

Ancient tapestries cover the walls of the dining room for convalescent soldiers.

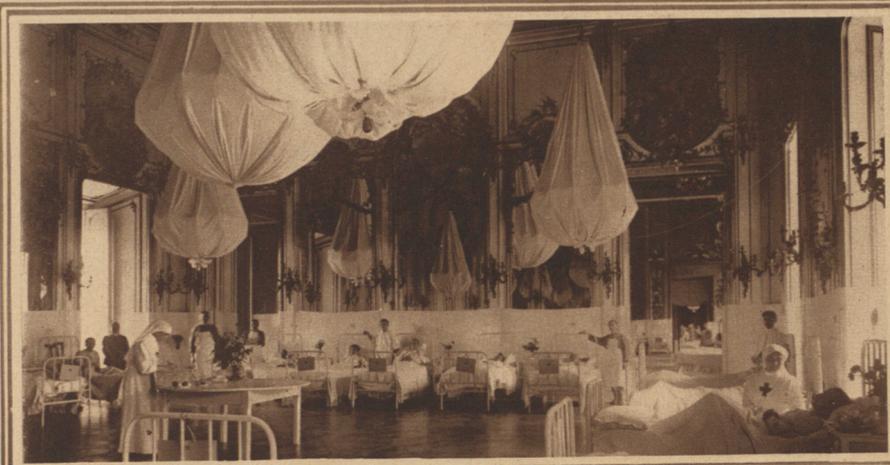

ITALY'S ROYAL HOSPITAL

The King's palace, on the Quirinal at Rome, has been given over to wounded soldiers.

© Western Newspaper Union.

At right—The Quirinal courtyard. The Red Cross painted on the ground is to aid the Austrian bombers in locating the hospital.

A ward in the Grand Ballroom.

Who couldn't recuperate here?

"My, what a nice, large bathroom!"

To lie in bed and look up forty feet to the ceiling of a king's palace is something worth writing home about.