

Headed toward Austria again. Italian supplies on one of the war-made roads in the Alps.

Radiators to mend.

Soon to be good as new.

Salvaging
Shell-Shocked
Autos

Warm work, and apparently a warm day. (What wouldn't a boy give for that huge alarm rattle near his foot?)

The first woman traffic cop. She is Mrs. Leola N. King, wife of a captain in the U. S. Medical Corps, and regulates a busy corner in Washington. Notice her six-shooter. On her first day she stopped traffic completely, but Washington is used to her now.

Wounded cars awaiting the auto surgeon's care.

Still going to France. A detachment leaving camp for the distant front.
