

Baron Tanetaro Megata, head of the Japanese mission just sent to the U. S. to study financial and economic conditions. Baron Megata was the first Japanese graduate from Harvard.

Adachi Kinoshita.

"Dese yere tea leaves, honey, done say dat you's gwine on a long journey, but dat she'll be true while you is gone."

Central News.

Queen Alexandra and Admiral Sims photographed the other day when the King and Queen paid a visit to the American Officers' Club in London.

Paul Thompson.

His equipment of steel, leather, glass, cartridge belts and tanks a la flammerwerfer on his back thoroughly disguise this soldier boy on the Flanders front.

Int. Film.

"KAMERADI!" A remarkable picture showing a French mopping up party cleaning out a German trench after the assaulting wave has carried on. These prisoners have come out of their shattered dugouts, hands up, with the German cry of surrender, "Merci, Kamerad!" The only time a German cries "Kamerad," however, is when he has no more bombs, cartridges, nor further chance to use the knife or bayonet.

Fr. O.G. Pict. Press.

Two unusual aeroplane views from a British seaplane attacking over Beyrout Harbor. In the above picture a bomb has made a fair hit on a wharf, warehouse and railroad siding. Below—The bomb has missed its target and fallen in the water.

Press Ill.

King George (third from the left) inspects a new British division at its training camp in England, preparatory to its departure for France.

Crucod & Underwood.

