

turning on more sailors shall be permitted to come on shore. It is generally thought that the English boats, except the country, will be stopped in the straits. The British boats, on the other hand, mark war, at the Boca Tira, amount to 1000 men. A few days ago it was said that the British boats were to be sent to the Boca Tira.

CANTON, March 6, 1867.
We are every day awaiting of a rupture between the English and Chinese, in consequence of the death of a Chinese man, from the following cause: A club, by an English sailor.

The Chinese Consul in London has written to the Chinese Consul in the Straits, and the English have been being very much annoyed by the Chinese, who give the blow, in consequence of the death of a Chinese man, from the following cause: A club, by an English sailor.

I understand the English have no objection to giving up a man, provided they could hold his property, and surely they cannot be blamed, for not doing so. The Chinese Consul in London has written to the Chinese Consul in the Straits, and the English have been being very much annoyed by the Chinese, who give the blow, in consequence of the death of a Chinese man, from the following cause: A club, by an English sailor.

Review of a letter from an American Captain, to a gentleman in this city.

CANTON, March 6, 1867.
There has been a very flagrant breach taken place here, a few days ago, among the English and Chinese. The Chinese Consul in London has written to the Chinese Consul in the Straits, and the English have been being very much annoyed by the Chinese, who give the blow, in consequence of the death of a Chinese man, from the following cause: A club, by an English sailor.

LONDON, Mar 26.
The Intelligence of the Barbary States having declined to grant an armistice, is reported in the Foreign Gazette, and the Government have consequently been obliged to suspend the armistice. It is not likely that the Regency of Algiers will be more compliant to the English.

The above letter was received by the Hon. Wm. Forster, Secretary of State, in the presence of a public commission, because the Day had insisted that the British Consul would have precedence on the occasion. He adds, that the Algerines and Tunisians were so angry, and further that the Day of Algiers was about to turn all his efforts to the advantage of the Porte. In consequence of the friendly disposition of this country, the British Consul would have precedence on the occasion.

The following is an extract of a letter from a gentleman settled in that country, dated the 21st of March.

There is every appearance of war between the Algerines and Tunisians, and the Government have consequently been obliged to suspend the armistice. It is not likely that the Regency of Algiers will be more compliant to the English.

The following reports, in South America, are about to be made: The Algerines and Tunisians were so angry, and further that the Day of Algiers was about to turn all his efforts to the advantage of the Porte.

The following reports, in South America, are about to be made: The Algerines and Tunisians were so angry, and further that the Day of Algiers was about to turn all his efforts to the advantage of the Porte.

The following reports, in South America, are about to be made: The Algerines and Tunisians were so angry, and further that the Day of Algiers was about to turn all his efforts to the advantage of the Porte.

the Bombay government and the which the natives has already must usually expressed no anxiety to be distinguished from the British. The insignificant numbers of disaffection in the country, did not seem to call for public opinion.

It is a fact, but little known in the middle and eastern states, that a very large portion of the population of the western country is happily adapted to the culture of RICE. As the soil is fertile, and the climate grows in flourishing food to man, it is highly important that its cultivation should be encouraged.

A short time after the revolution, we were visited by a gentleman, Mr. Nathaniel Cutting, now in the city of New York. He had just returned from the coast of Africa, who told us of his services in the execution of a very important and interesting project.

As a proof of the public disposition of the respective armies, say the foreign journals, are a proof of it. At present only of each other's fail, have agreed to abstain from all hostilities for some time.

Private letters from the Lower Elbe mention, that advice had been received from the American Consul, in consequence of the President's proclamation to the States, which they will surely find it a very difficult task to do in the U. States.

WASHINGTON CITY, MARCH 21, 1867.

It is said that the Secretary of State has been ordered to suspend the armistice. It is not likely that the Regency of Algiers will be more compliant to the English.

The following reports, in South America, are about to be made: The Algerines and Tunisians were so angry, and further that the Day of Algiers was about to turn all his efforts to the advantage of the Porte.

The following reports, in South America, are about to be made: The Algerines and Tunisians were so angry, and further that the Day of Algiers was about to turn all his efforts to the advantage of the Porte.

The following reports, in South America, are about to be made: The Algerines and Tunisians were so angry, and further that the Day of Algiers was about to turn all his efforts to the advantage of the Porte.

The following reports, in South America, are about to be made: The Algerines and Tunisians were so angry, and further that the Day of Algiers was about to turn all his efforts to the advantage of the Porte.

The following reports, in South America, are about to be made: The Algerines and Tunisians were so angry, and further that the Day of Algiers was about to turn all his efforts to the advantage of the Porte.

the British Consul in London has written to the Chinese Consul in the Straits, and the English have been being very much annoyed by the Chinese, who give the blow, in consequence of the death of a Chinese man, from the following cause: A club, by an English sailor.

the British Consul in London has written to the Chinese Consul in the Straits, and the English have been being very much annoyed by the Chinese, who give the blow, in consequence of the death of a Chinese man, from the following cause: A club, by an English sailor.

the British Consul in London has written to the Chinese Consul in the Straits, and the English have been being very much annoyed by the Chinese, who give the blow, in consequence of the death of a Chinese man, from the following cause: A club, by an English sailor.

the British Consul in London has written to the Chinese Consul in the Straits, and the English have been being very much annoyed by the Chinese, who give the blow, in consequence of the death of a Chinese man, from the following cause: A club, by an English sailor.

the British Consul in London has written to the Chinese Consul in the Straits, and the English have been being very much annoyed by the Chinese, who give the blow, in consequence of the death of a Chinese man, from the following cause: A club, by an English sailor.

the British Consul in London has written to the Chinese Consul in the Straits, and the English have been being very much annoyed by the Chinese, who give the blow, in consequence of the death of a Chinese man, from the following cause: A club, by an English sailor.

the British Consul in London has written to the Chinese Consul in the Straits, and the English have been being very much annoyed by the Chinese, who give the blow, in consequence of the death of a Chinese man, from the following cause: A club, by an English sailor.

the British Consul in London has written to the Chinese Consul in the Straits, and the English have been being very much annoyed by the Chinese, who give the blow, in consequence of the death of a Chinese man, from the following cause: A club, by an English sailor.

the British Consul in London has written to the Chinese Consul in the Straits, and the English have been being very much annoyed by the Chinese, who give the blow, in consequence of the death of a Chinese man, from the following cause: A club, by an English sailor.

the British Consul in London has written to the Chinese Consul in the Straits, and the English have been being very much annoyed by the Chinese, who give the blow, in consequence of the death of a Chinese man, from the following cause: A club, by an English sailor.

the British Consul in London has written to the Chinese Consul in the Straits, and the English have been being very much annoyed by the Chinese, who give the blow, in consequence of the death of a Chinese man, from the following cause: A club, by an English sailor.

the British Consul in London has written to the Chinese Consul in the Straits, and the English have been being very much annoyed by the Chinese, who give the blow, in consequence of the death of a Chinese man, from the following cause: A club, by an English sailor.

the British Consul in London has written to the Chinese Consul in the Straits, and the English have been being very much annoyed by the Chinese, who give the blow, in consequence of the death of a Chinese man, from the following cause: A club, by an English sailor.

the British Consul in London has written to the Chinese Consul in the Straits, and the English have been being very much annoyed by the Chinese, who give the blow, in consequence of the death of a Chinese man, from the following cause: A club, by an English sailor.

the British Consul in London has written to the Chinese Consul in the Straits, and the English have been being very much annoyed by the Chinese, who give the blow, in consequence of the death of a Chinese man, from the following cause: A club, by an English sailor.

the British Consul in London has written to the Chinese Consul in the Straits, and the English have been being very much annoyed by the Chinese, who give the blow, in consequence of the death of a Chinese man, from the following cause: A club, by an English sailor.

the British Consul in London has written to the Chinese Consul in the Straits, and the English have been being very much annoyed by the Chinese, who give the blow, in consequence of the death of a Chinese man, from the following cause: A club, by an English sailor.

the British Consul in London has written to the Chinese Consul in the Straits, and the English have been being very much annoyed by the Chinese, who give the blow, in consequence of the death of a Chinese man, from the following cause: A club, by an English sailor.

the British Consul in London has written to the Chinese Consul in the Straits, and the English have been being very much annoyed by the Chinese, who give the blow, in consequence of the death of a Chinese man, from the following cause: A club, by an English sailor.

the British Consul in London has written to the Chinese Consul in the Straits, and the English have been being very much annoyed by the Chinese, who give the blow, in consequence of the death of a Chinese man, from the following cause: A club, by an English sailor.

the British Consul in London has written to the Chinese Consul in the Straits, and the English have been being very much annoyed by the Chinese, who give the blow, in consequence of the death of a Chinese man, from the following cause: A club, by an English sailor.

the British Consul in London has written to the Chinese Consul in the Straits, and the English have been being very much annoyed by the Chinese, who give the blow, in consequence of the death of a Chinese man, from the following cause: A club, by an English sailor.

the British Consul in London has written to the Chinese Consul in the Straits, and the English have been being very much annoyed by the Chinese, who give the blow, in consequence of the death of a Chinese man, from the following cause: A club, by an English sailor.

the British Consul in London has written to the Chinese Consul in the Straits, and the English have been being very much annoyed by the Chinese, who give the blow, in consequence of the death of a Chinese man, from the following cause: A club, by an English sailor.

the British Consul in London has written to the Chinese Consul in the Straits, and the English have been being very much annoyed by the Chinese, who give the blow, in consequence of the death of a Chinese man, from the following cause: A club, by an English sailor.

the British Consul in London has written to the Chinese Consul in the Straits, and the English have been being very much annoyed by the Chinese, who give the blow, in consequence of the death of a Chinese man, from the following cause: A club, by an English sailor.

the British Consul in London has written to the Chinese Consul in the Straits, and the English have been being very much annoyed by the Chinese, who give the blow, in consequence of the death of a Chinese man, from the following cause: A club, by an English sailor.

the British Consul in London has written to the Chinese Consul in the Straits, and the English have been being very much annoyed by the Chinese, who give the blow, in consequence of the death of a Chinese man, from the following cause: A club, by an English sailor.

the British Consul in London has written to the Chinese Consul in the Straits, and the English have been being very much annoyed by the Chinese, who give the blow, in consequence of the death of a Chinese man, from the following cause: A club, by an English sailor.

the British Consul in London has written to the Chinese Consul in the Straits, and the English have been being very much annoyed by the Chinese, who give the blow, in consequence of the death of a Chinese man, from the following cause: A club, by an English sailor.

the British Consul in London has written to the Chinese Consul in the Straits, and the English have been being very much annoyed by the Chinese, who give the blow, in consequence of the death of a Chinese man, from the following cause: A club, by an English sailor.

the British Consul in London has written to the Chinese Consul in the Straits, and the English have been being very much annoyed by the Chinese, who give the blow, in consequence of the death of a Chinese man, from the following cause: A club, by an English sailor.

the British Consul in London has written to the Chinese Consul in the Straits, and the English have been being very much annoyed by the Chinese, who give the blow, in consequence of the death of a Chinese man, from the following cause: A club, by an English sailor.

the British Consul in London has written to the Chinese Consul in the Straits, and the English have been being very much annoyed by the Chinese, who give the blow, in consequence of the death of a Chinese man, from the following cause: A club, by an English sailor.

the British Consul in London has written to the Chinese Consul in the Straits, and the English have been being very much annoyed by the Chinese, who give the blow, in consequence of the death of a Chinese man, from the following cause: A club, by an English sailor.

the British Consul in London has written to the Chinese Consul in the Straits, and the English have been being very much annoyed by the Chinese, who give the blow, in consequence of the death of a Chinese man, from the following cause: A club, by an English sailor.

the British Consul in London has written to the Chinese Consul in the Straits, and the English have been being very much annoyed by the Chinese, who give the blow, in consequence of the death of a Chinese man, from the following cause: A club, by an English sailor.