

Above—General O'Ryan, commander of New York's Own, with Mrs. O'Ryan and their charming family of one stalwart son and three pretty daughters—Janet, Helen Holmes and Dorothy.

Above—Former Supreme Court Justice Goff, Grand Marshal and leader of the Irish freedom movement in New York, riding at the head of the St. Patrick's day parade.

Passing St. Patrick's Cathedral. Thirty-five thousand Wearers of the Green marched up Fifth Avenue last Monday in the great parade in honor of Ireland's patron saint—really a spectacular demonstration for the freedom of the Emerald Isle. Before the cheering thousands that filled the sidewalks and reviewing stands passed a brilliant pageant of green banners, pennants and parasols, borne by enthusiastic sons and daughters of Old Erin, while high overhead waved thousands of "Stars and Stripes" and the new orange, white and green flag of the "Republic of Ireland."

The radio telephone apparatus worn by an aeroplane pilot in the recent successful experiments with this wonderful voice-transmitting wireless.

Above—A group of wounded heroes from the "Old 69th" cheering their comrades marching in the St. Patrick's Day parade. Don't make them stand when the 27th Division goes by on Tuesday next!

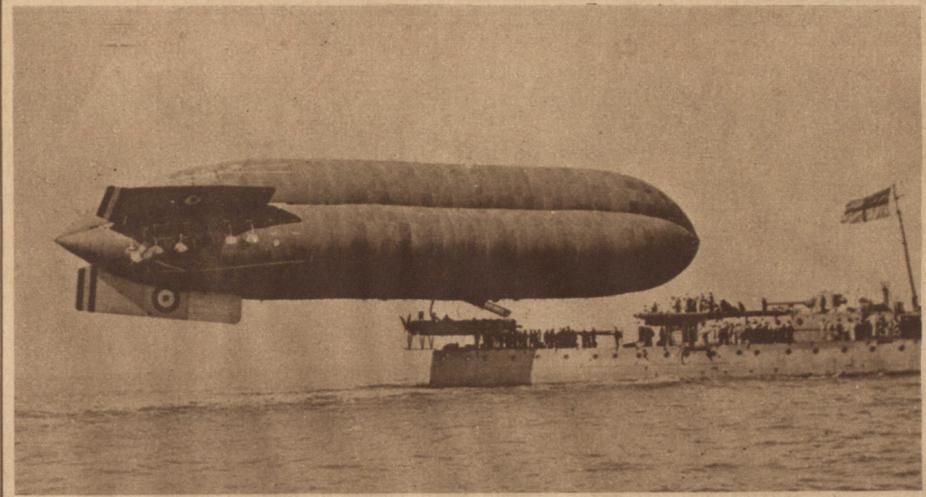

Left—The newest form of unrest penetrating ancient China—all that is left of a Standard Oil office in Li-Ling after a demonstration by Bolsheviks, who in this case were soldiers in the regular Chinese army.

Mrs. L. O. Duval, French bride of Lieutenant Duval, U. S. A., who was captured by the Germans and imprisoned for thirty months. When the Americans captured the town of Noyen Lieutenant Duval rescued her. Mrs. Duval arrived here last week.

Left—A bust of "Princess Pat"—a gift of the bride to the bridegroom. By her marriage the Princess renounces her royal title.

Above—A recently released photograph of a British dirigible which was landed and launched upon the deck of a battleship—a manoeuvre which England used with remarkable success during the war.

Right—John Mallory, civil war color bearer who bore the flag at the battle of Beverly Ford, carried Ireland's new flag of freedom in last Monday's demonstration.

Left—With Major Charles Appleton as spokesman, New York's colored drafted men, the "Buffalos" returned to the Union League the colors presented to them by the club and which they had carried in triumph through the Vosges and Argonne battles. Charles E. Hughes accepted the banners on behalf of the League.

Above—The wedding of Princess Patricia, cousin of the King, and Commander Alexander Ramsay. Perfect weather permitted the wedding party to leave Westminster Abbey in open carriages, to the satisfaction of the thousands who had hoped for a glimpse of England's favorite princess.

Martha Washington, of the White House flock with her brother George on February 22 last, liquid refreshment from a bottle on the President's table. The Capital City's bone-dry law right at hand.
