryed Bread may shew it self uppermost; there are that will fry Parsly to garnish this Omelette, others will put a little Vinegar, about the quantity that one would put Rose-water upon a Tart.

To make an Omelette of Apples.

Pare three or four Apples and cut them in thin slices, and fry them in a Frying-pan, with a quarter of a pound, or better, of good fresh Butter, and some Sugar, and when your Apples are fryed, take eight or ten Eggs beaten, and seasoned with Salt, and put them into your Frying-pan to your Apples, make it fry and lift it up with the point of a Knife, about the middle of your Pan to let the raw Eggs run under, that the Eggs and Apples may be well incorporated the one into the other, but shake your Pan as oft as you can, that your Omelette do not not burn, and when he is baked put him into a Dish, and put Sugar over him.

Or thus,

Fry your Apples as is aforesaid, and when they are fryed, take them as dry as you can out of the Pan, and put them upon a Plate, then fry your Omelette a little, and then put in your Apples as handsomely as you can, and when the Omelette is fryed put Sugar over it.

Or thus,

When your Apples are fryed lay them upon a Plate, as is aforesaid, then fry your Omelette, and when he is fryed without putting the Apples into him, as he was a frying you may cover your Apples with your Omelette only, and sprinkle some Sugar over it, and so serve it.
To make Banquets for Feasts or Weddings, all the year long, and Seasons.

For the entry of the Table, one may in all Rencontres use these things following.

You may take the Liver of Veal, and set him, and Lard him with Bacon, and stick a few Cloves into him, and rope him about with the Caul of any Beast that is to be used, and rost him, and when he is rosted serve him with Venison Sauce, or else with green Verjuice.

You may in like manner dress the Liver of either Mutton, or Kid.

And also Hogs Liver, you may rost and serve it with Oranges, and White-powder over it without any other Sauce. As for Capons, Hens, Geese, and sucking Pigs Livers, you may boil them in good Broth with the Wings and the Feet, and serve them with a sharp Sauce, and garnish your dish with Parsly.
You may also serve for an entry of the Table, or enter-meis, the Tripe well boil'd and fry'd in Hogs Lard, a little Salt in the boiling, and some White powder over them when they are fryed.

For the Season after Easter.

The entry.

Good Bread, good Wine, small Alloyaux, or chops of Venison, Sal-lats, Oranges, Kids Heads boil'd and souft, or put into pickle doree, a sharp Sauce Vinaigrette.

Pottages.

Chickens with Herbs, or else stew-ed, either larded, or sheeted, pource of Gigorean, or knuckle of Veal an bouquet doree, or a white Lard made with Eggs first.
For the Officers of the Month.

At first Service.

Geese a la Malvoisie, with a Sauce of new Wine, or Wine and Sugar, wild Rabbets, with Oranges, Pullets, Faisande, or made and mortified like Pheasants, Patez of Pidgeons.

At second Service.

Hares or Leavrets with Sauce-Royal, Chickens in pickle, Kid with Verjuice, and Sorrel, and roast Pidgeons.

At the third Service.

Roast Venison with Sauce-Royal, fucking Pig, Sturgeon, and cold Venison Pye.

At the Issue of the Table.

Jelly perfumed with Amber, Papillons, or Lozenges with Puffpate of Apples, fresh Cheese and Cream, three Pies out of the Oven upon one Dish.
For the Summer Season.

At the entry.

Good Bread, good Wine, Apricocks, Damask Plums, the petits Pâtez, or little Pies of Venison hot, and Talmouses made with the brain of a Capon, minced and baked like a Cheesecake.

Pottages.

Boiled and larded Venison, Chickens in the stove, and Bifets or Wood-Pidgeons with Sprouts or young Colworts.

For the first Service.

Partridges with small Salt, hot Venison-pye, and young Rabbets also with small Salt.
For the Officers of the Mouth.

Second Service.

Hens with a Basting-Sauce, Levorets, or young Hares, and a Pye of Quails.

At the third Service.

Souffl or pickled Meat, with a Cordial Sauce, course Chickens in a sharp Sauce, and a Pye of Widgeons.

For the fourth Service.

Estoudeaux au mout, or Stares, that is, with a Sauce of new sweet Wine, or the juice of Grapes squeezed in your Hand: Oyson a la Malvoisse, or a Goose in sweet Sauce, and Pullets, Faisanetz, or mortified like a Pheasant.

For the fifth Service.

Pidgeons with sweet Sauce, Venison and cold Venison Pye.

For
A School of Instructions

For the sixth Service.

Pig, Pears, Peaches, and Sturgeon.

At the Issue de Table, or the last Service.

Three things baked upon a Dish with Jelly and Apples.

For the same Season.

At the first entry of the Table.

Good Bread, good Wine, Damask plums, or Damason, Andouillettes fearced Cows Udder, Tourterelles, Neats Tongue, and a Veal Pye.

Pottages.

Wood Pidgeons with Colworts, a Pottage de Courste, or Pumpkins boil'd, and larded Venison, fearced Cucumbers, a Pig, a hot Venison Pye.
For the Officers of the Month. 457

At first Service

Partridges, Leverets, green Geese farced, and a Quail Pye.

Second Service.

Rabbets, Stares, Cours, Chickens, Rose-Vinegar, roast Venison, a Pig, and a cold Sparrow Pye.

The Issue of the Table, or last Service.

Three sorts of Gelly in a Dish, three sorts of baked meets in another Dish, a Dish of raw Pears, a dish of stewed Pears, or poire a l’hypocras Almonds, and Cerneaux, that is Walnuts opened and blanched, Rose-water, fresh Cheese, and Cream in juncchee, made with wild Curds.

Another entry for the Summer.

Andouilles farced, Sheeps Tongues Salted, Cows Udders, a Dish made with the brain or breast of Chickens, Sheeps X
Sheeps Feet with a white Sauce, Milan Bacon, a Frycafy of Chickens, with Verjuice-Grapes, with the Giblets of your Chickens, the Intrails of a Kid fouf or pickled, the Head with a layer of Eggs, a Calves Liver rostted, a Carbonad, or broil’d Meat a la Thoulouse, a Veal Pye in a Pan, with a good Crust, a Frycafy, a Barbe-Robart made with Onions fryed and Mustard, a Frycafy of Chickens with Sauce Madam, Beef-palats pickled, serv’d with Goosberries, Siboules, Quails a Cameline, young Quails fearced, and a Frycafy of young Beans.

For the Season of Autumn.

At the entry or first Service.

Good Bread, good Wine, a Venison Pafty, or Pye, hard Cabbage, Peaches, Grapes, a Frycafy.
For the Officers of the Mouth. 459

Pottages.

A Capon boil'd with Pepper and Vinegar, and small Birds.

First Service.

Two Rabbets in a Dish, Tow Partridges, and Capers.

Second Service.

Pullets mortified like Pheasants, young Hearns, with a Sauce-Royal, and a Dish of Olives.

The third Service.

Wood-Cocks, or Snipes, Stares with Sage, Pidgions, and a Sallat of Lemons.

The fourth Service.

Venison, roast'd Ducks a la dodine, that is Water-Creases stewed, with white Pepper, and some Cream put
A School of Instructions
to them when they are stewed, and this is called a Dodine, pickled Cucumbers, and cold Venison Pye.

The Issue of the Table.

Gellies cleared into molds, Anglots of white Gelly, Apple Tarts, Cream Tarts, stewed Pears a Phypoeras, Apples stewed, and Pease baked.

For the same Season.

The entry.

Good Bread, good Wine, Peaches, Grapes, Damsons, or as they say prune Damas, which is Damusk Plums, a Frycafy, and a Veal Pye.

For Pottage.

A Pottage whitned with the Yolks of Eggs, and a Pye with fearced Meats.

First Service.

A Pig or Goose in quarters, 3 Pidgeons,
For the Officers of the Month.

Pawns, and Stares, in Mouv, or new Wine.

Second Service.

Two Rabbets, two Pullets, Faisandees, or mortified, and a Pidgeon Pye.

The Issue of the Table.

Tarts, Pears, Almonds, and Wall-nuts peeled.

For the time of Winter.

The Entry.

Sheeps Tongues stewed, a hash of Veal or Mutton, a Pepper-cake of Pears, Sausages, and Pyes with a hot Sauce, or layer.

For the Pottages.

Veal with Leeks, a piece of Veal with Broth, thick and whitened with the Yolks of Eggs, and Woodpidgeons, with Sprouts or hard Cabbage.
The Service.

Partridges with Oranges, Woodcocks, with a Sauce of Toastes, Capons, Conies, Pig, and a Duck-Pye.

At the Issue of the Table.

Cakes of Puff-paste, Pears, and Orange-gellies.

For Supper the same Day and Season.

The entry.

Good Bread, and good Wine, Venison cut in pieces, about three or four Fingers broad, and rosted with Sauce-Royal, a Talemouse, made with the brain of a Capon, that is minced and wrought up with Spice and Eggs, and baked like a Cheese-cake, a Sallat of Oranges, and a Venison Pye.
For the Officers of the Mouth.

For Pottage.

Partridges, with Colworts, or Cabbage, wild Boar, with Turnips, Frooto, and hoche pot of Pidgeons.

For the first Service.

Partridges with Oranges, Venison with Sauce-Royal, a Lark-Pye with a sweet Sauce, of Wine, Wood-Cocks, with a Sauce of Tofles, Herns, Hares, or Leverets, a Pye of Tourterelles, wild-boar, Venison, an Eel Pye, and a Peacock for an enter-mess.

Second Service.

Pidgeons, Chickens, Sucking-Fig, acold Pye, and Feet; with a Heil-Sauce.

Issue of the Table.

Gellies, white, red, and amber, three pieces of baked Meats upon a plate, a Cony-pye, Medlers, or O- X 4 peners peners fryed with sweet Sauce, Rose-water, Sugar-plums.

For the same Season.

The entry.

Good Bread, good Wine, Andouilles, Sausages, and a Pye, with a hot Sauce.

For the Pottage.

A Hare stewed with Turnips, and a Broth whitned with the Yolks of Eggs.

For the Service.

Half a pig, two Capons, two Conies, two Pullets mortified, and a Pye made of Ducks.

For the Issue of the Table.

An English Tart, baked Pears, and Makaroons.
At Supper the same day and season.

The entry.

A Sallat of Suckery, and Parsnips, with Wood-pidgeon, and Colworts, or Cabbage.

The Service.

Venison rosted, Partridges, Wood-cocks, Rabbets, a Pye of Larks, Pig, Capon, and Olives.

Issue de Table.

Pears a hypocrass, or with Wine, and Sugar, an Apple Tart, a Cake that is fine and moist, and a Talmouse, or Cheefe-cakes.
Another Supper for the same day and season.

At the entry.

A Sallat of Herbs, pieces of Venison rost, Damsons, or Damusk plums, a Sallat of Parsoepes.

Pottages.

Fromentee, Turnips, and wild Boar boil’d, larded Venison, Pidgeons with Cinamon, a Venison Pye warm, and a Pullet Faisandee, or mortish’d.

At first Service.

Leverets, Partridges, Pullets, with sharpe Sauce, rost Venison, a Pye of Sparrows, and Marrow in a kind of a Gelly.
Second Service.

Pullets Faisandee, or mortified, Stares, in the mouth, or new sweet Wine, Rabbets, fucking Pig, Pigeons, cold Venison Pye, and Gelly of an amber colour, and cut in squares, Diamond fashion.

The Issue of the Table.

Pears a l'hypocras, Almonds, and Wallnuts peeled, Pears with two Heads, Apples stewed, Roses of England, a Tart of Verjuice, a Cake of puff-paste, and white Gelly prick'd or cut like a Diamond, or stuck with other coloured Gelly.
The manner how to serve and dish up a Banquet, or Entertainment, either at a Wedding, or other occasions, as namely, To what concerns the ROSTISSEUR, or Ranger to rostie Meat, the Pastry-man and Master-Cook, so far as each of them are usually concern'd, in his own proper Place and Office.

THE ROSTISSEUR so far as he is properly concerned, is to furnish such Meats as of right belong to his charge both for rost and boil'd, at a Feast, or Banquet of consequence: and first, so near as we can guess, he ought to furnish 4 good young Turky-cocks, that are both great and fat, four young Hares, four good large fat fucking Pigs, four good fat Kids, four fat Geese, four wild Rabbets that that are well mortified, twelve Chickens ready truss'd, twelve wild Pidgeons, eight good Pullets, or Gelinottes, sixteen Quails that are fat and good, eight Estoudeaux to roste, and as many to boil, four Capons to boile, twelve Pidgeons to marenet, four Capons, twelve Pidgeons, and a great Hare to put into paste.
For the Officers of the Month.

The Pastry-mans charge.

And in regard of the Pastry-man, he should out of his Office, furnish four Hare Pyes, and as many Pyes made of fearced Meat, and four Dishes of Cheefe-cakes perfumed, four Marrow Tarts, as many Tarts of Herbs; four Turky Pyes, with the beaks gilded, four Dishes of Coeluches of Champagne, which are made like Bells in fashion, but of stuff like your Windsor Bouls, four cold Pyes, and twelve pieces of different things for a Dish.

But if it be for a Supper, he should furnish four large Tarts of Massepain, four of truffles Garnished, four Flenrons, or Custards perfumed, four Dishes.
Dishes of Makaroons, and as many of other small things.

For the Master-Cook.

The Master Cook that will undertake a Feast, must furnish himself with all sorts of Butchers Meat, as Mutton, Veal, Beef, Suit, and Marrow, for his boil'd meats; Lard, Bacon, the boleleng Saufages, Gammons of Bacon of Mayence, or Westphalia Neats Tongues dry, Salt Vinegar, and Verjuice, with Butter, and Eggs, Spice of all sorts, Herbs and Roots, Sallating Herbs of all sorts, according to the Season; Olives, Capers, and all other pickles, with Anchovies, or anything else, befitting the Season; Wax Candles of four in the pound, and Tallow Candles as many as are needful; a Table set and covered with good Linnen, the Chairs or Stools about it, Bottles, Glasses, and Cups, Plates and Riders for enter-melles, a Cistern to hold Water, a Pail to carry Water in, all sorts of Linnen from a Landress, for several uses;
uses; as also, Wood, Char-coal, Oranges, and Lemons, with Pots, and Pans, and all things necessary for the Kitchen, and Plates of all sorts from the Gold-smiths; six sorts of good eating Fruit, three sorts or more of Preserves, four sorts of Gellies, two Boxes of Sugar-plums, of half a pound apeece, Rose-water to wash Hands, and Tooth-pickers made of Rosemary.

If he undertakes to furnish the Meat also, he must have a good young Turky-cock, a Pottage the Broth white, with the Yolks of Eggs, a Hare Pye hot, a dish of bolenge Sausages in slices, a dish of Cherries, a Sal-lat of Capers, andouillets of Veal, a pye of balls of fearc'd meat, a pot-tage of Pidgeons, a dish of dryed Tongues cut in slices, a Frycafy a la Tortue, two dishes of Grapes in Gelly, a dish of Gomichons perfumed, or rail-ed Cheese-cakes, a Marrow Tart, a Capon with Cardes, a Rose of Le-mons, a Tart of Herbs in puff paste, a dish of green Geese in a stove, or stewed Gammon of Bacon sliced and dish-
A School of Instructions

Dished, a leveret hot with a Sauce-Royal, a fat pig whole, and a dish of Olives, a dish of Oranges, a young Kid whole, a Pidgeon pye, a Sallat of Pursley, a Goose pearced, a dish of Gelly, a dish of Radishes, a wild Rabbet well mortified, three Pullets with rose-Water, a Turkey pye, with the beak gilt, three Pidgeons in Vinegar, or Sharp Sauce, two Pullets, or Chickens, and four Quails.

For Enter-mess.

A dish of Cardes, a cold pye, a Coqueluche of Champagne, or Windsor Bouls, a dish of green Pease, and another cold pye, and a dish of Beans.

For the Issue, or last Service of the Table.

Two sorts of Gelly, three sorts of Fruit, six sorts of other Fruits, fresh Cheese and Cream, in jonchee, a dish of Pears cut, and with Sugar, twelve sorts of bak'd things upon a Plate, or for a dish.
For the Officers of the Mouth. 473

If this be for a Collation, you must have a large Tart of Maffepain, one of Truffles, garnished Fleurons, perfumed Bisket files, a Dish of Makaroons, two Boxes of Sugar-plums of half a pound apeece, Tooth-pickers made of Rose-mary, with Rose-water to wash hands. All this and much more a Master-Cook is to furnish in France, if he will undertake a Feast.
LE PASTISSIER

OR, THE

Royal-Pastry-man,

Shewing you how to make all manner of Pastry-work, in perfection, or perfectly.

As likewise, the composing of all manner of Pyes, Biskets, Makaroons, and Make-pans and the like.

And first of course Rye-Paste.

Take a bushel of Rye-flower, and make it into Paste, with warm Water, but so that it may be very stiff; this Paste is good to bake a Gammon of Bacon, or great Venison in, which you intend to carry far, therefore you must make it very strong, and at the least two Fingers, if not two Thumbs thick in the sides, and put in not above half a pound or a pound of Butter at the most, into this whole Bushel of Rye-paste; but you must remember, that all such Pastry-work that is to be long kept, must be very well baked, as well as well seasoned, and fill'd up with Butter.

How to make fine white Pastes for great bake Meats.

After your Table is very clean, pour down about half a bushel of fine Wheat Flower, and make a hole in the middle of your Flower, and put into it two pound of Butter; if it should be very hard, then work it well with your hand, to soften it before you put it into your Flower, then add three ounces of Salt finely bruised, and then Water to work it up; then work it with your hands, and as you work it, sprinkle some warm warm Water upon it now and then, and when your Paste is well wrought and smooth without dry bits in it, then use your Rowling-pin, strewing some Flower over and under it, to keep it from sticking, either to the Pin or Table; only you must take notice, that in the Winter you must make your Paste more fat than in the Summer, to make it work better, because in the Summer, the heat will make it moist, and therefore you need not use so much Butter; and so when it is very cold, you should cover up your Paste, when it is made, very warm, to the end that you may work it with the more ease.

Another sort of fine white Paste, for small bake Meats for Plates, or other things for to be eaten hot.

And to make this sort of Paste, you must put in three pound of Butter, and work this as you did the former; this Paste is good for all Plats, for Veal Pies, Pidgeons, Beattele Pyes, and other things that are to be eaten hot: but if you will will employ this Paste for any other sorts of bake Meats, you must roll, or work it in thickness, to the greatness of the thing you intend to bake in it, so that you must proportion also a thing to its own bigness.

To make Puff-paste.

For this you should take but half a quarter of very fine Wheat Flower, lay it upon a Table, make a hole in the middle of it, and put in a Glass of Water into it, and half an ounce of Salt finely bruised, work all this very well together, and sprinkle more Water on it when it is necessary, and when your Paste is well wrought, and smooth’d together, then make it into a Lump, and let it lye and rest for half an hour to rise, this done, roll it out to the thickness of a Finger thick, then take a pound of fresh Butter, the firmest you have, and make it the largeness of your Paste, and lay it on your Paste, and fold it over double, so that your Butter may be inclosed in the Paste, then roll it out again gain pretty thin; do this five or six times one after another, dusting it with flour, as often as you shall see occasion; as you fold over your Paste, that it may not stick to the Table: this Paste is very good to make Tarts with Pidgeons, or any thing else; and if you please you may make this Paste with less Butter, and then it will be call'd half Puff-paste.

To make Paste with Oyl, and how to cleanse it from its filth.

First make your Oyl boil till it has done making a noise, and by this time it will have lost all that is displeasing, or disagreeable to you, and when your Oyl is thus ready, then take about a quart of fine flour, and put into it three or four Yolks of Eggs, a little pinch of Salt and Oyl at your own discretion, and a little Water, work all this together, but so that your Paste may be a little hardish, because that the Paste made with Oyl hath not the same force as that which is made with Butter, you may use this Paste so made made, as you shall find occasion for it.

Past made of Sugar.

Take a quarter of a pound of Sugar beaten to a fine Powder, and pass it through a Sieve to the end that it may be more fine, then put it into a Mortar, and put to it the white of an Egg, and a Spoonful of the juice of Lemon, and stir this very softly, till the Sugar does begin to take and incorporate itself, with the rest; but if you put in any Bread to make it take, then put in a little Rose-water also, and when your Sugar is well knit together, then beat it with your Pestle till you have made a Paste of it, that it may be very firm, and when you have done this, you may use it to what, and in what manner you please, for any sort of baked things, as you have occasion for it.

Some make Paste also of half Sugar, and half Flower, which must be incorporated in the same manner as the other above-written was.
How to prepare all Spices for a Pastry-man's use, call'd sweet Spice.

You should take two ounces of Ginger, one ounce of Pepper beaten to powder, and mingled together, then add Cloves, Nutmegs, and Cinnamon beaten, of each one ounce, this quantity of these Spices may serve to put to a whole pound of pepper, either more or less, these being mingled together must be kept it in a Box, for use.

You may keep them each by himself, because some will use pepper only, but all together is more pleasant, and for your Spice and Salt you should put the weight of your Spice in Salt well bruised, and keep it in a dry place for your use.

To indore your bake Meats, to give them a colour.

You must beat Eggs, Yolks and Whites together, as if it were for an
For the Officers of the Month.

an Omelette, but if you would have the colour browner than ordinary, put but one white to three Yolks, but if you would have it pale, then put Water to the Yolks of Eggs, and mingle them together, as much in quantity as you have occasion to use.

But in Lent some will not use Eggs, then you may take the Eggs, or span of a Pike, or else colour the Bake-meats with Saffron.

To make Cream for the use of a Pastry-man.

Take about a quart of Milk, put it into a Skillet, set it over the Fire, and then take two Eggs, whites, and Yolks, and beat them with about half a litron, or three quarters of a pint of Flower, with some of your Milk, when it is a little warm, stir it together like Pap, then add two Eggs more, and when the other Milk over the Fire begins to boil, your Batter being well beaten together, pour it into your Milk by little and little, and make it boil over a gentle Fire, keeping is always stinting like Pap, put into it a little Salt at your own discretion, whilst it is a boiling, which will be a full quarter of an hour, and when it is boil'd add to it a quarter of a pound of good fresh Butter, keeping it still stirring, till the Butter be all melted, then put this into a Pan or Dish, and keep it for your use. The Pastry men in France make many Dishes of Bake meats with this kind of Cream.

Another sort of Cream more fine than the former.

Take a quarter of a pound of sweet Almonds, blanch them and beat them in a Mortar, with a quarter of a pound of Sugar, sprinkle in sometimes a little Rose-water, and when your Almonds are well beaten, then take about a Pint, or chopine of Milk, and the Yolks of four fresh Eggs beaten, and put into your Milk, then put in your Almonds thus beaten, and mingle this well together, then take three or four Spoonfuls of fine Flower, and
For the Officers of the Mouth.

and stir it with a little Milk, and when it is well wetted, put it into the rest of your pint of Milk, and make it boil together, and if it be too thick in the boiling, put in more Milk when it is half boil'd, and the Batter made with your Almonds, a little Salt, and keep it always stirring, so long as it boils, and when it is thus boil'd, put it into a Pan, and let it stand one day till it be stiff, and may be cut with a Knife like Paste or Gelly, then it will be fit for use.

How to make Cream for Lent.

You must take a chopine, or about a pint of Milk, and make it boil, then take half a literon, or about three quarters of a pint of fine Flower, and wet it well with Milk, make it like Batter, and put it into the boiling Milk, and stir it, then put in a quarter of a pound of sweet Almonds blanched and beaten, with a little Milk, a little Salt in the boiling with a quarter of a pound of good sweet Butter, keeping it always stirring, and and last of all put in a little Saffron in Powder steep'd in Milk, to give it a yellow colour, and when it is boil'd, it into a Pan and let it stand till you have an occasion to use it.

How to make your Icing with Sugar.

Put a quarter of a pound of Sugar into a Porringer beat to powder, and put to it the white of an Egg, and a little Rose-Water, this very well together, till it be like a thick Syrup, and this will serve to Ice your Mally pans, Tarts, or any other baked things, as Cakes and the like, but it must be laid on very handsomely.

The method how to make and season a Pye to be eaten cold.

Cold Venison Pye, or a Pye of Buck

First let your Venison mortify, and then lard it with great Lard, season it with pepper, Cloves, and Nutmegs beaten, and Salt, make your paste as is already said, with a little Salt and a little Butter, then make a Coffin and season your Meat, and lay it into the Coffin, with a good quantity of Lard beaten, and laid under the Meat, some Bay-leaves and Lard over it, then cover it up, and indore it with the Yolks of Eggs, and let it bake three or four hours; but remember to make a vent to it, for fear it should break, and be sure to stop it, when it comes out of the Oven again, and to let it upon a Peal to cool.

The Goat Pye,

Is made in the same manner as the Buck is, only it need not bake so very long, nor be seasoned so very high.

The wild Boar Pye.

Lard your Meat with great Lard, and season it with Pepper, Salt, Cloves, and Nutmegs, make a Coffin of course Paste, and put your Meat into it with some Bay-leaves, and cover it up, and let it bake three or four four hours, and be sure to stop the vent when it is baked.

A Beef Pye.

Take the Buttock of Beef, and cut it like a Fillet of Veal, beat it well with the back of a Cleaver, and lard it well with great Lard, and season him the same as the former was, and bake him in like manner also, but do not forget to stop up the vent when the Pye is baked.

A Pye of a Leg of Veal cut in thick round pieces.

Lard your Veal so cut with something smaller Lard, season it with Salt, Pepper, Cloves and Nutmegs beaten, and Bay-leaves, make your Paste with Butter, Salt and Water, let this Pye Bake three hours, but give him vent when he goes into the Oven, and be sure to stop the vent when it comes out.
A Pye made of a Member of Mutton.

Lard your Mutton with such Lard as you larded your Veal with, when you have broken the Bones of it, and season it with Pepper, Salt, Nutmegs, and Cloves, Bay-leaves, and put it into the same manner of Paste as you did your Veal, cut away the handle of your Mutton, be it Leg or Shoulder, bake it as you do your Veal, and when it is baked put in a Clove of Garlike, or a Charlot at the vent and stop it up close.

A Pye of Hare or Leveret.

In the Opinion of many, Hares, or Leverets are the best baked with their Bones, although some again will bone them, but if with their bones, let the bones be broken, and the Hare well larded with an indifferent small Lard, season him with Pepper, Salt, Cloves, Nutmegs, and Bay-leaves, put him into either white or brown Paste, but do not starve him for want of Lard beaten.
ten to lay under, and Lard over him, and when he is baked, stop him and let him in a dry place. But if you bone your Hare, leave the Flesh as whole as you can; lard the Flesh with great Lard, and season it the same, and put it into the same sort of Paste, and bake it in the same manner, as you did the other.

Rabbit Pye.

Lard your Rabbets with indifferent Lard, but not too big; season them as you do Hares, and put them into good Paste, but you need not let them bake two hours together.

Partridge Pye.

Lard your Partridges with Lard that is not too big nor too little; season them with Pepper, Salt, Nutmegs, some few whole Cloves, and put them into Paste, either raised or else in Sheets flat, and four square, make a kind of Funnel to it, and let it bake two or three hours, according to the heat.
heat of the Oven, then keep it in a dry place.

But if you will bone your Partridges, you must split them down the back, and take out the breast Bone, and the Crupper, or back and Rump bones, but leave the Thighs whole; Lard and season them as the above-written is, and so likewise in such Paste, and give these the same baking as you do those with the bones in them.

_A Turky Pye._

Break his Bones, and beat him flat on the Breast, and lard him with great Lard, and put him into Paste, either brown or white, when he is well seasoned with Salt, Pepper, Nutmegs, whole Cloves, and Bay-leaves, and good store of beaten Lard under him, and slices of Lard over him, and when he is baked, put in a Clove, of Garlike, or echarlotte, into the Funnel, and stop it up close.

But if you will Bone your Turky, open him along the back, and take Y 5 out.
out all the Bones, only reserve the Rump whole, like the rest of the Flesh, and Lard your Turky with indifferent lard, that is to say, not too big nor too little, then season and bake him exactly like the other.

A Duck Pye.

Truss and fit your Ducks for a Pye, then give them 3 or four cuts along the Breast, lard them with reasonable small Lard, and season them with Pepper, Salt, Nutmegs, Cinnamon, and Cloves beaten, Bay-leaves, and put them into Paste, not too fine nor too coarse, either raised or Flat, made four square, with Lard beaten and laid under and barded over them, cover them up and indore the Crust with the Yolks of Eggs as you do the others, and let your Pye bake two small hours.

To bake a Goose.

You must make this Pye exactly as you do the Duck Pye, only you should put
For the Officers of the Mouth. 491

Put more Salt, and feed him better with Lard, and let him bake longer, and when he is baked put in at the Funnel a Clove of Garlick, and stop up the Funnel.

The Ostarde, or Bustard Pye.

Beat the Stomach flat, and break the bones of the Thighs, and the like, season him with Pepper, Salt, and whole Cloves, grated Nutmeg, and Bay-leaves, lard him very thick, and do no spare for good store of beaten Lard, for he is very dry, put him into good Paste, and indore him and let him bake three or four hours.

To bake a Westphalia Gammon, or one of Mayence, in a Pye to be cold.

Cut of the handle of your Gammon and soak him well in warm Water, and make him very clean, take off the Skin, and if he be very fat, take off some of the Fat, or other wise take some other Lard to lard him with, pretty big big Lard, in the lean season your Lard, and when he is larded make your Paste with warm Water, and a little melted Butter very stiff, then raise a Pye to the largeness and depth of your Gammon, let the sides of your Pye be the thickness of your thumb; this done put in your Gammon, and season him with Pepper, Cloves, Nutmegs and Cinnamon beaten, sweet Herbs minced very small, Bay-leaves, and a pound and half of Butter, that is very fresh, or else some Beef-Marrow minced small, fill up the empty place within side of your Pye with pieces of Paste, that the sides do not sink in, and so cover up your Pye with the same Paste, and indore him with Eggs, and let him bake eight hours, put Paper about and a top of your Pye, that he may not colour too fast, some will put in some slices of green Lemon, and some will not.

A Pye made of a wild Boar's Head.

First singe him very well, and make him very clean, cut away his Chops, and
and other Bones, and get away all the Hair as near as you can about the Head; without disfiguring of the Head, take out the Brains, and Lard the Flesh with great Lard, then raise a Pye for him, as you did for the Gammon, and season him with the same seasoning, and forget not Salt and some long Pepper beaten very small, then let him bake as the other did, but when he is about half-baked put in a little Claret-Wine at the Funnel, and put him into the Oven to bake again, and if you do let him stand two hours longer than the other did, he will take it very well, and not be too much.

A Pheasant Pye.

Draw your Pheasants and make them very clean, lard them with great Lard, season them with Pepper, Salt, Nutmeg, Cloves, and Bay-leaves, put them into a raised Coffin, as whole as you can, and so cover up your Pye with the same Paste, and indore it, and let it bake two hours, or thereabouts.
A Carlee Pye.

Take this Fowl and draw them and make them very clean; Lard them, but not with too great lard, put them into a raised Coffin, seasoned as the Pheasants were, and let them bake about two hours and a half, when he is baked put in a echalotte.

To make a Teal Pye.

A Pye of Teal is to be made the same as a Duck Pye is, and the baking and seasoning is all one.

A Pye of Ducks boned.

Cleave your Ducks down the backs, and take out all the bones, except the Thighs, cut them along the Breast, and lard them with Lard, that is not too big, season them also with Pepper, Salt, Cloves, Nutmegs, and Bay-leaves, and good Lard beat and laid over and under them, in a raised Coffin if you please, or else in a Flat and four square Pye, indore it and let it bake two hours. The Teal Pye, when the Teals are boned, is is made and seasoned in the same manner, as the boned Ducks are but only it need not so much baking.

The Author says he had forgotten to put the Wood-pidgeons amongst the cold Pyes, and therefore you do not find a Wood-pidgeon pye in all his cold bake Meats; so ends the Method of seasoning all cold Pyes, and now let us proceed to the hot.

Now follows the method of making and seasoning all manner of Flesh Pyes hot.

And first for a Pye of Quails.

Draw your Quails and make your Paste for them with fine Flower, Water, and Butter, with some Yolks of Eggs, and a little Salt, then raise a Pye of this Paste of about four Fingers high, lay a little fearced Meat in the bottom of your Pye, made with Veal, a little Lard, Marrow, or Beef Suet, seasoned with Salt, and Nutmeg, then range your Quails a top of it round round, and put into them some Champignonns, Veal, Sweet-breads, Cockscombs, Truffles, beaten Lard, a piece of fresh Butter, then cover it up with the same paste, indore it and let it bake an hour and half, and when you serve it take away the seasoning that you can come at, and put in some juice of Lemon, and Pistaches cut small, and so serve it away.

A Pidgeon Pye to eat hot.

The Pidgeon Pye is made the same as the Quail Pye is, only no fearst Meat need to be put under your Pidgeons, but Sweet-breads, Champignonns, Combes, and Marrow, with Lard, either beaten or melted, and when your Pye is baked, put in some Gravy of Veal, and juice of Lemon, and Pistaches.

A Pye made with Chickens and Cream.

When your Pye is raised, put in your Chickens cut in pieces, seasoned with Pepper, Salt, Nutmeg, meg, and Cinamon, Lard beaten, or melted, a packet of seasoning, or rather a little bundle of sweet Herbs, cover your Pye with the same Paste, and when he is baked, put in your Cream and let him stand a little in the Oven, and when you serve him away, take out your packet of seasoning and put in some liquor of Champignons, and so serve it away.

A Lark Pye.

Raise a Pye of about three or four Fingers high of fine paste, take out the Guts and Gizzards of your Larks, and range them in order in the bottom of your Pye, then some Champignons, fat Capons, Livers, Truffles, and Lard beaten, season them with Pepper, Salt, and Nutmeg, and a Packet; and cover it up with the same Paste, indore it and so let it bake, and when your Pye is baked, make a kind of lecar or thick Sauce, with Lard fryed, and Flower fryed in it, then add to it a little Gravy made with Mutton, or Veal, and the juice of Lemon.
Bone your Hare, and mince the Flesh with the Flesh of a Leg of Mutton, and a third part of Lard, or fat of Bacon, season it with Pepper, Salt, Nutmeg, Cloves, Cinnamon, sweet Herbs, and Sibouilles minced together, and mixed with your Meat, then make your Paste with Flower, Butter and Water, your Paste made, make a sheet of Paste, and lay on your Meat so minced in the form of a Hare in a thin Bed, and lay reasonable small Lard upon it, then lay on more of your minced Meat, till it all be laid on, and the one takes to the other, this done, lay on some Bay-leaves, and lard it over with Lard, cover it up with the same Paste, and indore it, then let it bake three or four hours, and when it is baked put in the juice of Lemons, and a echalotte, or else his juice.
To bake a Hare on the English fashion.

Take a Hare and break all his Bones, and lard him with Lard that is not very big, then lay him on a Sheet of puff-paste, made in form of an Ovale, or else like a Hare; season him with Pepper, Salt, and beaten Cinnamon, Lard melted or beaten; then boil it in a Pot, green Citron, Dabs, and Prunes cut in thin slices, with a little White-wine, Sugar, Cinnamon, Pepper, and Lemon, and when your Pye is baked cut him up, and put in the Composition that was boil’d in the pot, cover up your Pye, and Ice him over with Icing made of Sugar, and Orange flower-water, and set him into the Oven again, and when you do serve him away, squeeze in the juice of a Lemon, and a few Pomgranat-Seeds, and so serve it.
Another Hare Pye in bruised Paste.

Break the Bones of a Hare, and lard him with the ordinary Lard, and put him into Paste roll'd out and bruised, season it with Pepper, Salt, Nutmeg, and Cinnamon, beaten Lard, and Bay-leaves, and when this is done, indore him, and let him bake about two hours, then take a echalotte, and rub him well in the bottom of a Dish, and squeeze in the juice of a Lemon into the Dish, and put it into your Pye in serving it away.

A Pye made of a Capon boned.

Open your Capon down the Back, and take away all the bones, but the Rump and Thighs, and fearce him with a fearcing made with a piece of Veal-marrow, or Beef-Suet, and Lard, seasoned with pepper, Salt, Nutmeg, Cloves, sweet Herbs, and Sibouilles, Campignons, Truffles, and Sweet-Breads; and when your Capon is fearced, put him into a raised Pye, and
For the Officers of the Mouth.

and cover him up with the same Paste, indore him, and let him bake two hours, then put in some juice of Lemon, when you serve him away.

A Pye made of a Breast of Veal.

Cut a Breast of Veal into pieces, and in each piece put two or three bits of Lard, then put it into a raised Coffin made of fine Paste, season it with Lard or Bacon, Pepper, Salt, Cloves, Nutmegs, Sweet Herbs, Bay-leaves, Champignons, and Artichokes-bottoms, then cover him up with the same Paste, and let your Pye bake two hours, then make a white Sauce with Yolks of Eggs and juice of Lemon, and put it into your Pye, a little before you serve him away.

A Pye made with Veal upon the Italian fashion.

Make guandiveau or fearc’d Meat with a Fillet of Veal and Marrow, or Beef Suet, season them with Pepper, Salt, Nutmegs, Cloves, Sweet Herbs, and Si-Sibouilles, and put this meat into a raised Coffin of fine Paste, made Triangle-wise, then garnish or fill up your Pye with Sweet-breads, Marrow, Lard beaten, and green Citron, Dabes, Currants, Pistachios, Cinamon, and Sugar, then roll out four bards or long slices of puff-paste of about five Thumbs long, and one and a half broad, and put one of these upon each Triangle and one in the middle upon the Meat, indore them, and let the Pye bake an hour and halfe, then put juice of Lemon, and Sugar into your Pye, and to serve him away.

Another of the same on the French fashion.

Make your Guaudiveau, or Fearced Meats, as is aforesaid, with a Fillet of Veal Marrow, or Beef Suet, a little Lard, or Bacon, season it with Pepper, Salt, Nutmeg, Cloves, Sweet- Herbs, and Sibouilles, and raise your Pye as above, and garnish, or fill it with your Meat prepared, and add to it Veal, Sweet-breads, Artichoke-
For the Officers of the Mouth. bottoms, Morilles, Andouilletts, and bard it over with a puff-paste, or balls of fearc'd Meat, as you did that on the Italian fashion, and put to it a white Sauce before you serve it.

A Pye called a Pye of a Plabe, or Paste d’assiette.

Mince a good piece of a Fillet of Veal, with Beef-Suet very small, and season it with Pepper, Salt, and Nutmeg, sweet Herbs, and Sibouilles, then raise a Pye of your Paste made with fine Flower, Butter, and Eggs, but make it so that it be very stiff, then put in your Gaundiveau, or minced meat, and fill it up with Veal, Sweet-breads, Morille, Truffles, Champignons, Beef-marrow, and Lard beaten, then make a kind of a little Dome, or as one may say, another little Pye in the middle of your Pye, and fill it with the same Meat, and cover it with the same Paste, but let it be very thin, and let him bake one hour and put in some good Gravy, and juice of Lemon, in the serving it away.
A Paste Royal, or a Pye Royal.

Take a Leg or two of Mutton, or other joints, cut away all the Skin, and cut your Meat into round slices, then raise a Pye (of about the thickness of one's Thumb, and half a Foot high) of Paste made with hot Water, and a little Butter, and Salt, then put your Mutton into the Pye, and you may if you please put in also Partridges, and Wood-Pigeons boned with your Mutton, and put in with it some Lard, or Bacon beaten, Champignons, Truffles, Morilles, large Cocks combs, all seasoned with Pepper, Salt, Nutmeg, Cloves, Cinnamon beaten, and sweet Herbs, cover up your Pye with the same then Paste, indore it, and put a Paper round it with packthread, and let it stand in the Oven to bake eight or ten hours, because this kind of Pye is to be eaten with Silver Spoons, and when your Pye is baked, rub the bottom of a Dish, with a echalotte, and put some juice of Lemon to it, and put put it into your Pye in serving it away.

A Pye of a Fillet of Veal.

Cut a Fillet of Veal into three pieces, and lard it with Indifferent small Lard, and lay it upon a Sheet of fine Paste brisee, and garnish it with Champignons, Artichoke-bottoms, Morilles, Truffles, Lard, or Bacon beaten, and seasoned with Pepper, Salt, Nutmegs, Cloves, Bay-leaves, Sweet Herbs, and Siboules, cover it up, and let it bake two hours and a half, then put in some juice of Lemons, and so serve it away.

A Wood-Cock Pye.

Raise a Pye of about four Fingers height, and then make your Cocks ready, that is, draw them and lard them with ordinary small Lard, season them with Pepper, Salt, Nutmeg, and Siboules, or echalotte, a little Lemon, or Orange, and a Bay-leaf, garnish your Pye with Champignons, Truffles.
Truffles, and Lard, or Bacon beaten, then cover him up with the same Paste, and indore him, and let him bake two hours, and when he is baked put in a little juice of Orange or Lemon, or else Verjuice of Grapes, and so serve it.

A Rabbet Pye.

Lard your Rabbets, and put them upon an abbaisse, or sheet of Paste, seasoned with Pepper, Salt, Nutmegs, and Cloves, Lard beaten, Bay-leaves, and a echalotte; indore him after he is covered up, and let him bake two hours, and put in some juice of Orange, or Lemon, in serving him away.

A Duck Pye.

Beat your Ducks flat upon the Breast, and lard them with indifferent small Lard, and put them into a raised Pye; garnish or fill up your Pye with Champignon, Truffles, and Capon Livers, seasoned with a slice or or two of Lemon, Pepper, Salt, Nutmeg, Cloves, and Lard beaten with Bay-leaves, let this bake two hours, then put in the juice of either echalotte, or Garlick, with the juice of Orange or Lemon, in the serving it away.

A Portugal Pye.

Mince the Brain of a Turky with Beef marrow, season it with Pepper, Salt, and Cinamon, and garnish it with Dabes, green Citron, Pistashes, Cub, Prunes, and Currants, Lard beaten, put this into Puff-paste made into the form of two Dolphins, laid upon one sheet of Paper, so that they may touch or join at the two backs; and when you have made these two forms, and put in your Meat, cover them up with the same Paste, and fashion it, as aforesaid, and when they are almost baked, Ice them over with Icing made with Sugar, and Orange-flower-water, then make a kind of a sweet sharp Sauce, with Sugar, and juice of Lemons, and put it into your Pye in serving serving him away, and garnish him with your Pomegranat Seeds.

A German Pye, or on their fashion.

Cut a Lamb into four quarters, and lard it not with too very big Lard, and put it into a raised Pye, season ed with Pepper, and Salt, Nutmegs, and Cloves, Bay-leaves, sweet Herbs, and Siboules, and Lard beaten or melted, let not your Paste be too fine, but as they say half fine, and cover him up with the same Paste, and let him bake three hours, this done, take Oysters and fry them in the Pan with melted Lard and Flower brune or burnt with Capers, and Olives, fioned juice of Lemons, and Cham-pignons, with the gravy of Mutton, and Oyster liquor, put all this into your Pye a quarter of an hour before you serve it away.

A Pye of Hens boned.

Take away the Breast bones of your Hens, truss and set them in warm Water,
Water, and lard them with Lard that is not too big, seasoned with Pepper, Salt, and Nutmegs; raise your Pâste in form of an ovale, put in your Hens, and garnish, or fill them up with Champignons, Artichoke-bottoms, and fat Livers, sweet Herbs, and Lard melted or beaten, cover your Pye with the same Pâste, and let him bake three hours, and when he is baked put in some juice of Lemons, and echalotte into your Pye, at your serving it away.

A fine Pye.

Take of the fearced Meat, made with the Flesh of a Fillet of Veal, Beefsuet, and Lard, season it with Pepper and Salt, Nutmegs, sweet Herbs, and Siboutes, lay this upon Puff-pâste, cut four-corner-wise, add to it Artichoke-bottoms, Champignons, Combs, Sweet-breads, and Truffles, cover it up with the same Pâste, indore it, and let it bake one hour, and when it is baked put in a white Sauce, with the juice of Lemons, or Verjuice made of Grapes, in serving it away.
A School of Instructions

The method how to make Tarts of Flesh.

And first of young Pidgeons.

First scald your Pidgeons in hot Water, then make your Paste with Butter, Salt, and White-wine, and let it lye and rest one hour, and then work it up with a piece of fresh Butter more, that it may be very fine, then roll out a sheet, and lay it into a Paty-pan, and lay your Pidgeons in with their Breast uppermost, and put to it Sweet-breads of Veal, Champignons, and Truffles, in form of a Beatilly Pye, season it with Pepper, Nutmeg, Cloves, and a little Salt, with a small bundle of seasoning, which you must take out in serving it away,
Some Lard beaten or melted, and Beefmarrow cut in pieces, and when it is baked put in some juice of Lemons, or Verjuice made of Grapes, and Pistaches, in serving it away.
For the Officers of the Mouth. 511

To make a Tart of Chickens.

You must do it the same way, only you should cut your Chickens in pieces, or beat them flat, putting them into the same Paste, and use the same seasoning, and cover them with the same Paste, as you did your Tart of Pidgeons, and when they are baked put in juice of Lemons, in serving it away.

A Tart of Quailes.

Make your Quailes very clean, and truss them, put them in good Paste, season them with Pepper, Salt, Nutmeg, and a little bundle of seasoning, and garnish or fill them with Sweet-Bread, Champignons, Truffles, cut in pieces, Lard beaten, or melted, and Beef-Marrow. Cover this Tart up, and let him bake two hours, then put in the juice of Lemons, when you serve him away.
A Tart of Larks.

Draw out all that is in your Larks very clean, and lay them on a sheet of Past in a Paty-pan, in very good order, then add to them fat Livers, Marrow, Mushrooms, Lard beaten, a Packet of seasoning, and season it besides with Pepper, Salt, and Nutmeg, cover it up with the same Paste, and let it bake an hour and half, and when it is baked, put in a Sauce made with Flower, fryed in Lard, Capers, and Verjuice, or juice of Lemons, and put this into your Tart in severing it away.

A Tart of mixed Meat of Veal.

Mince either the Brain of a Capon, or else the Flesh of a Fillet of Veal, with as much Marrow, or Beef-Suet, as you have Flesh; season it with Pepper, Salt, and Nutmeg, sweet Herbs, and Simoules minced very small, then make your Paste with Flower and Water, or else, Verjuice, or white-wine.
and a little Butter, so that it may be pretty soft, then roll it over flat with your rolling-pin, and put about half the quantity of your Paste in Butter well worked, with your hand upon your Paste, and fold over your Paste upon your Butter, so that the Butter be hid, then roll it out, and fold it over again five or six times, very equally, without letting the Butter be seen, then let your Paste lye an hour or two where it was made, then take the one half of it and make a sheet for your Paty-pan with it, then put in your minced Meat, and add to it Champignons, Truffles, Cockscombs, Veal, Sweet-breads, Artichoke-bottoms, and Lard beaten or melted, then cover it with the same Paste, indore it and let it bake an hour, then when it is baked put in some juice of Lemon, and Gravy, with Pistaches blanched, or peeled, and so serve it away.
A Tart of Capons Livers.

Take good fat Livers, and give them a set in hot Water, then sheet your Paty-pan with fine paste, and lay in the Livers in order, and add to them Champignons cut in small bits, sweet Herbs, Siboules, and Lard beaten, season it with Pepper, Salt, Nutmeg, and Cloves, a slice of green Lemon, and cover it with some of the same Paste,indore it, and let it bake an hour and half, then beat one of the Livers that was set, and fry him in the Frying-pan, with a little melted Lard and Flower, then pass it through a Strainer, with Gravy and juice of Lemon, but first rub the bottom of your Dish with a echalotte, wherein you intend to strain out your Sauce, then put it into your Tart, and to serve it away.

A Tart of Beattles.

First scald and peel your Beattles in hot Water, then lay them in order in
For the Officers of the Mouth.

in a Paty-pan sheeted with fine Paste, then put to them Champignons, Truffles, Sweet-breads of Veal, and Beef-marrow, season them with a Packet or bundle, and Pepper, Salt, and Nutmeg, Lard beaten, or melted, and cover it up with the same Paste, and indore it, and let it bake two hours upon a soft Fire, and when you serve it away, put in some Gravy and juice of Lemons.

A Tart of the Kidney of a Loin of Veal.

Mince the Kidney of a Loin of Veal with a little Bacon, Siboules, and Sweet Herbs, season it with Pepper, Salt, Nutmeg, and Cinnamon, and add to it Champignons, Veal Sweet-breads, and bake it an hour and half, but let your Paste be fine, and cover your Tart with the same Paste, and when it is baked, put in the juice of Lemons, and Mutton Gravy.
A Tart of the brain of a Capon.

Mince the Brain of a Capon Raw, with as much Marrow, or Beef-Suet, as the Flesh contains to, sheet your Pa-ty-pan with fine Paste, and add to your Meat, Champignons, Truffles, Cockscombs, Sweet-breads of Veal, and season all this with a packet or bundle, Salt, Pepper, Nutmeg, and a little Lard beaten or melted, cover it with the same Paste, and indore it, let it bake an hour and half, then put into it, when it is baked, Pistaches, the juice of Lemons, and good gravy in serving it away.

A Tart of small Rabbets.

Cut your Rabbets in small pieces and fry them in a Frying pan, with some Lard, and Flower fryed, Sweet Herbs, Siboules, season it with Pepp-er, Salt, Nutmegs, and a little Broth, and so let it stand till it be cold, then sheet your Paty-pan with fine Paste, and put in your Meat with some some Morilles, Truffles, and Lard beaten, cover it up with the same Paste, and let it bake an hour and half, but when it is half baked, put to it the Sauce that was made in the Frying-pan, and so let it bake, then put the juice of Oranges to it, when you serve it away.
For the Officers of the Mouth. 517

* A Bacon Tart. *

Take and melt a pound of fat Bacon in a Pan, and strain it through a Strainer, with the bottoms of two or three Artichokes, two Yolks of Eggs raw, and two Mackaroons, season this with Pepper, and Salt, and beaten Cinnamon and Sugar, then put this upon a little Fire, and keep it stirring with a Spoon, then put it into a Pateway-pan upon a very thin sheet of Paste, that is very fine, and let it bake about half an hour, or less, without Covering it with Paste at all, when it is baked, Ice it over with Icing made with a little Orange flower-water and Sugar finely searched, and when you have Iced it over let a little Fire over it.
it that your Icing may be white all over it.

A Marrow Tart.

Mince and melt your Marrow and strain it out, then add to it the Yolks of three Eggs raw, two Makaroons, green Citron grated, season this with Salt, Cinamon, and Sugar, then set it upon a little Fire, and keep it stirring with a Spoon, then cover your Pate-pan with a Sheet of fine Paste very thin, put in your Marrow, but do not cover it with Paste, but let it bake half an hour, and then serve it away with sweet Water, Sugar, and the juice of Lemons over it.

A Tart of Pistaches.

Blanch and beat a quarter of a pound of Pistaches, with half a quarter of a pound of green Citron, mingle it with a Pot of Cream, a little Lard or Butter, season it with Cinamon, Sugar, Musk, and Amber, then set it upon a soft Fire, and stir it with a
For the Officers of the Mouth.

a Spoon all together, then sheet your Pan with fine Paste, very thin, put in your stuff, but do not cover it with Paste, let it bake half an hour or less, then put Sugar over it, with Orange-flower-Water, and the Seeds of a Pomgranat, at the serving it away.

A Tart of Sheep's Tongues.

Let your Tongues be first boil'd and blanched, then cut in slices and laid in a Paty-pan, upon a sheet of fine Paste, add to this green Citron, Currants, and Dabes, season it with Salt, Cinamon, Sugar, and two Makaroons beaten in a Morter, Lard melted and some slices of Lemon, then cover it up with the same Paste, and indore it with the Yolks of Eggs and Milk, and so let it bake an hour and then put a little perfumed Water, juice of Lemon, Musk, and Sugar to it when it is baked, and so serve it away.
A Tart of Neats Tongues.

Take a powdered Neats Tongue when he is boil'd and blanched, cut him in slices, and lay him handsomely in a Paty-pan, sheeted with fine Paste roll'd out very thin, season it with Pepper, Cinnamon, Sugar, some melted Lard, cover it up with some of the same Paste, let it bake about half an hour, or a little more, when it is about half baked, put in half a Glass of Claret-wine, and so let it bake till it is enough, then put some Sugar, and juice of Lemon to it, with the Seeds of a Pomgranat, and serve it away.

A Tart of Westphalia Bacon.

Cut out thin slices of a boil'd Gammon of Bacon, and place it in a Paty-pan sheeted with fine Paste, put to it some sweet Herbs minced small, season it with Pepper, Cinnamon, Nutmeg, and good sweet Butter, and a Bay leaf, and cover it up with the same.
For the Officers of the Mouth. 521

Same Paste, and indore it, and let it bake half an hour, and when it is baked put to it the juice of Lemons, Gravy, and echalottes, and serve it away.

A Tart of Veal Sweet breads.

First set your Sweet-breads in boiling Water, then cut them in pieces, and put them into a Paty-pan sheeted with fine Paste, put to them some Champignons that are very small, Truffles, a bunch of seasoning, and Pepper, Salt, Nutmeg, a slice or two of Lemon, and some Lard beaten, then cover it up with the same Paste, indore it, and let it bake an hour or more, and when it is baked put to it some Gravy of Mutton, or Veal, juice of Lemons, and some Pistaches, in serving it away.

A Tart of Wood-pidgeons, or other Pidgeons.

First draw them and beat them flat when they are truss’d up, then put them them into fine Paste, with some Lard beaten, Artichoke-bottoms, sweet Herbs, Siboules a Bay-leaf, Beef-marrow, three or four Champignons, a piece of fresh Butter, and cover it up with some of the same Paste, indore it, and let it bake three hours, then put in some juice of Lemon, in serving it away.

A Tart of Gammon minced.

Take a piece of a Westphalia Gammon well boil'd, and mince it, and lay it in a Paty-pan sheeted with fine Paste, seasoned with Cinamon, Sugar, white Pepper, green Citron, and a little Lard beaten, cover it up, and indore it, and let it bake half an hour, and when it is baked put in the juice of Lemons, and Sugar, in serving it away.

A Marrow Tart in Puff-paste.

Take Beef-marrow and cut it in pieces, and season it with Salt, Pepper, Cinamon, green Citron grated grated, two Makaroons, two Yolks of Eggs raw, and Sugar, mingle this together, and lay it into a Paty-pan sheeted with Puff-paste, and cover it up with some of the same Paste, indore it and let it bake an hour and half, and when you serve it put to it some perfumed Water, Sugar, and the Seeds of Pomgranats.
For the Officers of the Mouth.

A Tart of Goose-giblets.

Cut them in pieces, and let them after they are clean scalded, and put them into a Paty-pan sheeted with fine Paste, season them with Pepper, Salt, Cloves, Sweet Herbs, Siboules, and Nutmeg, a Bay-leaf, and some Lard, beaten, Artichoke-bottoms, Champignons, and Morilles, cover them up with the same Paste, and let them bake two hours, then put a litte white Sauce to them, when you serve them away.

A Tart of the Kidney of a Loin of Veal.

Mince the Kidney of a Loin of Veal that that is rosted, and season it with Pepper, Salt, Cinamon, Sugar, green Citron, Dabe, a little Butter, two Makaroons, put this into a Paty-pan sheeted with fine Paste, and cover it up with the same Paste, and let it take three quarters of an hour, then put to it the juice of Lemons, Sugar, and Orange-flower-water, when you serve it away.

The manner how to make all sorts of Pyes of Fish to eat hot.

A Turbot Pye.

This Pye is for the most part made in a round, or ovale Basin; you must first cleanse and wash your Turbot very well, then sheet your Pan or Basin with good fine Paste, then cut off the end of the Tale, and the Nose, and season it with Pepper, Salt, Nutmeg, and Cloves, Siboules, and Sweet Herbs, add to this some Champignons, or Morilles, but first cut of the Fins, then cover him up, and bake him
For the Officers of the Mouth.

him, and when he is about half baked put in a Glass of White-wine, and so let him bake again, and when he is well baked put in a little juice of Lemon or Verjuice made of Grapes: For want of a Pan for the purpose you may raise a Paste for it which will do as well.

The Barbue, or Dabes Pye is made and seasoned in the same manner, only it will not take so long baking.

A Pye of a Fish like a Pearch.

You must make the Fish very clean, and keep the Livers, then either sheet a Pan, or raise a Pye of good fine Paste, season your Fish with Pepper, Salt, and Nutmegs, Champignons, and the Meat of Lobsters, or Cray-Fish-claws, Siboules, and sweet Herbs, then cover it up with the same Paste, then fry the Livers in brown Butter, and beat them in a Mortar, and strain them out with half a Glass of White-wine, put this into your Pye when he is half baked, and the juice of Lemon, when you serve the Pye away.
A Sole Pye.

After you have scaled and washed your Soles, put them into fine Paste, either in a Paty-pan, or else a raised Pye, season your Soles with Pepper, Salt, Nutmegs, sweet Herbs, and Siboules minced very small, put to them Champignons, Truffles, Morilles, and fresh Oysters, cover up your Pye with the same Paste, and when he is baked put in the juice of Lemons, and so serve it away; but when you make Fish Pyes, be sure that you are not wanting of Butter.

A Carp Pye.

Scale and wash your Carpe, and lard him with Eels, season him with Pepper, Salt, Cloves, and Nutmegs, sweet Herbs, Siboules minced very small, Oysters, and a Bay-leaf, put your Carpe into a Coffin raised fit for him of fine Paste, put in good Butter, and cover him up, and do not bake him too hot, and when your Carp is half half baked, put in a Glass of White-wine, and so let him bake till he is enough.

A Carp Pye fearced.

Scale and wash your Carp, and open him in the back, take out the Garbage and fle your Carp, but so that the skin must be as if it were whole, mince the Flesh very small, and season it with Pepper, Salt, Nutmeg, sweet Herbs, Siboules, and Butter, then fill the Skin of your Carp with this fearcing, as if it were whole, put to it Champignons, the Milt of your Carp, Oysters, Artichoke-bottoms boil'd, and two Cloves, all this arranged, and laid in such manner as if the Carp and this were all whole, and but one Carp, so filled up, then cover your Pye, and bake him like the other, and when he is baked put in the juice of Lemons, in serving it away.
A Pike baked in a Pye.

First scale your Pike and wash him, then bone him, but so that the Head and the Tail may hold together by the Skin, then make a scarce of the Flesh, and season it with Pepper, Salt, Nutmegs, Sweet Herbs, and Siboules, work this up with Butter, and撵re the Skin and bring it together as if it were whole with the Milts of Carpes, Champignons, Oysters, and Capers, and without the Skin put Artichoke-bottoms, Champignons, Oysters, and Capers, this must be put into a raised Coffin of a fit length and bigness of your Pike, made of fine Paste, cover it with the same Paste and bake him but gently, and put in the juice of Lemons when you serve it away.

An Eel Pye.

Flea your Eels and cut them out in pieces, and raise a Pye with fine Paste, either round, or ovale, season your Eels...
For the Officers of the Month.

Eels with Pepper, Salt, Cloves, Nutmegs, and sweet Herbs, and Siboules, Butter, Capers, a Bay-leaf, a few fine chippings of Bread, and when the Pye is about half baked, put in a Glass of White-wine, and the juice of a Lemon in serving it away.

A Lamprey Eel Pye.

You must first take away the Blood, and preserve it in a Vessel, then cleanse your Lampreys in warm Water, put him into fine Paste, raised either in oval or round, season it with Pepper, Salt, Nutmeg, and Cloves, Trufles, Morilles, Sweethearts, Siboules minced small, Butter, fine chippings of Bread, cover him up with the same Paste, and when the Pye is about half baked, put in the Blood you saved, with a Glass of Claret, and so let him bake softly till he is enough.
A Lamprey Pye on the English fashion.

This Pye is made almost like the other, only the seasoning is not the same, but you must save the Blood and clean your Eels in warm Water, put him into a Pan sheeted with fine Paste, and season him with Pepper, Salt, Cinamon beaten, Sugar, green Citron, Dabes, Currants, and some fine chippings of Bread, cover him up, and when he is half baked put in the Blood with half a Glass of White Wine, let him bake softly, then turn him over; and put the juice of Lemon into it when you serve it away.

ATrout Pye.

You may Lard your Trouts with Eels, after you have scaled and scorched them, put them into a fine Paste, either raised, or in a Pan, season them with Pepper, Salt, Cloves, Nutmegs, Bay-leaves, and put Butter to them, Champignons, Artichoke-bottom,
For the Officers of the Mouth. toms, Siboules, sweet Hearbs minced small, Capers, Oysters, the Milts of Carps, and the juice of Lemons in serving it away.

A Pye of Ton, or Conger Eel.

This sort of Pye ought to be raised, and your Fish cut in pieces, you may also enrich it with Oysters, Artichoke-bottoms, sweet-Hearbs, Siboules, and Butter, seasoned with Pepper, Salt, Nutmegs, a Bay-leaf, and two slices of Lemon, and cover it up, and let it bake softly, add to it when its baked some juice of Lemon, or a little Vinegar, in serving it away.

A Pye of Barbots, or Barbilles.

Empty this Fish and wash him clean, and put him into a raised Pye made of fine Paste, with his Livers and the Milt of a Carp, the Tail of a Lobster, or Cray-Fish, Champignons, Artichoke-bottoms, season this with Pepper, Salt, Nutmeg, sweet Hearbs, A a 2 S—Siboules, and you may put Oysters in also if you please, with the juice of Lemon when you serve it.

A Pye of Grameaux.

This Fish is not without some small Scales, therefore you must make him very clean, and cut away the Fins, and put him into a raised Pye, season it with Pepper, Salt, Nutmeg, Sweet Hearbs, Siboules, Cloves, Oysters, Artichoke-bottoms, Champignons, with juice of Orange, or Lemon, in serving it away.

A Pye of Bremmes.

Scale and wash your Fish, and scorch it, and put them into a raised Pye, season them with Pepper, Salt, Nutmeg, Sweet Hearbs, Cloves, Bay-leaves, Champignons, Oysters, Capers, and Butter, cover it with the same Paste, and put in some juice of Lemon, in serving it away.
For the Officers of the Mouth.

A Pye made in the nature of fearced Meat of Veal, called Gaudiveau.

Mince the Flesh of either Carp, Tench, or Eel, and season your Meat as is written elsewhere, only you may put in the Milts of Carps, and Morilles, do not cover him at all, only put in a white Sauce when your Pye is baked, and juice of Lemon when you serve it away.

Petits in Puff-paste made of Fish.

Mince the Flesh of Eels with the Milt of a Carp, and Champignons half boil'd, season this with Pepper, Salt, Nutmeg, sweet Herbs, Siboules, then melt half the quantity of good Butter, as you have of minced Meat, work this together, then make good Puff-paste, and sheet little Pans and put this meat into them, and when they are baked put to each a little juice of Lemon, or Verjuice made of Grapes, when you serve them away.
A fine Pye.

Take Puff-paste and roll it out, and cut it square, or oval, and lay upon it the Flesh of either Carps or Eels minced very small, Artichoke bottoms, Champignons, Carps Milts, Cray-Fishes Feet, or Lobsters claws, with good Butter, season it with Pepper, Salt, Nutmeg, Cloves, and An-donillets made of Fish, put into it when it is baked a white Sauce, or Lear, or fearc'd Meat roll'd out, with the juice of Lemons when you serve it away.

A Pye made with the Flesh of a Pike.

Mince the white Flesh of a Pike, Champignons, and let it boil till it be half boil'd in a Pot or Dish, with a Glass of White-wine, and a piece of Butter, season it with Pepper, Salt, Nutmeg, sweet Hearbs, Siboules, Champignons cut in pieces, the Milts of Carps, and Artichoke-bottoms, put this into a raised Pye, and cover it with with the same Paste, and put in a little juice of Lemon when you serve it away.

A Macreusfe, or a Pye of a Fowl which is eaten for Fish.

Beat your Macreusfe well with the back of a great Knife, and make ordinary Paste, then raise a Pye that is very thick in the sides, then lay in your Fish in the bottom, when they are washed and dryed, season them with Pepper, Salt, Nutmeg, Champignons, Artichoke-bottoms, Siboules, sweet Hearbs, and good store of Butter, let this Pye bake about six hours, put the juice of Lemon to it in serving it away.

You may also bone this Fish, and make staving with some of the same Flesh, and put it into a raised Pye, let the seasoning be the same that the other is, but let your Paste be finer, and let your Fish bake well.
The manner of making Tarts of Fish.

A Tart of Carps Milts.

You must first sheet a Pasty-pan with fine Paste then cut your Milts of Carps and lay them in handsomely, seasoned with Pepper, Salt, Nutmeg, Sweet Herbs, Siboules, Champignons, Mornies, Butter; cover it, and indore it, and let it bake softly, and put in the juice of a Lemon into it when you serve it away.

A Tart of Carps Tongues.

This Tart is made like that of the Milts, but into this you may put in the Eyes and Brains of the Carps, also the Truffles are likewise very good, and the juice of a Lemon in serving it away.
A Tart of Pikes Livers.

This Tart may be made also like that with the Milts of a Carp, only it must be made with brown Butter, and an Anchovy melted and put in with some Capers, and the juice of Lemons when you serve it away.

A Tart of Garnulles, or Frogs.

First your Frogs must be flied, and the hinder quarters must be cut off in the Loins, like a hanch of Venison, then set them in scalding Water, and they will be as white as Milk, and when you have ordered them according to your mind, then put them into a Paty-pan sheeted with fine Paste, season them with Pepper, Salt, Cloves, and Nutmeg, three or four Champignons minced small, sweet Hearbs, and Siboules, two Anchovies with good Butter, and when it is baked, put to it the juice of Lemons, when you serve it away.
A Tart of Cray-Fish.

First you must boil your Cray-Fish with a Glass of White-wine, after they are very clean washed, then peel the Feet and the Tails, and beat the rest in a Mortar, and strain it out with a little of the Broth of your Cray-Fish, and melted Butter, then lay all handsomely in a Paty-pan sheeted, and add some Champignons cut small, and season all this with Pepper, Salt, Nutmeg, and Siboules, cover it up, and indore it, and so let it bake, and when it is baked, put in the juice of Lemon when you serve it.

A Tart of Eels.

First flea your Eels and bone them, and when you have done this, mince the Flesh with sweet Herbs, Siboules, Pepper, Salt, Nutmeg, Champignons, and add melted Butter to them, and then put them into a Paty-pan sheeted with fine Paste, and when your Tart is baked put into it the Yolks of three three Eggs, and the juice of a Lemon, all raw, so serve it.

A Tart of Eels cut in pieces.

First flea your Eels and cut them in short pieces, take out the Bone, and lay the Eels into a Paty-pan sheeted with fine Paste, season these as you did the other, cover them up, and when they are baked put a white Sauce to them, and so serve the Tart away like the other.

A Tart of hash’d Fish.

Mince the Flesh of a Carp with sweet Hearbs, season it with Pepper, Salt, Nutmeg, and Cloves, put Butter, and Champignons, and Artichoke-bottoms, and Carps Milts, and Capers; put all this into a Paty-pan in pieces, sheeted with fine Paste, cover it up and bake it, and when it is baked serve it away brown, with the juice of a Lemon over it.
A Tart of Salmon in slices.

Take a slice of Salmon, and give him a boil or two in a Dish with a Glass of Claret, this done, break it in pieces, and put it into a Paty-pan sheeted with fine Paste, and put to it Dabes, green Citron, Sugar, and Cinamon, a little Pepper and Salt, with Butter, and when it is half baked, put in the Wine wherein the Salmon was boil’d, and so let him bake covered up, but before you serve it you must Ice over your Cover, and add the juice of a Lemon in serving it away.

A Tart of Salmon minced.

Mince some slices of Salmon with Champignons, sweet Hearbs and Si-boules, and season it with Pepper, Salt, Nutmeg, put it into fine Paste, and put to it Champignons cut in pieces, and Artichoke-bottoms and Butter, so bake it, and when you will
For the Officers of the Month. 541
will serve it away put in some Pistaches cut, and juice of Lemons.

A Tart of Smelts.

Mince some Champignons, or Morilles, and lay them in the bottom of a Pate-pan sheeted with fine Paste, and then lay your Smelts upon it in order, with Butter, season them with Pepper, Salt, Nutmeg, sweet Herbs, and Siboules, put in also some Champignons cut in little pieces, cover it up, and when it is baked, put in the juice of Oranges, or Lemons, in serving it away.

A Tart of Oysters.

The Tart of Oysters is made in the same manner as the other is, only you must put in a little raspins of Bread, some Capers, and a slice or two of Lemon, cover it up, and bake it, and put in some juice of Lemon or Orange in serving it away.
A Tart of Soles.

First skin your Soles, and then take out the bones, cut away the Heads, and fry them in Fat, and make your Tart with the flesh of your Soles in pieces, with Champignons, and Trufles, seasoned with Pepper, Salt, Nutmeg, Siboules, and sweet Hearbs minced small, cover it up, and let it bake, and put in the juice of Lemons into it when you serve it away, and the fryed Heads of the Soles about it.

A Tart made of Muffels.

After your Muffels are well cleaned put them in a Pan to boil a little, that you may take them out of their Shells, but in their own Liquor only, then put them into a Paty pan sheeted with fine Paste, and put in with them some Champignons in pieces, and Morilles, season them with Pepper, Salt, Nutmeg, some Thyme and Butter, and cover up your Tart, and when when he is half baked put in their own Liquor that came from them, with a little rasplings of Bread, and when they are baked put in the juice of Lemon, and serve it away.

A Tart of small Pidgeons for Lent.

You must beat some Flesh of Pike, and some Flesh of an Eel, with the Milt of a Carp, after it is well minced, season it with Salt and Nutmeg, then take some of this minced Meat, and make it into little Pidgeons upon a sheet of Paper, work it with your hands dipt in melted Butter, for fear you should paste your Hands with it, make a vent to them with the end of a wooden larding Pin, and put in a piece of a Pike, or other Fish Livers into the vents of each Pidgeon, then scald or set them in a pan full of hot Water: And of this Meat you may make Cockscombs, or any thing else as you please, lay this into a Paty-pan sheeted with fine Paste, in very good order, season it with Pepper, Salt, Nutmeg, a little bundle stuck with with Cloves, (which is to be taken out when the Tart is baked) Cham-pignons, Morilles, Carps Milts, good Butter, a little White-wine, and so cover it up, and when it is baked put in the juice of Lemons, and serve it a way.

A Beatilly Tart of Fish.

Of the same Meat as you made your last Tart of, you may make Cockscombs, Sweet-breads of Veal, by beating and mingling of two or three Carps Milts amongst this Meat, and then you may fashion a Calves Sweet-bread in a Spoon, and set or scald him in the hot Butter, and the Combs in like manner, this done put them into Paste, and season it as the last was done above, so bake and serve this in like manner.

A Tart of a Scared Trench.

Take your Trench and scald him, split him down the back, take out the Flesh, but so that the Head and Tail may may hold to the Skin, and make a fearcing of the Flesh, with Champignons, Milts of Carps, season it with Pepper, Salt, Nutmeg, Cloves, Siboules, and sweet Hearbs, work this together, and so fearce your Tench, and lay him in fine Paste, with Oysters, Champignons, Carps Milts, Pikes Livers, and good Butter, and half a glass of White-wine put into it when he is half baked, so let him bake covered up, and when you serve him away put in the juice of a Lemon.

A Tart of Pearches.

Give your Pearches a boil or two in a Glass of White-wine, that you may take off the Scales, put them into fine Paste, and season them with Pepper, Salt, and Nutmeg, a bundle stuck with Cloves; put in with your Pearches some Carps Milts, Champignons, Morilles, Oysters, and Butter, cover it up, and bake it, and put in the juice of a Lemon in serving it away.
A Tart made with a Tortoise.

First cut off his Head and Feet, and boil him in White-wine and Water, till he will quit his Shell, then take out the Gall only, for all the rest is good, then put him into fine Passe, and season him with Pepper, Salt, Nutmeg, sweet Hearbs, and Siboules minced, put in also Champignons, Morilles, the Feet and Tails of Cray-fish peeled, Capers, raspings of Bread, and a little Butter, cover up your Tart, and bake him, and put the juice of Lemon to him when you serve him away.

A Tart of Cray-fish minced.

After your Cray-fish are boil'd and peeled, mince them, and put them into fine Passe, with the Milt of a Carp, Champignons, Pikes Liver, Morilles, and Trufles, seasoned with Pepper, Salt, Nutmeg, a bundle stuck with Cloves, and some good Butter, cut your Champignons in pieces, co-
For the Officers of the Mouth.

Ver up your Tart and bake him, and put the juice of Orange or Lemon to him when you serve him away.

How to make many sorts of Tarts, which may serve for Enter-messes, either for Fish or Flesh days, at all seasons.

A Cream Tart.

Blanch a quarter of a pound of sweet Almonds, beat them very well, and strain them with about a quart of Milk, make it boil over a soft Fire, keeping it always stirring till it be half boil'd, then put in the Yolks of four Eggs, and keep it still stirring, and when it begins to grow thick, put in a quarter of a pound of Sugar, a little Salt, and put it into a Dish with a good piece of Butter, stir it still together till the Butter be melted, then sheet a Paty-pan with fine Pate, very thin with a small brim, then put in your Cream not being too thick, and grate in some green Citron, indore it, it, and when it is baked put over it Sugar, Musk, and Orange-flower-water, and so serve it away.

_A Cream Tart of Natural Cream._

Boil about a quart of Milk, a third part away, then put in the Yolks of six Eggs, a little Salt, Sugar, and a piece of fresh Butter, and stir it all together, and let it cool, then make your Tart and serve it in the same manner as you did the above-written.

_ATart of Pistaches._

First scald your Pistaches and peel them, then beat them in a Morter, put to them a little Salt, Cinnamon, Sugar, Butter, and green Citron, then sheet a Party-pan, with fine Paste very thin, and a small brim, and so make your Tart of this, and when it is a little more than half baked, Ice it over with Icing made with Sugar, and Orange-flower-water.
For the Officers of the Mouth. 549

A Melon Tart in slices.

First slice out your Melon in very thin slices, and place them very handsomely in a Paty-pan sheeted with fine Paste, season this with Sugar, Cinnamon, and a little Salt, and cover it with long slices of Paste cut very narrow, or with a plain cover, which you please, indore it, and when it is baked put Sugar and Orange-flower-water over it, and so serve it away.

A Melon Tart, the Melon first made into Marmelade.

First boil your Melon with a Glass of White-wine, till all the Liquor be boil’d away, then beat it in a Morter with two Makaroons, Sugar, and Cinnamon, then put it into a Paty-pan sheeted with fine paste, but do not cover it at all, and when it is baked, put Sugar and Orange-flower-water over it, or else Ice it over, and so serve it away.
A Sharp Sweet Tart.

Take a Glass of Verjuice, or juice of Lemons, and boil it with a quarter of a pound of Sugar, till it be half boil'd away, then put to it a pot of Cream, the Yolks of six Eggs a piece of Butter, Orange-flowers, and green Citron rasped, and beaten Cinnamon, put this into a Pan sheeted with fine Paste, but do not cover it.

An Almond Tart.

First blanch, and then beat your Almonds with half the quantity of Sugar that there are Almonds, a little Butter, Salt, Cinnamon beaten, green Citron rasped, Orange-flowers musked, put this into a Paty-pan sheeted with fine Paste, and when is is baked Ice it over, and serve it away.

A Champignon Tart.

Sheet a Paty-pan with fine Paste, and put in Champignons, cut in pieces, pieces, season them with sweet Herbs, Siboules, Salt, Nutmeg, Flower fryed, and Butter, cover this up with the same Paste, and indore it, and when it is baked put in some juice of Lemons in serving it away.
For the Officers of the Mouth.

The Tart of Morilles is made and served in the same manner as that of Champignons is.

A Tart of Mouserons.

After your Mouserons are well peeled, put them into a Party-pan sheeted with fine Paste, as you did the Champignons, but do not cut neither your sweet Hearbs, nor Siboules, but make a bundle; and serve it away as you did that of Champignons.

A Trufe Tart.

Peel your Trufles well, and cut them in slices, either round or long, and put them in Paste, as you did the Mouserons, with fryed Flower, let the seasoning be the same, and when they are baked, put gravy and the juice of A Tart of Artichoke bottoms.

When your Artichokes are well boil'd, white and peeled, put them into fine Paste, with sweet Herbs, Siboules minced small, season them with Pepper, Salt, Nutmeg, and Butter, cover them up, and when the Tart is ready baked put in a white Sauce, or Lear, with a little Vinegar, when you serve it away.

A Tart of Cream of Artichokes.

When your Artichoke-bottoms are well boil'd, beat them in a Morter, and strain them through a Collendar, with Butter, or melted Lard, the Yolks of two Eggs raw, season this with Salt, and Nutmeg, and put it into fine Paste, but let it be very thin, and bake it, and serve it away with Gravy and juice of Lemons.
A Tart of Artichoke Cream with Sugar.

Make your Cream as above, and put to it one Makaroon, a little Cream, season it with Salt, Cinamon, Sugar, and green Citron, put this into a Pasty-pan sheeted with fine Paste, but do not cover it all, and when it is baked Ice it over with Sugar, and Orange-flowers-water, and so serve it away.

A Tart of Beet Roots.

First roast your Beet Roots in the Embers, and peel them very well, cut them in pieces, and give them a boil with a Glass of white-wine, and then beat them in a Morter, with a piece of Sugar, a little Salt, and Cinamon, and make them like Marmalade, and put them into fine Paste with some green Citron rasped, and a piece of Butter, and do not cover it, but when it is baked serve it away with perfumed Sugar, and Orange-flowers.
A School of Instructions

A Butter Tart Barded.

First you must beat a little green Citron, a little Salt, Cinamon, two Macaroons, a piece of Butter that is fresh and good, with the Yolks of four raw Eggs, beat all this well together, and put it into a Pan sheeted with fine Paste, and bard it over with long slices of Paste, and when it is baked, put to it some Orange-flowers, and Sugar in serving it away.

Another sort of Butter Tart.

Take a piece of fresh Butter, Sugar, Orange-flowers, two Macaroons, four Yolks of Eggs, half a Cup full of preserved Verjuice, or the Syrop, and make it like Lemon Cream, and put it into a Pan sheeted with fine Paste very thin, put Orange-flowers and Sugar to it in serving it away, but do not cover it.
A Tart of the Cream of Apples.

Pare your Pippins, and put them aboiling with Whitewine, when you have put away the Coars, and when the Apples are well boil'd beat them in a Morter with Sugar, Cinamon, and Orange-flowers, and strain it through a Strainer, and put it into a Pan sheeted, and so bake it, and when it is baked, Ice it over, and so serve it away.

Another Apple Tart.

Pare and cut your Apples in slices, and boil them with White-wine, green Citron, Cinamon, and Sugar, then put it into a Pan sheeted very thin with fine Paste, and cover it over with a thin cover of Puff-paste, indore it, and let it bake, and when is baked serve it away with Orange-flowers and Sugar.
A Tart of the juice of Sorrel.

Beat Sorrel in a Mortar, and strain out the juice, put it into a Dish with three Makaroons, a piece of fresh Butter, the Yolks of three raw Eggs, green Citron grated, Orange-flowers, and Sugar, and Cinamon, stir all this together over a Fire, and make a Cream of it, and put it into a Pan sheeted very thin with fine paste, and when it is baked serve it away with Sugar over it.

A Spinnage Tart.

Take the Leaves of Spinnage and put them into an Earthen Pot, with half a Glass of White-wine, and then let them stand a withering till all the Whitewine be consumed, then take your Spinnage and mince it small, and season it with Sugar, Cinamon, green Citron, a little Salt, two Makaroons, and a piece of Butter, put this into fine Paste in a Paty-pan, and bard it over, and when it is baked put to
For the Officers of the Mouth. 557

to it the juice of Lemons, and so serve it away.

A Tart of green Sprouts.

Take your green Sprouts of green Colworts, give them a set or scald in hot Water, and lay them a draining, then mince them small, and put them into fine Paste, and garnish them with the Hearbs, season them with Lard melted, Beef-marrow, an Onion stuk with Cloves and Pepper, and some thin slices of interlarded Bacon between the laying of the Hearbs, cover it up with the same Paste, and when it is baked put in some Gravy, and the juice of Lemon, and serve it away.

A Tart of Asparagus.

Cut off the green ends that are very tender, to fill your Tart, first scald them in hot Water, and put them into fine Paste, season them with sweet Hearbs, Siboules, Pepper, Salt, and Nutmegs, put to it some melted Lard, Lard, or Butter, cover it up with the same paste, and when it is baked put to it either Cream, or Gravy of Mutton, with the Yolks of Eggs.

A Tart of Eggs.

Take Orange-flowers, a piece of Sugar, a little Butter, and the Yolks of Eggs, beat this together like Cream, and put it into a Paty-pan sheeted with fine Paste very thin, grate some green Citron over it, and bake it; and when it is ready Ice it over, and so serve it away.

A Tart of green Citron.

Beat in a Morter green Citron, with two Makaroons, a little Cinnamon, half a Cup or Glass of the Syrup of Verjuice Grapes, put this into fine Paste, and bake it, and put to it Orange-flowers when you serve it away.
For the Officers of the Mouth.

A Tart of Claret-Wine.

Take half a Glass of Claret-wine, as much juice of red Gooseberries, two Makaroons, the Yolks of four Eggs, and make this like Cream, season this with Sugar, green Citron grated, Cinnamon, a little Salt, and a small piece of Butter, and put it into fine Paste, and put to it Orange-flowers when you serve it away.

A Tart of Oranges.

Pare your Oranges, and cut them in slices, take out the seeds, and put them into fine paste very thin, with Sugar, two Makaroons beaten, Cinnamon, some Pistaches cut, cover it up with the same Paste, and when it is baked serve it away with perfumed Sugar.

A Tart of green Lemons.

This Tart is to be made like the other, but do not put in any Pistaches, but but instead thereof put in some green Citron grated, and when it is baked serve it away in like manner, as is above-said.

_A Tart of the Seeds of Pomgranats._

Put these Seeds into fine Paste very thin, with Sugar, green Citron grated, cover it up, and when it is baked put Orange-flowers to it, and so serve it away.

_A Tart of Marmelade of Apricocks._

First put your Apricocks a preserving with Sugar and Cinnamon, and make Marmelade of them, then put the Marmelade into Almond Paste rolled out very thin, and when you serve it away put Orange-flowers to it, or else Ice it over, and so serve it away.

_A Tart of Pistaches cut._

Cut your Pistaches and green Citron, and put it into fine Paste, and
For the Officers of the Month. 561
season it with Sugar and Cinnamon, with the juice of Lemons, cover it up, and when you serve it away, put Orange-flowers to it.

A green Cream Tart.

Beat Pistaches in a Morter, and strain them through a Strainer with the juice of Beet Leaves, add to this two Makaroons, the Yolks of two Eggs, a little Salt, and a piece of fresh Butter, and so make Cream of it, and put it with Sugar into fine Paste, but very thin, and when it is baked put to it Orange-flowers, and perfumed Sugar, and so serve it away.

A Tart of Almond Cream.

Beat a pound of blanch'd Almonds in a Morter, and strain them through a Strainer with Milk, and make it boil in an Earthen Pot, or in a Skillet, keeping it stirring till it be a Cream, then put in Sugar, and Cinnamon whole, when this is done put it into Almond Paste, but Marble it a little with the juice of Raspberries, or red Gooseberries, and Orange-flowers, in serving it away.

A Tart of Franchipane.

Make Cream with Milk and the Yolks of Eggs, and when it is done, put in two Makaroons, Sugar, and a stick of Cinnamon, half a quarter of a pound of Pistaches beaten, a little Salt, green Citron grated, then put this upon a sheet of maffepain, and bake it, and put over it Orange-flowers, and perfumed Sugar, in serving it away.

Another fashion to make a Tart of Franchipane.

Beat a quartern of Pistaches, and half a quartern of green Citron, a little beaten Cinnamon, two Makaroons, two pots of Natural Cream, Sugar, and Orange-flowers, and the Yolks of two Eggs, and make all this like Marmelade, and put it into Puff-paste, or
For the Officers of the Mouth. 563
or other fine Paste, with some Butter, and cover it up with the same Paste, and indore it, and when it is baked put some perfumed Sugar over it in serving it away.

A Tart of Champignons.

Sheet a Paty-pan with fine Paste, and put Champignons into it, with sweet Hearbs minced very small, with melted Lard or Butter, season it with Pepper, Salt, and Nutmeg, cover it up, and bake it with a soft Fire under it, and a pretty quick Fire over it, and when it is baked put in some Gravy of Mutton, if it be made with Lard, and the juice of a Lemon, and so serve it away hot.

Red Gooseberries are red Currants, a pot of Cream is about half a pint.

FINIS.
Rose, Giles
TX 705
R6
Rare Bk Coll
Copy 1