

The Very Best Christmas Ever

The committee of one in charge of nearly everything.

Home again—actually home, not even on the transport any longer, but on one of the dear old ferryboats. No, there never was such a Christmas!
Western Newspaper Union.

Christmas wouldn't have been half so jolly if daddy hadn't been there to marvel over the bounty of Santa Claus.
Press Illustrating Service.

Bringing in a whole young forest, on the very excellent principle that it's better to have plenty at a time when the lid of rejoicing is so emphatically off.
Western Newspaper Union.

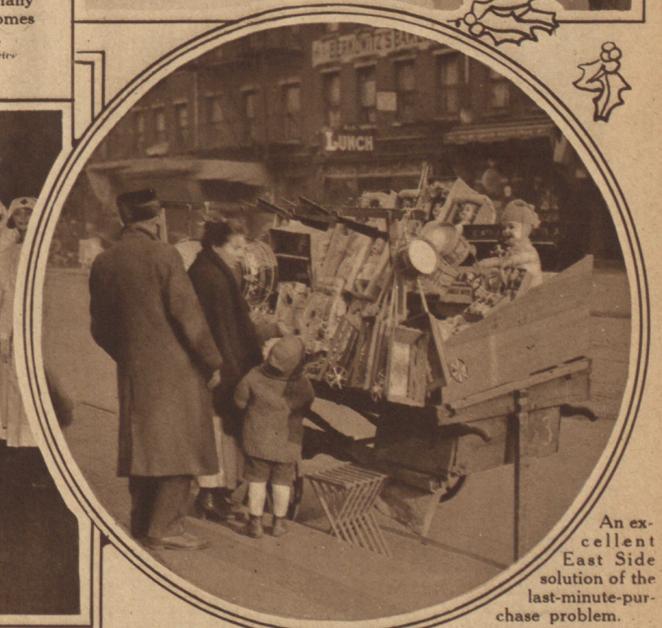

Here is a smile that tells the whole story—the story of victory, with a home-again Christmas for climax.
Tribune Graphic Service.

A turkey that is a turkey—and all a fellow can eat. No matter how many times your plate comes back—it's Christmas.
Tribune Graphic Service.

A glimpse of the holiday Red Cross parade on Fifth Avenue, which turned out to be the most stupendous street carnival ever staged in New York.
Underwood & Underwood.

An excellent East Side solution of the last-minute-purchase problem.
