A "STRAW VOTE" FOR REPUBLICAN NOMINEE

Republicans are unable to use the Presidential primary election machinery this year for the reason that neither Colonel Roosevelt nor Justice Hughes will permit his name to go on a primary ballot.

It is generally conceded that the Republican nomination for the Presidency will lie between these two men. The Tribune believes that an opportunity should be provided for its readers to express a preference. A test vote is accordingly being taken.

Four years ago this paper and its constituency were strongly anti-Roosevelt. Unforeseen and critical developments since then have reversed the position of The Tribune. We wish to learn if the same change has taken place among our readers.
