At Holbeach, in Lincolnshire, one of the Crown colonies for discharged soldiers, is well under way. After a term of probation, each man who has passed as proficient in farming is allowed ten acres and a cottage. These pictures were taken on the training or school farm: (1) A one-armed man ploughing. In the background is one of the official cottages. (2) Bringing in horses from work on the farm; the horses also are "discharged from active service." (3) Ploughing the land scientifically for the planting of flax. (4) Feeding the pigs.
