

A SHAM BATTLE AT CAMP DIX

ADVANCED TRAINING FOR OFFICERS AND MEN

Photographs © Western Newspaper Union

A close-up. Setting off the smoke bombs.

Smoke pots used for screening. Photo shows the smoke bombs set off to provide a screen against the enemy's attack, and behind which the men can prepare themselves for a charge. The bombs are fired for an hour or more until the screen is sufficiently thick.

Coming over the top.

Photo shows close-up of trench mortar striking the enemy's lines.

Barrage set off on No Man's Land at Camp Dix. In the distance men can be seen approaching the enemy's trenches.

Soldiers emerging from the shell craters, which they have used as defences, awaiting the order to charge.