

Miss Adelaide Ambrose, called the most beautiful and talented girl in Kansas, wearing the most expensive waist in the world—a blouse of rare old rose point lace valued at $3,500. The lace came from Belgium and is valued at $1,000 a yard. International

To the best of our knowledge this is the first photo to be published of an airplane flying underneath Brooklyn Bridge. This remarkable and hazardous feat was accomplished one day last week by one of the army's giant Caproni planes from Mineola. Treacherous air currents and the fact that the Caproni is not designed to land on water made this thrilling stunt daring in the extreme. International

A new studio portrait of Miss Julia Davis, the pretty young daughter of our Ambassador to England, Mr. J. W. Davis. Miss Davis, who is exceedingly popular in young society circles, resides with her father in London. W. N. U.

France's "Ace of Aces," the daring pilot Fonck, who probably wears more decorations than any other airman in the world, goes in for politics and is Republican candidate from the Vosges. Underwood

A veteran British tar assists a Basuto-land chieftain (a delegation of them have been visiting England) out of the hold of the former German merchant submarine Deutschland, anchored in the Thames. International

Edward Bok, for thirty years editor of the Ladies' Home Journal, who recently retired to spend, as he says, "the rest of his days in play and in serving others than himself." Ledger Photo

Suffer from insomnia? Then try this invention of Miss Alice O. Darling, of Tilton, N. H.—a mattress that is said to be positively conducive to sound sleep. According to the inventor the sleeping position made possible by this three sectioned mattress relieves the blood pressure at the base of the brain. Aw, you try it first. Gilliams Service

First American to enter Fiume after d'Annunzio, Miss M. E. Clemens (a relative of Mark Twain), special representative of the National Catholic War Council. Underwood

Right—A photograph just received from Germany. The former Kaiser's favorite racing yacht Meteor in drydock at Kiel being overhauled before delivery to an American sportsman, who recently purchased it at auction and who intends bringing it to this country. Keystone View Co.

The latest railroad innovation—the Seaboard Air Line's new giant oil-burning locomotive. By converting a number of its coal-burning locomotives to oil burners, which will probably revolutionize the operation of trains here in the East, at least so far as the use of fuel is concerned, the Seaboard expects to save a million dollars annually on its coal bill. Note the oil tank tender. Underwood
